...DON, Oct. 23.—Andrew Bonar Law today, in the ...al phrase of the court circular, "kissed hands upon his ... as Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treas... thus becomes England's first Canadian-born Premier.

Today was devoted to the formalities necessary in a monarchical country to a change in the government. The King, in the morning, gave an audience and took formal leave of the outgoing Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd George. Then came the Unionist meeting in the afternoon, when Mr. Bonar Law was unanimously elected leader of the party. This was followed by an audience at Buckingham Palace, when Mr. Bonar Law, at the King's invitation, undertook to form a new administration.

The King will hold a privy council probably Wednesday, if the Prime Minister has by then completed his Ministry, for the swearing in of the new ministers. The King will, on the advice of the Prime Minister, proclaim the dissolution of Parliament Thursday, and, according to present arrangements, elections will be held November 15.

Mr. Bonar Law is understood to have his Cabinet list almost completed and it is expected the composition of the Ministry will be announced tomorrow. It is the almost universal opinion that he succeeds to a most difficult and onerous task and many misgivings are heard as to whether his health will stand the inevitable strain, but he has made it quite clear that if he finds his health unequal to the task he shall be allowed quietly to step aside.

The situation is unique in the annals of British election politics, inasmuch as only three weeks before the election date none of the leaders has yet announced his policy, each side appearing to be waiting on the other. Mr. Lloyd George's opponents are making merry with the suggestion that the sword he announced himself as brandishing when he left London Sunday must have been lost somewhere on the way to Leeds.

The only question before the electorate is whether they wish to be governed by a coalition. But that cannot properly be described as an election plank because, except in the event of a tremendous landslide in favor of one particular party, it is almost certain that no party will be returned strong enough to form a government without the co-operation of some other party.

Mr. Bonar Law confirms that Ireland is an agreed question and he further intimated clearly and frankly at the Unionist meeting today that tariff reform or protection would not form an item of his policy. And since Mr. Lloyd George has announced himself as a free trader this question cannot come to the front, as both the Liberal and Labor parties are in favor of free trade. The Prime Minister promises to define his policy in his coming speech at Glasgow but, judging from his remarks today, it will not be of an eventful character.

Previous to the breakdown of his health, which forced him temporarily to retire from politics, Mr. Bonar Law was a very close friend of Mr. Lloyd George and was identified with the entire coalition policy; it is therefore prac-

After an elaboration of Mr. Bonar Law's merits as a statesman, Lord Curzon described as nonsense the suggestion made at the Carlton Club that the Unionists intended to embark on a policy of reaction and insisted that the 100 men who at the Carlton Club meeting voted against the coalition were no more reactionaries than the ninety who voted in the opposite sense. Neither, he added, were they, as described by Mr. Lloyd

Jury Brings Verdict for Peggy Beal

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Oct. 23. A jury in criminal court here acquitted Marie F. (Peggy) Beal tonight of the murder of Frank P. Anderson here last summer. The jury deliberated two hours.

The woman, formerly a nurse of Springfield, Ill., went on trial in court here today on a charge of killing Anderson, her "perfect lover," in a Kansas City hotel room June 3.

"I am my sister's keeper," Mrs. Beal fought her case on this revision of the biblical admonition. She charged that she was induced to come to Kansas City on Anderson's promise of marriage and that she killed him only after she found he didn't intend to fulfill the promise.

Anderson confessed to her, Mrs. Beal states, that he was married, that he had no intention of obtaining a divorce and that "love to him was but a game of hearts."

LOVE A GAME

"I thought of those poor girls who were to suffer similar fates, and so I killed him," Mrs. Beal explained.

After Mrs. Beal shot and killed Anderson she dangerously wounded herself with the same revolver. She is fully recovered.

As Judge Ralph S. Latshaw read the verdict, Mrs. Beal leaped to her feet, evincing animation for the first time during the trial. She turned to the jurymen, thanking them.

"Now I am going to stay in Kansas City," she exclaimed, "and make good. I'm going to send for my little boys in Terre Haute and make them a good home."

SHOT IN BED

Mrs. Beal, 32 years old, a divorcee, shot Anderson as he lay on a bed in the room which they occupied together. She then turned the revolver upon herself, sending a bullet into her breast. Anderson was the manager of a department in a local department store. His wife, an invalid, lived in Camden, N. J. When questioned concerning the fatal shooting which occurred June 3 in a hotel room where Mrs. Beal asserted Anderson had lured her by promise of marriage, though he was already married, Mrs. Beal wept with her face in her hands.

"I came here from Springfield, Ill., to marry Warren," she testified. "He told me that he could not marry me so I shot him."

BLACKMAIL CHARGES IN DEATH CASE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—The prosecution of Henry Wilkens, garage manager, on a charge of wife-murder, was marked by a number of attempts by William F. Herron, an attorney, and one attempt by Robert Castor, a prosecution witness, to obtain $5000 from him on the assertion that they could help to clear him, Wilkins testified today in his own behalf. Wilkins said he resisted all of these attempts.

Herron was insistent, Wilkens testified, and offered to reduce his demand from $5000 to $1000. Both Herron and Castor mentioned that a "woman was mixed up in the case, who could be dealt with if the money was paid over," Wilkens said.

Herron, according to Wilkens, said that he had information that the confession of Arthur Castor, brother of Robert, on which the charge was based, was a fabrication. Arthur Castor, purported accomplice of Wilkens in the killing of Mrs. Wilkens, was a prosecution witness.

All phases of the prosecution would be cleared up, Herron said, according to Wilkens, in consideration of the payment of the money demanded. Wilkens said that he told Herron that he had nothing to fear from any prosecution, as he was innocent, and that the payment of the money was unnecessary. Counsel for Wilkens referred to the asserted attempts of Herron and Robert Castor as "blackmail."

KILLS MAN AND SELF AS ACT OF MERCY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ROCKFORD (Ill.) Oct. 23.—Leaving a note stating he had committed the crime as "an act of mercy," Thomas Cornwell, aged 67, of Genoa, beat and strangled to death his wife's uncle, Curtis Smith, aged 69, and then killed himself with poison.

Cornwell killed Smith with the pendulum of a cuckoo clock. The bodies were found in Cornwell's bedroom by his son, Edwin, 14.

"I am doing this as an act of mercy, as neither of us is of any use," the note said. Worry over business affairs made Cornwell despondent, it is said.

PACIFISTS CRITICISED BY WEEKS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Fear that America is "drifting back to its short-sighted, careless and happy-go-lucky attitude of the early days of the European war toward the vitally important matter of preparedness" was expressed by Secretary of War Weeks in an address tonight before the New York post of the Army Ordnance Association.

Maj.-Gen. James G. Harbord, Deputy Chief of Staff, also addressed the association, launching an attack on pacifism.

"War for us seems fairly remote at this moment," he said. "Last month the commanding general of the District of Washington put on a little demonstration of an infantry attack. It was a good show, witnessed by probably 20,000 people. At its close the general was waited on by two ladies who asked where the next one would be held. They said they belonged to a woman's peace organization and he was making war look so attractive that they wished to put on a rival meeting next time to counteract its effect.

SOLEMN DEMONSTRATION

"In July a solemn demonstration with flaunting banners, music and speeches was held in Washington, in the course of which the President was urged to set aside a 'no more war day' for annual observance. The movement was said to be nation-wide. War was to end. The dove of peace was to take on immortality.

"In September the war drums began to throb in the Near East. There was a rush of troops and warships to the crossroads of the world, the city of the Golden Horn. Britain was at the breach. The League of Nations was scuttled for the cyclone cellar. The cynical Old World diplomats smiled and began to pin on their decorations preparatory to taking seats at the council table. Mustapha Kemal, whom I know to be a decent young man trying to do for his country what you and I would do for ours, in a similar situation, was represented as sharpening a scimitar on the tomb of Mahomet, to slash the throats of the infidel. The faithful had once more raised the crescent against the cross.

"Thus the headliners got in their deadly work and the White House was overwhelmed with de-

Late News

Fewer Revels for Berkeley Students

BERKELEY, Cal., Oct. 23.—No more late dances; no more late hours; no more flapperism for the student body of the University of California. Such was the edict issued today by the Students' Welfare Council.

F. G. Taylor, chairman of the council, said that body now was the only authority that could enforce rules affecting social affairs and that today's ruling was made in the interest of better scholarship.

The new rules for campus conduct provide:

All student dances on or off the campus must end at 8:30 p.m. except on Friday and Saturday nights, or nights before holidays, the night of the senior assembly and after the freshman, pajamarino and ax rallies. Campus dances must be discontinued at 11 o'clock Friday night and at midnight on Saturday night.

All women students must be home by 2 a.m.

Women must not entertain men callers after 10 p.m., smoke cigarettes, overuse the lip stick or "indulge in other flapperisms."

Questions Fire Suspect

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Fire Commissioner Drennan announced late today that Albert F. Molnar, who was arrested in Bayonne, N.J., where he was found near a Catholic church with a candle in his hand, had proved to the satisfaction of the fire department that he had nothing to do with the incendiary blaze which swept an East side tenement Sunday morning causing th death of sixteen persons. The Bayonne police had quoted Molnar as admitting that he was a member of a "fire bug" band and that the tenement fire had been set on order of the chief, "Big Nose Ralph." He later repudiated this story. Molnar was sent to Bellevue Hospital for observation after he had been questioned. The list of fatalities was brought to sixteen with the death tonight of Mrs. Rose Ingelese, 55 years old.

PETROLEUM MELON CUT BY DOHENY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Declaration of a stock dividend of 25 per cent by the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company, payable in class B stock on the common and class B stocks of the company; an increase from $1.50 to $2 in the quarterly dividend on both common stocks, including that issued as a stock dividend, and a plan for an exchange of Mexican Petroleum common and preferred stock, 75 per cent of which is owned by the Pan-American company, for Pan-American B stock, were announced tonight by Edward L. Doheny, head of both companies.

The plan was approved today at a meeting of directors of the Pan-American company.

Under the plan of exchange there will be issued two and one-half shares of class B Pan-American stock for each share of the common stock of Mexican Petroleum, and one and one-tenth shares of Class B Pan-American for each Mexican Petroleum preferred stock.

DIVIDEND IS DOUBLED

Mexican Petroleum common stockholders are advised by Mr. Doheny that the exchange will net them an increased dividend earning of $13 a share annually over the present $12 dividend on that stock. In illustration of this he pointed out that the present authorized dividend of Pan-American stock is $8 a share, that two and one-half shares at $8 per annum equals $20 per annum, and that the stock dividend of 25 per cent on two and one-half shares is 5-8 of a share, the dividend on which, at the rate of $8 per annum is $5, making a total return of $25. The exchange of Mexican Petroleum preferred stock for Pan-American B will result in an increase of $3 per annum in dividends, provided the present rate is maintained.

Under the original offer of the directors of the Pan-American company, holders of Mexican Petroleum common stock were to receive two shares of nonvoting Pan-American B for each one of Mexican Petroleum common. This offer was originally made in 1919, and at the close of 1920 the company stated that more than 75 per cent of the Mexican Petroleum stock had been exchanged.

The Mexican Petroleum Company had outstanding $12,000,000

ATTENDANT FIRES WITH DEADLY AIM AT FLEEING TRIO

Blazing away at three armed bandits as they were speeding through an alley near Ninth street and Grand avenue with the proceeds of a bold hold-up job, Edward Larke, parking-station attendant, last night shot and killed one of the men, who was later identified by papers in his possession as James A. Loftus, 25 years old, of Steubenville, O.

Fifteen minutes before the shooting the bandits had held up H. W. Fitze, 737 South Hill street, at Ninth street and Union avenue. They took a diamond-studded watch and $25 in cash. Mr. Fitze went direct to Central police station to report the case. The bandits drove a touring car, believed to have been stolen, to the Wilkins and Inda parking station, 933 South Grand avenue.

According to Mr. Larke, night attendant, they leveled revolvers at him and forced him to surrender $30. As the machine turned into an alley leading from the parking station, the night man opened fire with a .38-caliber revolver. Two of the bandits returned the shots, a dozen bullets being exchanged in the duel.

PURSUES GANG

Larke ran after the car, still firing, until it reached Tenth street and speeded west. Then he returned to the alley and found the body of one of the trio sprawled on the pavement. A bullet through the head had caused instant death.

In the dead man's pockets were found letter bearing the name James A. Loftus, and his father's name, John L. Loftus, Steubenville, O. He also had a passport for Australia. Detectives Wilde, Dryden and Wells began a search for the companions of the slain man.

The watches of Larke and Fitze, two victims of the hold-up man killed by Larke, were found when attendants searched his body at the Receiving Hospital. Fitze positively identified the body as that of the man who stepped from the car at Ninth and Union avenue, demanding his money at the point of a gun. Fitze's knife and two cheaper watches and a locket were discovered in the clothes. Only $6.40 was found on the body, the comrades of the man presumably having taken all the money of victims.

Positive identification of the man as James A. Loftus, born in Steubenville, O., in November, 1897, was made upon comparison of the face with the photograph on the passport found in his breast pocket. The passport was made out to him when his address was the Belleview Apartments, Kenmore avenue, Chicago. John L. Loftus, Sixth and Logan streets, Steubenville, O., given on the passport as the father, was notified by police officials.

That Loftus was a habitue of poolrooms in the downtown section of the city was the belief of police officers, wh claim to have seen him hanging abut afternoons, apparently never working. He was known to his intimates as "Curly."

OTHER CRMIES

Further operations of the dead man were disclosed by the identification of Ora D. Clark, in charge of the oil station of G. G. Bailey, 846 South Figueroa street. Clark viewed the body last night and declared Loftus was the bandit who robbed him of $60 Sunday night at his place of business. According to Clark, Loftus held him up, tied him to a chair and relieved him of all the cash in the establishment.

The body of Loftus was removed to the Washington Undertaking establishment last night.

RIDDLE OF DEATHS IN NEW HAND

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW BRUNSWICK (N. J.) Oct. 23.—Wilbur A. Mott, who was today deputized as special Attorney General for the State of New Jersey, will arrive tomorrow morning in Somerville to take charge of the investigation of the Hall-Mills murder mystery.

Ellis Parker, famous Burlington county detective, who caused the arrests of the widows of the victims in the Giberson and Brunen murder cases, will accompany Mott, as will also James A. Mason, Essex county detective, who has been assigned to work with the assistant Attorney-General as chief investigator.

Though the investigation has been taken out of the hands of Prosecutors Beekman and Stricker of Somerset and Middlesex counties, respectively, their services will not be entirely dispensed with by the new chief of the investigation, who will confer with the two local prosecutors as soon as he arrives tomorrow.

ACTION BY HIGH COURT

Mott has served as prosecutor and assistant prosecutor of Essex county for eighteen years. Before that he was a police judge in Newark. He is a Republican, which will give the investigation a different political complexion than that supplied by Prosecutors Beekman and Stricker, both Democrats.

Mott was assigned to the case by Atty.-Gen. Thomas F. McCran, who acted on the request of Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker, after the chief justice had been asked by Prosecutors Beekman and Stricker for the aid of the Attorney-General.

Mott at his home at Orange, N. J., today said:

"I received a telephone call on Saturday to see Justice Parker in Morristown. There I met Atty.-Gen. McCran and Prosecutor Beekman. They have followed the developments. I have certain theories and will start work immediately. I will see the press daily and let the public know whatever developments there may be. The press and the public are entitled to know. The criminals in this case must be punished. I have not yet gone over the official record of the investigation thus far, but intend to do so tomorrow when I visit Prosecutor Beekman for that purpose.

FIRST NATIONAL SHAKE-UP

East Hears Richard Rowland May be Elected President; Film World Stirred

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Change and rumors of change were rife in the eastern film world today. The most interesting report was that of an impending shake-up of widespread proportions in Associated First National Pictures, Inc., popularly known as First National, which controls a large proportion of the film theaters.

It was expected at the annual meeting of directors at 6 West Forty-eighth street today that Ricard A. Rowland would be elected president. A movement has been on foot for some time to put him in control. But after the meeting no information could be obtained as to whether the change had been made.

Hitherto First National has been primarily a distributing channel for the product of its members. Hereafter, it is intended to have the parent organization produce for itself, under Rowland's direction, thus bringing it into complete competition with Famous Players-Lasky, Goldwyn and Universal, which make as well as market films. Four producing companies are to be formed.

The object is to develop new screen talent and keep the numerous First National theaters supplied with a steady stream of pictures, thus diminishing the number of films that holders of First National franchises will have to buy in the open market. The proposed new policy is an outgrowth of the recent fairule to merge with Goldwyn.

Rowland is a comparatively recent acquisition by First National. He went to that organization from Metro, which he founded. He resigned from the presidency of Metro after Marcus Loew bought control to insure a constant supply of pictures for his theaters.

The members of the board who attended the meeting today were Robert Lieber of Indianapolis, out the Republican rural majorities with which Brewster will arrive at the gates of St. Louis and Kansas City.

REED CALCULATIONS

All these, let it be emphasized, are Reed calculations. They are rejected as the worst kind of political arithmetic by Republican leaders and by the Woodrow Wilson "League of Loyal Democrats." From both of these camps come assurances that the revolt of "decent Democrats" against Reed is of landslide immensity. Together with Missouri women, alleged to be allied against Reed irrespective of party affiliations, the Republicans and Wilsonian Democrats profess to have Reed beaten to a frazzle.

If "Jim" Reed is shipped down Salt River two weeks from tomorrow it cannot be said by historians of this ferocious Missouri campaign that he did not go down fighting. He is battling for his political existence like a bull at bay. Arrayed by a phalanx of enemies such as few organization candidates on any party ever faced, Reed is carrying his cause straight to the people and meeting them face to face every day in many thousands.

HOLD YOUR HORSES

For his purposes the Democratic candidate has resorted to spectacular circus methods. He is using a pair of huge Chautauqua brown tents, seating between 1500 to 2000 people. While Reed and his troupe of fellow-speakers are playing a one-day stand in a town, his other tent is shipped ahead to the next town. Reed's appearances are billed and boomed just as Barnum & Bailey used to do the trick, and, "advance agents" drum up the crowds in the self-same fashion. The freight car carrying the Reed tent and its crew is hauled through the counties on the railroad, embellished with flamboyant signs like any other "greatest show on earth" and commensurate publicity for the $10,000 beauty. Reed always puts on a good show and is playing to "capacity" everywhere. His audiences are seldom less than 2000 in number and they listen attentively, if not enthusiastically, to what the Senate's most caustic and ruthless orator has to say.

LESS VIOLENT

Reed is not so violent in his election campaign as he was during his primary rampage. His references to Woodrow Wilson, in particular, was restrained, and confined for the most part to recalling that on the prohibition and suffrage issues he and the former President for awhile occupied common ground. Reed continues to rant his dislike of Herbert Hoover. He makes no appeal for farmer votes without portraying the war-time food administrator as the architect-in-chief of America's agricultural woes.

It is because thousands of Democrats cannot stomach Reed and because thousands of Republicans are supporting him that makes predictions of the result, according to ordinary standards, difficult to the point of impossibility. Rival leaders are liberal with claims, but privately confess they have little that is tangible upon which to base them. Breckinridge Long, the young Wilson Democrat whom Reed defeated for the nomination by a scant 6000 votes in a total of 276,000, announces that he will, in a spirit of party regularity, "support the ticket." But it is notorious that the word has been passed to stalwart Democrats of the type of David R. Francis and Rolla Wells that no member of the party who venerates its ancient ideals can conscientiously vote for Reed. On the number of them that follows that precept, either by scratching Reed and voting for Brewster, or not voting at all, which will be half a vote for the Republican candidate, depends Reed's fate. There are many indications that a defection of 500 Democratic votes per county is an underestimate. If 1000 Democrats per county desert Reed, and Wilson idolators say they will, then his doom will be sealed, for there are not 114,000 Germans or pro-German Irish on "the Hindenburg line" to plug such a hole in the normal Democratic vote. Even if Reed carries St. Louis city and county, normally Republican by 80,000 or 90,000, with the German vote all-powerful, he could hardly hope to overcome a Democratic defection running into six figures in the State at large.

Yet Reed faced old-time Democratic opposition and the antagonism of the women in the primaries and won. It has been estimated that 10,000 women of St. Louis voted for him in the primaries and only 2000 for Long. When his foes warn him that the women's vote will down him on November 7, they recall how Senator Wadsworth of New York, also opposed by women for his suffrage stand, emerged triumphant two years ago.

AFTER HIS SCALP

The women of Missouri are certainly after Reed's scalp and bent upon establishing that a politician, in this State at least, scorns them at his peril. The Senator is not making the mistake of underestimating their power and is doing his best to bolster up his suffrage fences. The other night in the rural neck of the woods Reed attempted to explain away one of his taunts in the Senate for which, by all the gods of suffrage, the women voters swear he shall never be forgiven. On Sept. 27, 1918, according to their quotation of the Congressional Record, Reed, in the midst of a suffrage argument with Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, said:

"I have some hesitancy about replying to the Senator. The fact is, that his methods of attack are always confusing. When a man comes at you with doubled-up fists and with the glare of battle in his eye, you know what to do. But when you catch a flutter of lace and your nostrils are intoxicated with a delicate perfume, you don't know whether you ought to resort to blows or embraces."

Reed told one of his tent-show crowds that he was lampooning "Jim Ham" and not the woman suffrage worker in the lobbies of Congress, and, to bolster up his explanation, said the passage above quoted contained a reference to "sorrel whiskers." The anti-Reed women, who invented the slogan "rid us of Reed" and who have the State placarded with it, tonight issued a statement saying Reed is trying to establish an alibi. They declare the allusion to "sorrel whiskers" never was made and that Reed stands convicted on the official record of having slurred and slandered the women voters.

BIG GUNS HELP

To counteract the active or passive opposition of Missouri Democratic regulars, the Reed organization (now, of course, the official Democratic campaign machinery of the State) has had the support of Democratic big guns from outside. Senator Robinson of Arkansas; Walsh of Massachusetts; Stanley of Kentucky, and Caraway of Arkansas, have stumped the State for their Missouri colleague, and appealed for his return in order that the Democratic minority in the Senate may not be weakened by the loss of its most reckless fighter. The Republicans have not yet brought many big guns into action on Brewster's behalf, but Vice-President Coolidge is coming and Herbert S. Hadley, former Governor and Progressive leader, will make three speeches between now and election time.

The air grows thick with personalities as the campaign winds to a finish.

BONAR LAW AT BRITAIN'S HELM

Governmental Change is Formally Completed

New Cabinet Will be Sworn in Wednesday

tically impossible that he can in any important measure reverse this policy. Thus, unless Mr. Lloyd George should take a strong turn in his policy, there will be little difference between the policies of the two men.

The contest seems likely to be one of personalities of men rather than measures, so far as these two parties are concerned. The free Liberals and the Laborites have, of course, well-defined policies, and, according to present indications, are resolutely opposed to any co-operation with Mr. Lloyd George, even should the former Premier seek reconciliation with either of them.

The Laborites will resent the fixing of the elections for midweek and will represent the decision as a deliberate intention of the Unionist party to handicap the workingmen voters. The Unionists have two arguments against delaying the elections until the following Saturday—first, that a short time is allowed for passing Irish legislation and second, that the country dislikes a general election so near Christmas, because it interferes with Christmas shopping.

If the elections are held on November 15 Parliament will be able to reassemble on the 20th, but several days will be consumed in swearing in the members, electing the Speaker and debating the reply to the King's speech, which it is expected, will contain only the legislative item, namely the Irish constitution. Thus there will be very few days left to debate the Irish bill and the Prime Minister will probably invite the House to pass it practically without debate as an agreed measure.

SPECULATION RIFE

Much curiosity is displayed as to who will be the new leader of the House of Commons. In former times the Prime Minister was always his own leader of the house and he sometimes combined also another portfolio. But in modern times, owing to the strenuous nature of the administrative work, this has been found practically impossible. It has been well known that Mr. Lloyd George, in recent years gave but little time to Parliament.

Stanley Baldwin generally is conceded to be the best parliamentary figure in the projected new Ministry, and he may be offered this position. Another question arising is, how far the strong "die-hard" element in Mr. Bonar Law's party will prove contented with the tranquil policy outlined today.

Political meetings and conferences of the different parties are now in full swing and all the leaders will be speaking this week. Mr. Lloyd George has found a temporary home in London, having leased for three months the town house of his secretary, Sir Edward Grigg, in Vincent Square, Westminster. He will meet some 200 Liberal members of the Commons and candidates Wednesday to explain his policy and ask for their support.

He is engaged to make several political speeches during the present week, and had today an interview with Winston Spencer Churchill, who is convalescing after an operation for appendicitis.

WARM CONTEST SEEN

It is stated that the Labor party has decided to contest every seat for which the prospective members of Mr. Bonar Law's government are nominated and the Glasgow Labor party has even decided to run a candidate against the Prime Minister himself. There is undiminished curiosity as to whether Reginald McKenna will be invited to join the government, but it is the general opinion that his intention to appear on the Conservative platform is more likely intended to influence the new government in favor of broad dealing with the reparations question.

The report that the British government had asked France to postpone the meeting of the peace conference at Lausanne, is apparently without foundation; there will be no postponement unless unforeseen circumstances arise. The fact that Lord Curzon remains as Foreign Secretary, insures continuity of foreign policy, and as Curzon, rather than Lloyd George was responsible for all the later phases of Great Britain's Near Eastern policy, there seems to be no reason why the change of government should interfere with plans already made.

Forged Names Discovered on Beach Petition

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

VENICE, Oct. 23.—At a meeting of the Venice Board of Trustees tonight at the City Hall to put a petition asking the consolidation of Venice and Santa Monica before the grand jury for investigation, following the discovery that a number of citizens' names were forged to the petition. B. A. Daniels, George Walters, C. A. Short, and other property owners at Venice protested the petition on the grounds of forgery and that the names and dates had been written in by professional circulators. As high as 40 cents a name was paid for signatures on the petition, it was declared.

According to the statement of the City Clerk, 166 forgeries were found in the list, and 470 were questioned.

City Attorney Charles A. Lyon, upon Mayor Gerety's motion, the petition will be submitted to the grand jur with possible prosecution if perjury and forgery are established.

STABILITY, NEW PREMIER'S AIM

Bonar Law, in Speech, Voices Country's Needs

George, representatives of Belgravia and Mayfair.

He was convinced that if Bonar Law was chosen, stability would be his watchword, not sensation—subriety rather than fireworks, in the present troubled state of the world, peace was only recoverable, not by startling or dramatic strokes, not by a policy of haughty isolation, but by compromise, co-operation and good will.

Stanley Baldwin, former president of the Board of Trade, seconded the resolution to elect, which was carried unanimously by a show of hands.

SPICE AND HUMOR

Mr. Bonard Law then rose and thanked the meeting for the warmth of its expressions of confidence and reiterated that so far as his share in what had happened was concerned there was no personal feeling. He paid a warm personal tribute to Mr. Chamberlain and the magnificent courage with which he performed an almost impossible task. Alluding to Mr. Lloyd George, he said:

"I am told he had a sword in his hand. I am grateful to him that he used the sword very gently on me on Saturday. But he is a bonnie fighter and I do not doubt that some shrewd blows will be struck and some very effective strokes will reach my poor body. I am sure there will be no malice behind the sword and that when the fight is over we will both remember the part we played to-gether, rather than when we were fighting each other.

"I will never forget, and will always be ready to assert, that in the greatest crisis of our history he did service for which the nation can never be too grateful. But that gratitude does not mean that he has the right to be Prime Minister for the rest of his natural life.

"One of the safety valves of our constitution is that when a government gets discredited and becomes less popular, it is a real advantage to the nation to make a change, even though there is no improvement in the change, for we get a fresh start, and the people start with new hope."

Referring to Mr. Lloyd George's description of him as "honest to the verge of simplicity," Mr. Bonar Law said: "I always, in the back of my mind, had a suspicion that I am not quite as simple as I seem."

It was a mistake, he said to suppose that simplicity was proof of stupidity, but he could ask no better epitaph than "Honest to the verge of simplicity," adding, "I am a commonplace man and understand what commonplace men think."

The coalition, in the opinion of Mr. Bonar Law, could not exist on any other basis than the union of hearts. He had found at the beginning of the year a deep-rooted determination throughout the constituencies to end it. But for his action there would have been a new party, representing, in the public mind, class interests, private and everything called reaction. There could be nothing worse for the nation; it would be a crime to take such a step for the sake of party interest.

"What I look forward to in the new government," he continued, "is mainly a difference of temperament in the way you deal with situations which arise. What this country needs above everything else at this moment is conservatism, not in a party sense, but in the broad sense of the word. What it needs is tranquillity, freedom from adventures and commitments, both at home and abroad.

CITES POSTWAR CRISIS

"The country—and the world—is left in a very bad position as a result of the war. If it is to recover it will not be by attempts from above; it will be by the work of the people of this country, and my idea of a real method of dealing with it is to leave free play to individual initiative, to avoid attempts at improvement which at another time would be very desirable.

"That applies not only to social schemes which will be advocated by others, but to things I myself would like to see done. What we need is quiet and as little interference as possible, either by legislation or administration.

"One subject of policy on which I must speak, because it comes up for settlement on December 6, is the Irish treaty. I think I am expressing the view of every one, the 'die-hards' and everybody else, when I say that whatever may be our opinion as to the treaty itself or to the events which led up to the treaty, we are determined to give the treaty a fair chance. In saying that, I do not mean it merely in words. At the back of our minds, none of us can fail to realize that we are shut off from all responsibility, but in dealing with the provisional government we ought not to take the attitude that we think it will fail, or hope it will fail.

"So long as those representing Ireland in the matter are honestly trying to carry out the treaty, we will wish them godspeed. We will do everything in our power to make it successful. The people who are attempting to govern Ireland now have the most difficult task probably that ever occurred; but we all know that things are happening in Ireland which absolutely stir our hearts—we cannot be free from responsibility for that."

TO TRAIN DOCTORS FOR MENTAL WORK

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Plans for the establishment by the Veterans' Bureau of postgraduate schools for the training of government physicians in the treatment of mental diseases and tuberculosis were announced today by Director Forbes.

The school, which will be open to Veterans' Bureau physicians specializing in mental diseases of former service men, will be located at the Veterans' Bureau Hospital in Otten, N. C., and the tuberculosis postgraduate school will be part of St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the Insane in Washington.

ker will be called into the case. This does not mean, however, that any of the present investigators will be discarded."

The special assistant Attorney-General added that he would use all the resources of the State Attorney-General's office in his investigation.

Timothy N. Pfeiffer, attorney for Mrs. Hall, upon hearing of the change in the conduct of the investigation, said:

"I believe this appointment will meet with general approval and will result in a thorough, comprehensive, intelligent and coherent investigation.

"Mrs. Hall and the whole family are ready now, as they always have been, to make available to the prosecutor all information within their knowledge concerning this case."

Documents containing evidence of the numerous persons examined during the six weeks since the discovery of the bodies of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, choir singer, will be turned over to Mott.

INDICTMENTS BLOW UP

The indictments expected and subsequent arrests, which were talked of for days, failed to materialize today. Whether this was because of lack of evidence to support an indictment or because of the official act of the Attorney-General in assigning Mott to take charge of the investigation, was not made known.

The Somerset county grand jury met for a brief session this afternoon. Thirty-three indictments were returned, but none concerned the Hall-Mills case, Judge Cleary dismissed the grand jury subject to the call of the court.

It was definitely established that the case never has been presented to the grand jury, except for such general reference as was made to it by Chief Justice Parker when he delivered his charge. Prosecutor Beekman would have gone before it today, it is said, had he not been superseded.

Further than the deputising of the assistant Attorney-General, there were few developments in the case today.

A county detective was sent to Lavalette, N. J., the home of Henry Stevens, brother of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, the minister's widow, again to check up Stevens's statement as to his movements on the night of the murder.

PACIFISTS GET BITTER REBUKE

mands that our country intervene in the Near Eastern situation and if necessary join England in war against Turkey. Resolutions were passed all over the country insisting that the Turks must be checked at any cost. Most of this insistence came from organizations apparently willing to invoke war without giving the diplomats even a chance to settle things. The class which would disband the Army and scuttle the Navy a year ago, now wanted a host and an armada to move against the Turk. Those who condemned even our niggardly appropriations in 1921, now demanded war to a finish regardless of cost. The supporters of the League in 1919 were now howling for blood. In a month the dove of peace had grown spurs."

"I have no patience," declared Secretary Weeks, "with the groups of silly pacifists in this country who are seeking universal peace through undermining, with their insidious propaganda, the ability of their own country to protect itself. What do these people see in the signs of the times to deceive themselves into believing that we can disarm while others arm? In what way has human nature changed since 1914?"

Disclaiming any intention to criticise the administration of Woodrow Wilson, the secretary declared that America had entered the World War "totally unprepared."

PERFECT INDUSTRIAL FORCES

"If we have learned anything from the World War," he continued, "we must develop and perfect the industrial forces adequately to support the fighting forces.

"First, we must counteract indifference, and secondly, forget the idea which is somewhat prevalent that we did a good job in this war and will do even better in another. A systematic plan must be worked out to insure economic preparedness."

Mr. Weeks then outlined briefly the work Assistant Secretary Wainwright is doing in dividing the country into ordnance districts, presided over by district chiefs, charged with the work of maintaining the productiva efficiency of their districts.

Williams, manager of the First National, who has been a moving figure in the development of that company, will leave and form an organization of his own.

A shift is also in process in two important posts of Famous Players-Lasky. At the local offices confirmation was obtained that resignations had been received from Frank Wood, in charge of the supervising directors in the Hollywood plant, and Thomas Buchanan, one of the supervising directors, who came previously from Goldwyn. Buchanan is well known as a playwright, having written "A Woman's Way," "The Cub," "Civilian Clothes" and the forthcoming Oliver Morosco comedy, "The Sporting Thing to Do." His resignation is to take effect immediately while that of Wood is dated November 6. They are to form a producing company of their own, it is reported. One of these posts is likely to be filled by Ralph Block, former associate editor of Goldwyn. He has just gone West after becoming affiliated with Famous Players-Lasky.

Robert G. Vignola, leading director for Cosmopolitan Productions, will sail soon on a "five months' trip around the world, after which, it is reported, he will not return to Cosmopolitan. He directed "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

The Pan-American company has outstanding $50,077,500 in common stock (par $50,) and $20,-099,250 in nonvoting Class B common (par $50.) The surplus as of Sept. 30, 1922, was $42,509,845 and the cash on hand, $26,997,040.

Payment of the stock dividend and the extra cash dividend will begin with the current quarter.

Mexican Petroleum stock touched 234½ today, its high of the year, but closed at 229¾. Its low of the year was 196¾. Pan-American A and B closed today at 91⅝ and 91¾, resectively, as compared with their respective lows for 1922 of 48⅞ and 44.

Mr. Doheny in his notice to stockholders reports that present production is at the rate of 155,000 barrels daily and that the monthly earnings of the Pan-American company to date have averaged $6,900,000 in refutation of recent reports that the "salt water invasion" had caused a serious depreciation in the physical valuation of Mexican light-oil properties.

JOHNSON SANGUINE; PREDICTS VICTORY

RIDICULES IDEA OF SPLIT IN STATE'S REPUBLICAN RANKS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MODESTO, Oct. 23.—Scouting the idea of a split in Republican ranks in California, Senator Johnson at a banquet here tonight declared the party was completely united and predicted overwhelming majorities for all G.O.P. candidates at the November election.

His own candidacy is his least worry, the Senator said, declaring that he would be returned to office by one of the greatest pluralities of his political history. His principal object in making the present tour of the State is to admonish Republicans of the necessity of voting the straight ticket for all candidates.

The Boynton-Richardson controversy over the chairmanship of the State Central Committee was no cause for a split, Johnson declared, and predicted that it would have no effect on the result of the election.

DEAD KAISERIN HONORE

Wilhelm's Bride-to-be Sends Wreath to Grave of Predecessor; Marriage Plans Perfected

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—Former Kaiser Wilhelm's bride-to-be, Princess Hermine of Schonaich-Carolath, today sent a wreath to the grave of the former Kaiserin at Potsdam on the anniversary of the latter's birthday, which was celebrated with great pomp in Nationalist circles throughout Germany.

Her wreath outshone those of the princes and the former Kaiser in beauty, causing a commotion among the Nationalists who made a pilgrimage to the antique temple where the former Empress is buried.

This confirms reports that one of the last wishes which the former Kaiserin expressed to her oldest son, the former Crown Prince, dealt with the possibility of Wilhelm's remarriage. It is stated she expressed a desire that her children do not oppose a remarriage of their father, since she knew how badly he needed the friendship and support of a true wife. For this reason the former Crown Prince offered to be his father's best man, but a recent motorcycle accident may prevent him from undertaking this function. Berlin does not know whether the accident was taken as a welcome excuse.

PREPARES TO START

The future wife of Wilhelm, who is preparing to start for Holland on November 3, will be met on her arrival by the Princess Victoria Louise, one of the former monarch's favorite children. Princess Victoria will accompany her future stepmother to Doorn. The bride's first trunks left Berlin for Doorn today with the bridal gown and other parts of her trousseau. She will wear a lace hat on her wedding day instead of a veil. A description of her gown has not yet been made public.

The wedding party will consist mostly of relatives of the bride who will help her grow accustomed to her new surroundings. The list of the guests is being kept secret, but it is known that Gen. Von Domms, Gen. Von Mueller, Admiral Von Trotha and Prince Stolberg-Wernigerode have "had the honor of being invited by his majesty."

Friends of the former Kaiser are delighted at the news that a new cook will accompany the princess to Doorn, and they claim "it was high time that a real German 'hausfrau' took charge of the kitchen."

PETITION CIRCULATED

A petition demanding that the German government permit the former Kaiser to return and live on one of his farming estates is being circulated among friends of Wilhelm and his bride to be. According to the petition, the forthcoming marriage proves that Wilhelm wants only to be a private citizen and he is not willing to resume political power. Even the Nationalists have no hope for the success of their petition, since Germany is busy thinking about the rate of exchange and its struggle for life.

GERMAN TROOPS ARE MUTINOUS

Morale is Shattered by Red Propaganda

Monarchist Officers Plot Republic's Downfall

Teuton Newspapers Attack Army Leaders

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
BERLIN, Oct. 23.—Serious discontent in the ranks of the German regular army is indicated by reports to Berlin newspapers telling of near mutinies and frequent discharges from the service of soldiers accused of Communist propaganda. While the majority of the enlisted men of the "Reichswehr" include old professional soldiers and promonarchists, and the officers are almost exclusively anti-republican, there appears to be a radical minority capable of lessening the dependability of the army in case of strikes or hunger riots.

Consequently, the higher officers nearly all of whom are "ex-vons" and "von's," are said to be weeding out the Communist and republican soldiers who might be in the way if their superiors should decide to support a possible monarchist "putsch," or use too much lead and steel in suppressing popular demonstrations.

The preponderance of old-time Prussian militarists in the officers' corps was recently bitterly commented upon by Vorwaerts, the central organ of the United Social Democratic party, and the Vossische Zeitung, a Democratic paper, sarcastically pointed out that of the seventh higher officers mentioned in an order on personnel issued by Minister Gessler the last week in September only one was a plain "bourgeois," all the others being "vons."

EX-NOBLES NUMEROUS

Of fourteen generals of division and chiefs of staff, but three are unincumbered with old titles. The Vorwaerts also says that all the important posts in the Ministry of Defense are occupied by "ex-nobles," something which did not obtain even in days when William Hohenzollern was in power.

Considerable belated publicity is being given in the Berlin papers to a case of insubordination that occurred among the garrison of the fortress of Lotzen, East Prussia. It appears that the majority of one of the battalions of infantry stationed here, becoming disgusted with too much drilling, coupled with monarchist propaganda by their officers and failure to receive an increase in allowances long promised them, listened to some Communists in their ranks, assembled in a mass meeting in a forest near the town and concluded to refuse to do duty until the monarchist officers were transferred and their other grievances remedied.

MEN DISARMED

While marching back to the barracks to inform the rest of the garrison of their stand, the men were intercepted by an officer who vainly tried to stop them and then galloped back to get help. Upon the arrival of the mutineers at the barracks, they were reinforced by another company, but some of the more diplomatic officers calmed the men by listening to their demands, thus avoiding bloodshed and inducing them to give up their arms and retire to their quarters. That night about 100 of the near mutineers were arrested, thirty of whom were immediately discharged from the service while the others were sent to the near-by city of Lyck for trial by the civic courts. There the prisoners were subjected to extremely harsh treatment, according to a report printed in Die Rote Fahne.

Several months ago, reports from Berlin said that the regular army was far below its authorized strength of 100,000, and that the officers were anxious to get the ranks filled with "dependable" men.

"FRAME-UP," SAYS HALL OF CHARGE

Master of Liner Senator is Not Arrested When Ship Reaches Portland

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
PORTLAND, Oct. 23.—That no formal charge has been placed against Capt. W. A. Hall, master of the steamer Senator, as a result of charges by Mrs. Melba Ruth Rogers, a woman passenger, that the mariner had assaulted her while aboard his vessel, was the statement of local representatives of the Federal government.

News dispatches from San Francisco late Saturday stated that Capt. Hall would be arrested on a serious charge when the Senator arrived at Portland, but as yet no orders for his arrest have been received by the United States Marshal or agents of the Department of Justice. Later dispatches stated that government officials at San Francisco were merely conducting an investigation.

"A frame-up and a lie," declared Capt. Hall when his vessel arrived here this morning. "The District Attorney at San Francisco threw the matter out of his office."

Capt. Hall comes from a family which has long "gone down to the sea in ships," and has always upheld the noble traditions of a ship captain's calling, it was said.

For the past thirty years the accused officer has sailed in and out of Los Angeles Harbor. His father, Charles Hall, and his father's brother, were noted mariners for thirty years before that.

Capt. Hall is 43 years old and married. With his wife and 15-year-old son he resides in San Francisco.

Notorious Utah Outlaw, Slayer Under Arrest

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]
SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 23.—Local authorities were informed today that a man said to answer the description of Rafael Lopez, notorious Utah outlaw and wanted for the killing of Six men at Bingham nine years ago, is under arrest at Mt. Harris, Colo.

The episodes of Lopez as a bandit gained him nation-wide notoriety. While being hunted for the fatal shooting of a man at Bingham, Utah, he effected his escape from a posse after having slain five of his pursuers.

Utah authorities have telegraphed a minute description of Lopez to Mt. Harris with the request that the man under arrest there be held until definite identification can be made.

Voliva Wants Rude Smokers Horsewhipped

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]
ZION (Ill.) Oct. 24.—Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of the Christian Catholic Church in Zion, in a sermon yesterday advocated that the women of his church horsewhip men who smoke in their presence in Zion. He declared that next Sunday he will start a fight by organizing men, women and children to "drive every tobacco skunk beyond the borders of this city."

Zion has long prohibited smoking by ordinance. Recently Circuit Judge Edwards at Waukegan enjoined enforcement of the anti-smoking ordinance.

The overseer charged that Henry Sayre, son of a physician, had blown smoke in the face of Miss Edith Carey, a school-teacher. Sayre was arrested Saturday.

HERE'S WAY TO GET BACK LOST APPETITE

INHALE ODOR DE LUXE CALLED PHENYLESOCYANIDE BY SCIENTISTS

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]
ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 23.—Scientist members of the American Gas Association in convention today discussed mixing powerful odors with illuminating gas in order to detect leaks more quickly.

Dr. R. R. Sayres of the United States Bureau of Mines, said this method would reduce losses materially, promote economy to the producer and safety of the consumer.

Dr. Yandell Henderson of Yale recommended that ethyl-mercaptan, an odor resembling that of the skunk, should be used.

Dr. W. P. Manglesdorf, State chemist of Arkansas, said he favored the use of phenylisocyanide, which in addition to being an odor de luxe, is an appetiser. "Men working in our laboratory at Little Rock," he said, "say that phenylisocyanide gives them tremendous appetites."

FOREIGNERS TO STUDY ECONOMY

Experts to Report on Fall of German Mark

Government Leaders Are Discouraged

Banker Says Nation Spends Too Much

(Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger)
BERLIN, Oct. 23.—Plans to invite a board of foreign experts, including such authorities as Gustave Cassel of Sweden, Herr Vischering of Holland, Sir John Bradbury of England and financiers of corresponding international standing, to study the sources of financial chaos, draft a program of measures to check the collapse of the mark and restore the Federal treasury to solvency have been made the subject of an educational campaign in the inspired German press.

The latest crash of the mark and Germany's evident inability to do anything to check the descent by anything of her own accord has brought the government leaders to such a state of discouragement that they are apt to invite the services of such a board of financial physicians and agree in advance to swallow whatever remedies the experts may prescribe.

It is reported that Prof. Jeremiah Jenks, who is now in Europe making a study of conditions on his own account and recently visited Berlin, is being considered for a place on the proposed commission. Unlike most European authorities, Prof. Jenks is a practical rather than a theoretical expert, having worked out successful plans for currency stabilization in the Philippines, China and Mexico and studied similar conditions of financial reform in the Orient and elsewhere for the American government years ago.

President Havenstein of the Reichsbank is one of the few in authority, who are holding out against the proposal. Herr Havenstein declares the root of the financial evil is that the German government is spending more than it receives. He maintains it is unnecessary to call in a board of experts to determine a fact which could be ascertained cheaper by buying a volume of Dickens, reading the axiomatic definitions of the immortal on the difference between bankruptcy and solvency. He holds it is useless to discuss remedies which can only be of benefit after the patient has turned the corner.

Until receipts and expenditures are brought into balance, he declares he will reject all proposals about double standards of good and bad money, the use of the Reichsbank's gold reserve, etc., advanced by experts and publicists. One of Herr Havenstein's primal demands is naturally a complete reparations moratorium.

Police Officer at Sacramento Murder Victim

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]
SACRAMENTO, Oct. 23.—Patrolman Stephen H. Brinckerhoff, found lying fatally injured in the residence district here Saturday night, was murdered, it was declared today by Coroner John T. Skelton and a surgeon, following an autopsy held today. The policeman, who was not on duty and was in civilian attire, was found unconscious, and died Sunday morning.

A preliminary examination of the body led the authorities to believe Brinckerhoff had fallen and struck his head, causing a fracture of the skull, but the autopsy, the Coroner said, showed no fracture existed, but that the top of his head was a mass of bruises such as might have been caused by repeated blows from a blunt instrument.

MEN GROWING FAT, SURVEY HAS SHOWN

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]
CHICAGO, Oct. 23. — American men are getting fatter, to the detriment of vest buttons and longevity, according to a survey just completed, the National Life Insurance Company announced today.

The expansion of the waist line, according to this survey, is due to overeating and indulgence in sweets. So "always leave the table hungry" is a motto suggested. Fat induces heart trouble, the announcement said, and except in the rarest instances, persons who live to a ripe old age are thin.

PARLEY NOT TO BE IN TURKEY

Powers Insist on Holding It at Lausanne

France and Italy Try to Hasten Action

Moslems Are Consolidating Positions

BY SAMUEL DASHIELL
[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger]

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Despite the insistent requests of Turkish Nationalists that the forthcoming Near East conference be held in Turkey, Entente officials indicated today that there is a general agreement to hold the conference in Lausanne, beginning November 13, regardless of Angora protests.

M. Poincare has been charged to send out invitations to the powers interested, though nothing of an official nature has yet taken place pending the necessary Turkish acceptance. Even though the conference date be changed, France and Italy are anxious to organize the preliminary work in an effort to allay Turkish impatience.

Disquieting news from Asia Minor to the effect that the Nationalist Assembly is beginning to regard the western delay with a deep feeling of distrust likewise is causing apprehension among the Latin nations which still are rather at sea as regards what form the British representations would take if the conference were to go ahead as scheduled.

Many still believe the conference will not be held in Switzerland, principally because of the difficulty of the Turk delegates keeping in touch with the national assembly and because Switzerland is the most expensive place for foreigners with depreciated exchanges in Europe.

Meanwhile, the Turks are slowly consolidating their position in Thrace with the gendarmerie filling in quietly. It is admitted that the police are simply a mask for a well disciplined Moslem army which could be reinforced into a formidable army within a few hours.

FARMS FOR DISABLED VETERANS

Bill to Assist Them to Get on Land May be Put Up in Congress

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Disabled veterans, particularly those who have been rehabilitated for agricultural pursuits, are taking a greater interest in suggested plans for land settlements than in the so-called soldiers' bonus, government officials said today.

The Disabled American Veterans of the World War have indorsed land settlement in principle and the veterans' bureau has the question under consideration. A bill to assist disabled veterans to become established on the land, introduced by Representative Knutson of Minnesota, and favorably regarded by the disabled men, will be considered when Congress reconvenes.

The measure provides for the creation of a farm loan division in the veterans' bureau, the loaning of not more than 75 per cent of the total value of farms in amounts not exceeding $2000 to a man, and appropriates $5,000,000 for the purpose. Under the terms of the bill, the money will be returned with interest and the only cost to the government would be the administration of the act.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Persons found with opium or other narcotics in their possession can be prosecuted under Section 1006 of the Revenue Act of Feb. 24, 1919, which amended the Harrison Narcotic Act of 1914, it was held today by the Supreme Court in a case brought by the United States against Wong Sing.

He was indicted for having unlawfully obtained derivatives of opium and cocoa leaves and his case was dismissed in the United States District Court for Utah for the reason that the indictment did not charge that he dealt in the drugs and was, therefore, compelled to register.

HUGHES TO DEFEND POLICY

Secretary of State to Make Important Speeches on Foreign Affairs in Campaign

BY ROBERT BARRY
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Although the foreign policies of the Harding administration have not been assailed by Democratic campaign orators except in isolated instances, Secretary Hughes is to give a clear-cut exposition of them in the half-dozen speeches he is to make.

It is likely his most important contribution to the campaign will be that at Boston next week, when his address in behalf of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge falls naturally in the realm of international affairs by reason of the Senator's prominent association with them.

Mr. Hughes, it was said today, welcomes the opportunity to discuss in some details affairs of state which he has directed. There has been a modicum of criticism recently over the so-called aloofness from European affairs which bear materially on educational and commercial interests of the United States. They have not assumed the dignity of serious attack, yet what are termed "many good people" have not understood properly the stand of this government with reference to the Near East. A statement of that policy by Mr. Hughes, it is believed confidently, will dispel any view among the religious forces of the nation that the government was shirking its responsibilities.

Specific agitation for military participation by the United States having been started through the correspondence between the Secretary of State and Bishop Cannon of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Mr. Hughes will be afforded further opportunity to discuss the various phases of that question. Feeling he will be standing on firm ground when denying the right of the President to employ military force, except as has been done to protect American interests, and that the overwhelming sentiment of this country is opposed to any such sanction by Congress, Mr. Hughes will be able to expound the Harding policies from a point of view believed to carry great appeal.

Administration leaders are not worried over sporadic attacks on the efficacy of the Washington conference on the limitation of armament, through the failure of the French to act favorably on the four-power Pacific pact and the naval limitation treaty. It is likely, however, since Senator Lodge was one of the American commissioners, Mr. Hughes may refer to the achievements of the conference and contend in no uncertain terms the results of the conference have not been impaired by the French and Italian delay, nor will they.

There have been efforts in some quarters of late to have it appear no cohesive foreign policy has been developed by the Harding administration during the nineteen months it has been in charge of the government. It has been argued that Mr. Hughes has given out at various times specific formula to govern individual matters —German reparations, American participation in European economics, soviet recognition and Mexican recognition—but that no comprehensive statement of policy which the world might understand and apply to issues as they arise. The answer to that is quite simple and direct. Throughout the League of Nations controversy every effort was made to have it understood the Republican policy was to deal with specific questions as they arose. The rights and interests of the United States vary so broadly in world affairs, individual application of the same general principle which the President and Mr. Hughes made known soon after coming into office has been held to have been most satisfactory. And, it is contended, careful study of the various State Department pronouncements will reveal a consistency which might not be apparent to those dealing with surface indications.

Indian Princess Bobs Hair; Tribe Gives Her Exile

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HATFIELD (Wis.) Oct. 23.—Princess Newana Gayfish, Winnebago Indian beauty of Hatfield, upset 1000 years of tradition and her own domestic life when she bobbed her hair and introduced her fellow-redmen to flapperism. Her father, Chief Running Wolf, and her husband, Dan Gayfish, put on a war dance that made the silent forests sound like a reunion of boilermakers.

After the storm had cleared Newana found herself an exile so far as her relatives were concerned. But not being easily disturbed, she accepted her misfortune with a smile and that evening she and her little son turned their backs on the old reservation.

Newana isn't worrying about the future. An uncle who lived in Nebraska died two years go and left her $15,000 in cash and a large tract of land. There she has gone where she will attempt the cultivation of the land that was bequeathed to her. Newana is 18 years old and has been married three years.

YOUNG WOMAN SOUGHT AT SPOKANE OUT ON BAIL, GOES TO MEXICO

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SPOKANE (Wash.) Oct. 23.—Miss Fay McDonald, for whose return to Washington, from Austin, Tex., an extradition order was issued last week by Gov. Hart, furnished a $3000 bond Friday for her appearance at Austin tomorrow in habeas corpus proceedings according to information received by police and sheriff's officers here. It was declared she returned immediately to Mexico, where she has been for some time, following her conviction here on a charge of forgery. Miss Alma Sundin, a deputy sheriff of Spokane county, is due to arrive at Austin Wednesday to bring Miss McDonald here.

With her sister Marie, Fay McDonald disappeared three years ago while at liberty on bond pending an appeal of their conviction of forging the name of W. H. McNutt, a broker of this city, of whose murder the two women and their brother Ted had previously been acquitted.

ISSUE MADE OF CHARGES BY SENATOR

Democrats to Attack Appointment of Asserted Embezzler by Harding

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Democratic leaders were preparing today to make a campaign issue of charges by Senator Dial of South Carolina against Joseph W. Tolbert, Republican national committeeman from South Carolina, recently appointed by President Harding as United States Marshal for the western district of that State.

Allegations that Mr. Tolbert is disqualified from holding the office by reason of a previous conviction on a charge of embezzlement have been made by Senator Dial in a formal protest lodged with Judge Watkins of the Federal Court of the district, it was learned at the Senator's office.

The charges will be seized on by the Democrats, it was said and the incident pressed along with the Newberry case, which Democratic stumpers are making a leading point of attack on Congress. Democratic leaders in Congress intend to parallel the Tolbert case with the Goldstein case.

President Harding gave Mr. Tolbert a recess appointment after his confirmation had been blocked in the Senate by Senator Dial. Charges by the Senator that Mr. Tolbert was unworthy of Federal office and had as "referee" in the distribution of patronage collected money from applicants for government jobs are under investigation by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The President's action in making a recess appointment before the Judiciary Committee had made its report has prompted much comment by the Democrats. It will be made the subject of bitter criticism when the Senate reconvenes, it was said.

Mr. Tolbert is one of the oldest members of the Republican national committee. He has been for years a conspicuous figure in Republican national conventions.

PONZI NOW FACING STATE INDICTMENT

GET-RICH-QUICK "WIZARD" ON TRIAL IN BOSTON COURT

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Charles Ponzi went on trial in Superior Court today on charges of larceny and conspiracy preferred against him by the commonwealth as a result of his scheme of 50 per cent return to investors in forty-five days through trading in international postal reply coupons. Ponzi is serving a Federal sentence for using the mails to defraud, but the United States Supreme Court ruled that he could be tried at this time on the State indictments.

Ponzi told Judge Frederick Fosdyck that he would conduct his own defense. Asst. Atty.-Gen. Hurwitz, in a conference among the State prosecutors, the court and Ponzi himself, said he intended to try the defendant on only that part of the indictment alleging larceny from investors.

Ponzi then asked:

"Am I to be tried twice on the same charges, once in a Federal court and now in the State? I do not think it is fair, in case I am acquitted of the charges on which I am now being tried here to again have to appear in other indictments. I would like the assurance of the court that I would not be tried the third time."

"I cannot help you in that," said Judge Fosdyck, adding that such a decision was a matter for the State to arrive at.

Five of Ponzi's agents also were placed on trial for conspiracy. They were John A. Dondero, John S. Dondero, Henry Mahoney, Rinaldi Bazzelli and Henry T. Nielson.

PRINCIPAL KEPT BUSY GUARDING HIS PUPILS

RULING OF ATTORNEY-GENERAL HOLDS TEACHER RESPONSIBLE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ARBUCKLE (Cal.) Oct. 23. — Atty.-Gen. Webb stirred up a lot of trouble for L. G. Johnson, principal of the local union grammar school, when he gave his recent ruling that trustees could be held responsible for injuries to pupils while at school.

The local school authorities ordered all the swings, slides, teeter boards, rings and bars removed, and as a result the principal spends the recess and noon hours chasing boys out of the tops of trees surrounding the school.

Johnson is a strong advocate for a change in the Webb ruling.

MISSING SCHOOL TEACHER RETURNS

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

ALBANY (Minn.) Oct. 23.—Miss Lorraine Schneider, 23-year-old school-teacher, who disappeared from a hotel in Minneapolis and who later was traced to Denver, was back at her home near here today after an absence of more than seven months.

Miss Schneider said that she had planned to wait until Thanksgiving Day before returning home, but that she "could not wait."

Miss Schneider disappeared from Minneapolis because she thought she had killed a man who had attempted to attack her.

NEW QUESTIONS UP IN BALKANS

Macedonia Movement is on in Rumania

Bulgarians Wish Autonomy for West Thrace

All Are Due to Turkish Victories

[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger]

SOFIA (Bulgaria) Oct. 23.—The reappearance of Turkey in Europe has brought other old supposedly settled questions on the carpet, chiefly the Macedonia movement started in Rumania to establish Macedonia as an autonomous state by arguing that the conflict of races under present conditions makes the region the danger spot of all Europe. The same argumentation is applied to Western Thrace, which the Bulgarians proclaim loudly and unanimously must be given an autonomous status as the country is a trade outlet to the world.

A Bucharest newspaper, the Orient, gives a typical Rumanian view as follows:

"It seems more and more necessary that the oriental question should not be abandoned to settlement by arms, but permanently settled on the basis of self-determination. As long as Macedonia is not made an autonomous state conflicts will remain latent. Macedonia cannot be divided among her neighbors on account of the variety of her races."

Another effect of the Turkish struggle shows in the apparent weakening of the Little Entente, despite public reiterations as to its solidity. The independent Belgrade Daily Politika complains that the Little Entente remains inactive in the face of probable violation of the Treaty of Neuilly, which it was formed to defend.

The Greek newspapers complain on the other hand that Jugo-Slavia and Bulgaria are becoming more friendly than the former's obligations to the Little Entente permit. They propose the formation of a Greco-Rumanian-Italian Entente to offset the alleged friendship. They report the proposal has many Italian friends.

The Rumanian press also is worried about the late flirting of Paris with Moscow and talks again of the Russian menace. The Orient expresses fear that France will yet support the revived Russian claim to Constantinople, saying: "If we must have Russia or the Turk in Constantinople we prefer the Turk."

It is evident from a survey of public opinion in all the Balkan countries that the Mudania convention is regarded as far from attaining the settlement of a dangerous situation.

FOOCHOW IS PRESENT COCKPIT OF CHINA

SUN INVITED TO ESTABLISH INDEPENDENT RULE IN PROVINCE

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

AMOY (China) Oct. 23.—Sun Yat Sen, deposed President of South China, who fled to Shanghai in June and has been engaged in political negotiations there ever since, has been invited to go to Foochow, capital of the Province of Fukien, and set up an independent government, similar to that which fell before the onslaught of Chen Chiung Ming at Canton, according to advices received today from Foochow.

Meanwhile, the capital of Fukien has become the cockpit in which forces of the north and south are engaged in a fresh struggle. Leading the troops said to be loyal to the Peking administration is Admiral Sah Chen-Ping, former Minister of the Navy and the man whom the popular voice recently urged to take over the provincial governorship.

Opposed to Admiral Sah is Hsu Tsung-Chi, who led Sun Yat Sen's army to its disastrous defeat in Kwangsi Province early this year. Gen. Hsu recently appeared on the borders of Fukien with the rehabilitated remnants of his force, and, in conjunction with Hsu Shu Cheng, or "Little Hsu," the pro militarist, launched a drive against the Fukien forces that ended with the flight of the Governor, La Hao Chi.

TRANSPORT SERVICE OF ARMY REDUCED

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The War Department made public today directions issued to corps area commanders showing sharp curtailments in the Army transport service in the Pacific due to the "critical shortage in current Army appropriation funds."

Commencing on December 8 the San Francisco-Manila service will be reduced to one sailing every ten weeks from San Francisco, the transport Thomas thus taking the place of the transports Sherman and U. S. Grant, now running on regular schedule out of that port.

The Thomas also will carry personnel and supplies between Manila and Taku, China, and from Taku to the United States via Nagasaki, Japan, on the return voyage of each trip to San Francisco.

The San Francisco-Honolulu service will remain as at present, with the U. S. Grant substituted for the transport Somme.

The present Manila-Taku service is abolished in favor of the service to be rendered by the Thomas.

Corps area commanders were directed to cut all present boat service to river and harbor and coast artillery posts 25 per cent. The orders pointed out that Secretary Weeks had "given positive instructions" that no deficiencies were to be incurred under the current transport appropriation for the Army.

AMERICA SEEKS TREATY BONDS

Bids Southern Neighbors to Meet at Washington

Mutual Interests Motive for Proposal

Limitation of Armaments is Point for Conference

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The United States has invited the governments of Guatemala, Nicaragua, Honduras, Salvador and Costa Rica to send plenipotentiaries to a conference in Washington beginning December 4 for a discussion of measures looking to the well being of Central America, the "results thereof to be embodied in a treaty for the permanent regulation of their mutual interests and relations." The State Department, in making this announcement tonight, said the American Legations at the capitals of the five Central American republics were instructed on October 21 to extend to the Presidents of those countries invitations to the conference.

The conference, it was explained, was expected to negotiate treaties making effective provisions of the treaties signed at Washington on Dec. 20, 1907, "which experience has shown to be effective in maintaining friendly relations and co-operation among the Central American states," to consider measures for the limitation of armaments in Central America, to attempt the working out of a plan for setting up tribunals of inquiry for the adjustment of disputes under certain circumstances between two or more of the countries and to take up any other questions which it may be desired unanimously to consider.

HARMONY PROMOTED

Call for the conference was issued as a result of the meeting on August 20 last, of the Presidents of Nicargua, Honduras and Salvador, on board the U.S.S. Tacoma in Fonsea Bay at the request of the Nicaraguan government, looking to the establishment of more peaceful relations between the three countries and resulting in the signing of an agreement acknowledging the general treaty of peace and friendship, signed in Washington, Dec. 20, 1907, by the five republics of Central America, as being in force between them. It was stipulated in the agreement that the Guatemalan and Costa Rican governments would be asked to adhere to it and that a preliminary conference would be called in December to discuss future measures looking to the well being of Central America.

RESPECT TREATY

The Guatemalan and Costa Rican governments thereupon stated that they did not consider it necessary to adhere to the August 20 agreement, as they regarded the treaty of 1907 as still in force and intended to abide by its provisions.

"This was most gratifying," the State Department said; "and opened the way to a discussion of those further measures which may be deemed necessary for the welfare of the five republics. The governments of Nicaragua, Honduras and Salvador have informally made known to the department that they would be gratified if a conference could be held in Washington in December, to this end. The department, in pursuance of its policy of desiring by all means to co-operate in the peace and welfare of this continent, has been very glad to issue invitations to such a conference."

FREIGHT RATES TOO HIGH, SAYS WALLACE

SECRETARY ASSERTS FARMER ENTITLED TO REDUCTION AND SERVICE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Oct. 23.—Lower freight rates and unhindered transportation are demanded by the farmers, Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, declared in an address here tonight.

Freight rates on agricultural products should be decreased, Secretary Wallace said, because they are too high with relation to the prices farmers get.

"Transportation is a part of production so far as agriculture is concerned," the Secretary said. "The farmer pays the freight. He does not want the railroads to reduce freight rates so low that they cannot furnish efficient service. Service is important to the farmers. But the freight rates are now too high. The farmers want the railroad people to cut down their operating costs, to insist upon a fair day's work for a fair wage, to move their freight cheaper, and thus be able to cut down rates."

ITALY WILL KEEP FASCISTI FROM ROME

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ROME, Oct. 23.—The government has taken special precautions to prevent the passing through Rome tomorrow of large crowds of Fascisti, on their way to Naples, where they are to hold a big demonstration. It is estimated that 40,000 Fascisti will take part in the gatherings.

The carabineers and royal guard have been reinforced and strict instructions have been given that any steps may be resorted to, including the tearing up of the railway tracks, in order to prevent the Fascisti from entering Rome.

Preparations have been made in Naples by the Fascisti to insure a great manifestation of their strength without creating disorder.

REFUSES TO REDUCE BONDS OF RADICALS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ST. JOSEPH (Mo.) Oct. 23.—Judge Charles E. White in the Circuit Court today refused to reduce the bonds of twenty asserted radicals facing charges of violation of the Michigan Syndicalism Act. Eight of the twenty were returned to jail pending trial, which is expected to open next month. The remaining twelve are at liberty under $10,000 bail each.

Attorney David Benthal of Chicago, representing the defendants, asked for a common bond of $100,000 for the twenty.

GRAND JURY AT HERRIN ENDS WORK

Forty-eight More Persons Are Indicted for Murder in Last True Bill

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MARION (Ill.) Oct. 23.—The special grand jury which today resumed its investigation of the Herrin mine killings after a month's recess, late this afternoon returned an indictment for murder naming forty-eight persons, announced it had completed its work and adjourned. This makes 434 persons the grand jury has indicted in connection with the rioting in which twenty-three men were killed.

Those indicted today were charged with the death of Ignace Kubinis, the last victim of the rioting to expire, who died since the grand jury took a temporary adjournment thirty days ago. Only a few witnesses were heard today, and they are said to have told of wounds inflicted on Kubinis, and which are said to have resulted in his death.

Circuit Judge Hartwell, before whom the indictment was returned, expressed the opinion that the true bill is illegal because it was returned at the September term of court by a grand jury impaneled by the July term of court. State's Atty. Delos Duty expressed an opposite opinion and stated he would appeal to the State Supreme Court if the indictment was declared illegal by the lower court.

DEMOCRATIC GAINS FORESEEN IN WEST

WALSH PROPHESIES BOURBON INCREASES WILL FAR EXCEED LOSSES

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Predictions of "substantial Democratic gains" in the elections for both Senate and House in States west of the Mississippi River were made in a statement tonight by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee, upon his return from a tour through the West. The results on November 7, Senator Walsh said, would be "Democratic victories in unexpected places and in very sweeping proportions."

Specific claims were not made by Senator Walsh, but he said the increase of Democrats in the House would be particularly large.

"When we consider the Senatorial situation," said Senator Walsh, "we must bear in mind that the terms of eight Democratic Senators expire in States all of which went Republican in 1920 and only two of which, Arizona and Montana, would be classed as Democratic States under normal political conditions. Yet, it is my opinion, that the number of Democratic Senators from the West will be more rather than less than eight. This does not mean that all seeking re-election will surely be returned—if that happens it will be phenomenal, yet, it is likely to happen—but Democratic Senators will be elected from States now represented by Republicans."

Senator Walsh said the party would make substantial gains because of "general disgust and disappointment of Republican and independent voters with the national and local Republican administrations," adding that the national Republican administration was "decidedly unpopular" and that the people felt that it was "drifting, trusting to fate and chance, without any alert, vigorous, courageous leadership."

"Of course, the tariff, taxation, Newberryism and bonus are everywhere being discussed," he said, "but in my opinion the real issue is the Republican administration."

LABOR FEDERATION APPEALS TO VOTERS

VOTERS WARNED TO GUARD AGAINST "REACTION IN CONGRESS"

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The political campaign committee of the American Federation of Labor, in a formal statement tonight, urged voters in the forthcoming elections to take a stand against "reaction in Congress." The statement embodied an appeal for a breaking down of the "somewhat popular impression" that elections only in Presidential years were important, and to regard every election as having direct bearing on whether the nation in the future would have Congresses favorable to progress or whether reaction should govern.

"Consider the Congress as it has been," the statement continued. "Not a single constructive measure has been made into law. On the contrary, one reactionary proposal after another has been brought forward. There have been sufficient friends of the public interest in Congress to prevent enactment into law of the most vicious measures, but not enough of them to take command and enact constructive measures."

The statement, described by its authors as a "call to duty," contained a list of the "issues" in the coming elections, enumerating among the questions, taxation, soldier bonus, merchant marine legislation, amendment of the Esch-Cummins law, immigration, Federal police, powers, unemployment, prosecution of alleged war grafters and profiteers and general labor policies.

OUR AMERICAN ADVENTURE

BY SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

Spirits Heal Conan Doyle. He Says—Our Stages Bother Him—Tells How Departed Guided Engineer—Houdini's Miracle

I wonder if it has been noticed how often wish is really prophecy—the most unlikely wish coming true in the course of the years. I am reminded of a talk I had with my younger brother here in Philadelphia nearly thirty years ago. He was then a subaltern of gunners, fresh from Woolwich, and I had asked him to be my traveling companion. One day we talked very earnestly of the senseless dissensions which at that time were very apparent between the two countries. I remember that I said with some earnestness: "Well, Innes, I only hope that in your military career you will some day find yourself leading British soldiers shoulder to shoulder with American soldiers in a just cause—and may I be there to see."

Could any wish have been more grotesquely impossible, and yet I must have spoken with some strange conviction, since the words remain so clear to me after all the years. But see how it turned out. Upon the 27th of September, 1918, standing on the top tread of an upended tank, I saw the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions of the American Army helping the Australians to break the Hindenburg line, while my brother was in high command of the Third British Corps, which was advancing on their left. How can one explain such a thing as that? Surely it is far beyond coincidence. But if not, then are our paths in life so accurately mapped that even twenty-four years before the outcome can be seen.

OUR STAGES PERPLEX DOYLE

At one matinee lecture at Philadelphia I had an amusing experience—at least it amused the audience. I spoke with a huge drop curtain of canvas behind me. When I had made my bow I walked off, but found that there was no exit on the right side. I turned and walked across the proscenium, but again to my surprise was faced with rigid canvas. I then concluded I was mistaken in my venture, so I again crossed but found it quite impassable. I then wandered down the face of the curtain amid sympathetic laughter from those who observed my dilemma, until at last I saw a slit and the agitated hand of Widdecombe. This queer bolt hole about a third of the way across formed entrance and exit, though I had not observed it in coming on. The adventure was not so funny as one which occurred in my first lecture tour when I bustled on to the stage at Daley's Theater with several books under my arm. It was a stage door with a small sill of wood over which I tripped, so that from the point of view of the audience I came cantering down the sloping stage clutching at my dropping books. There was a general desire for an encore.

When I returned from Philadelphia I had planned a few days of rest, but I found that the demand had been so great that my manager had interpolated two repetitions of the photographic lecture, which meant that these proofs were set before the eyes of 7000 more people. I had come to the conclusion that it was best to occupy half the lecture in giving a synopsis of the philosophy of the subject, which is quite enough to convince and satisfy a reasonable mind without any phenomena at all, and then to show the photographs of actual happenings, explaining that they are quite secondary and that this side of the question had had far too much attention paid it, because it happens to appeal to our lower dramatic instincts rather than to our reason. I continued now to follow this course during the remainder of my tour.

SUMMONS SPIRIT POWER

An interesting example of spirit power occurred during these last New York lectures. I caught laryngitis in acute form, there being an epidemic of it at the time. The result of it was that I lost my voice entirely—so much so that I could not make my wife understand me across the bedroom. I was in no way perturbed, though I had to address a great meeting that afternoon, and if I consulted Dr. Colby, the able specialist, it was rather to satisfy my manager than myself. When the hour came I walked to the front of the platform, and with an effort I croaked out, loud enough for all to hear me, "I have quite lost my voice, so as a sign of my confidence in spiritual power I propose today to give a quarter of an hour's extra lecture."

It seemed a strange "non sequitur," but I actually spoke for one and three-quarter hours, getting clearer and better all the time, though I relapsed at once when the lecture was over. These forces will never fail us so long as we are engaged upon their work. In the old days when I lectured on the war I used to get severe heart palpitations after my lectures. Never once has this happened to me since I took up my spiritual mission, but my strength has always proven greater with every new demand.

On the occasion of my last lecture in New York I introduced Mr. Arthur Stilwell to the audience, saying, "I am only in a position to talk of these wonderful matters, but here is a man who experiences them in his own person." He then came up onto the platform at my request and acquitted himself very well in a quarter of an hour's talk. He is one of those to whom I look to carry on the work when I am gone. His history is certainly a marvelous one. He has a daimon, as Socrates had, who advises him and whose advice must be followed lest worse befall. It comes, I understand, as a vision in the night. Stilwell as a young man was well placed in an insurance business.

SPIRIT ADVICE TO ENGINEER

The daimon told him to resign and and go West and build railroads. He was not an engineer, yet he obeyed. He has now laid more miles of rail than any other living man. When he was laying the South Kansas line the terminus was to be Galveston. The daimon told him to halt the line short of the terminus and build a canal thence to the sea. It was done. Four days later came a tidal wave and convulsion which for the time wiped Galveston off the map, and the canal was a harbor of refuge. So again and again, beyond all doubt or question, this wonderful guide has led him through life.

The last great effort of the guide was to dictate a plan by which the world could be relieved of the pressure of war debt. Stilwell published the revelation under the name of "The Great Plan." I was, I think, one of the few in England who took it seriously, and I wrote an account of it to the Evening Standard. It was met by all sorts of minor objections, people failing to understand that an absolutely abnormal situation must be met in an abnormal way. If there has been immense temporary pressure upon an estate it is not attempted to meet that pressure entirely out of the shattered revenues, but the credit of the estate is pledged for the time when in the future it shall have recovered. If the world be taken as the estate, that is the simple but effective idea in Stilwell's plan.

The idea, expressed very shortly, is that every nation shall pay a reasonable sum every year to a certain fund and shall pledge itself to continue to do so for seventy years. Notes shall be issued and passed into circulation, so that they can be used as currency, which shall be guaranteed by the fund, not as it now is, but as it will be at the end of that period. So we make the resources of the future available for the payment of war debts and other uses of the present. This, of course, is the merest sketch, but it has the germ of the idea. It would be international money with an international guarantee.

HOUDINI'S MIRACLE

Mr. Stilwell spoke very well and I only hope some larger field may be opened up for him. Houdini was present at this—or it may have been some other—New York lecture, and escorted my wife out down a passage which they imagined would be a shortcut, but which actually ended in a padlocked door. Houdini put out his big right hand and gathered up the padlock as one picks a plum from a tree. The way was opened to the street.

I had now done the great eastern cities and the time had come to continue my work by lecturing in some of the larger inland centers. Before doing so I ran up to New Haven, where I gave a lecture to an audience consisting largely of Yale students, who received the subject in a very sympathetic fashion. Yale is not quite so old as Harvard and, indeed, represents a secession from Harvard on the part of those who thought the Boston university was too liberal in its ideas. The outside of the colleges, however, with the old trees in front of them, and the great green common, gives the European visitor an impression of mellow growth which he seldom receives in this bustling community. After this short sally I prepared for the longer trip, which was really to be a final one, ending up in Chicago. I felt impelled to take my whole party with me, as the Spiritualists were to give us a formal welcome in Chicago and we felt that it would be a remembrance which the children would always carry with them.

MRS. TIERNAN DELAYS SUIT FOR DIVORCE

PROVISIONS OF INDIANA LAW GREATLY COMPLICATE CASE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SOUTH BEND (Ind.) Oct. 23.—Mrs. Augusta H. Tiernan did not walk into the presence of Judge Lenn J. Care, in Superior Court today, and demand a divorce from Prof. John P. Tiernan, Notre Dame University law instructor, who she charges was cruel to her. She seeks the custody of the children. Nor did Prof. Tiernan appear to oppose the charge in the event that the case was called for trial. Mrs. Tiernan, now living at the Tiernan home on Diamond avenue, with her husband, must go on the stand and swear if she is to be given a divorce on default that she has always been a true and faithful wife. Whether she is prepared to do this is not known. Mrs. Tiernan is represented in the divorce case by Prosecuting Attorney Floyd O. Jellison, who prosecuted unsuccessfully the case of Mrs. Tiernan in her attempt to prove Harry Poulin the father of her third-born child.

Whether Judge Care would permit the case to go on default without appointing an attorney to represent Prof. Tiernan is a matter of speculation here. It is the usual custom for the court to appoint the prosecutor to represent the defaulting defendant. Prosecutor Jellison, with his knowledge of the recent case, might find himself in an embarrassing position if he were named by Judge Care to represent Tiernan, who has announced that he will not contest the case.

Attorney Thomas Slick, who filed the divorce petition for Mrs. Tiernan and who, with Prosecutor Jellison, was to represent her, announced this afternoon that the case would not come up today. He would give no possible date for the hearing.

SHORTAGE OF LABOR PREVAILS IN NATION

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Improved business conditions and increased employment, with almost no idle men seeking work, now obtain in practically all sections of the United States, according to an official report today by the Department of Labor. The conclusion is based upon telegraphic responses to a query sent out through the United States Employment Service to every State, the agents of the service in their answers indicating an almost universal shortage of common labor and a general demand for skilled workmen in a wide variety of trades and occupations.

In the Far West, California, along with increased employment, was said to have a lack of railroad cars as a factor holding back full employment.

CUBAN GOVERNMENT LOAN IS PROPER ON

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—A formal authorization permitting the Cuban government to float the $50,000,000 loan recently negotiated with private bankers is in preparation at the State Department, and is expected to be delivered to Cuban officials soon.

Such a loan is believed by officials here to be a proper part of the financial rehabilitation scheme worked out in Cuba in co-operation with Maj. Gen. Crowder, acting as the personal representative of President Harding.

POWER ACT REAL CRISIS TO STATE

Manufacturer Says California Faces Gravest Menace of History

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FRESNO, Oct. 23.—That California faces the gravest menace of her entire political history in the proposed Water and Power Act was the declaration made here today by George Hughes, manufacturer of household electrical appliances, in an address to the Rotary Club on "California's Industrial Future." Misrepresentation, half truths and appeals based upon the impossible idea of "something for nothing," have won support for the act, asserted Hughes and it behooves every thinking man to work untiringly against the measure in the remaining days before election.

"We are told of the tremendous benefits of public ownership of electric power in Ontario, Can. I have never found them and I have a factory in Ontario as well as one in Southern California. My power costs in California, where I buy from a private service, are 25 per cent cheaper than they are in Canada, where I buy from the hydro publicly owned plants. We are also told that the power is cheap in Los Angeles and that this accounts for the great growth in manufacturing there. This, too, is plain misrepresentation for 85 per cent of the manufacturing establishments in Los Angeles district are outside the corporate limits and are served by a private power company. Of the 15 per cent in the corporate limits, nearly half are served by the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, a private corporation. There is no place in the world where rates for electricity are as low as in California. It is my business to watch household electric rates because they directly affect the output of my factories. My statements are not to be disputed.

"California's manufacturing possibilities are tremendous. The State has raw materials in unlimited quantities, ideal weather and working conditions, an abundance of efficient and comparatively cheap labor, ready access to all the markets of the world, and the world's cheapest power, but these assets will be valueless if the people, led by a few scheming politicians elect to engage in this disastrous political experiment as wrecked the State of North Dakota."

BERGEN MURDER STORY IN COURT

State Takes but Few Hours to Complete Case

Move to Discharge Scullion and Miss Thornton Lost

Girl Again Tells How Actor Met His Death

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HACKENSACK (N. J.) Oct. 23. Consuming but one court day, in which forty-five minutes were given to the selection of a jury, the State tonight rested its case in the joint trial of George Cline, motion-picture location director, Miss Alice Thornton and Charles Scullion, brother-in-law of Cline, for the murder on August 28 of John Bergen, motion-picture actor.

The court reserved decision on the admissibility of two notes offered in evidence by the State. One was said to be the dying statement of Bergen: "This was a frame-up," and the other was a note said to have been found on Bergen after his death, which read: "George Cline killed me."

A motion by defense counsel to dismiss the indictment against Miss Thornton and Scullion on the ground that the State had produced no evidence to connect either with the crime was denied.

GIRL'S STORY TOLD

The principal witness for the State was County Detective Nathan Allyn, who testified to two statements made by Miss Thornton. One, he said, was taken by him at a hotel in Fort Lee on August 28, before Miss Thornton was arrested, and the other was made to Assistant Prosecutor McCarthy in his presence after she had been arrested.

In the latter statement Detective Allyn testified Miss Thornton stated that when she went to the Cline home on the night of the murder Mr. and Mrs. Cline and Bergen were there. Bergen and Mrs. Cline were sitting in a corner and the latter said to Bergen: "Jack, I had to tell my husband because of the children."

This statement, he said, referred to alleged improper relations between Mrs. Cline and Bergen. Then Cline said to Bergen: "If you have anything to say, let's have it." Bergen answered, according to Allyn's version of Miss Thornton's statement, "Yes, it's the truth. What are you going to do about it?"

To this Cline replied: "We'll have it out upstairs," and Bergen answered, "No, we will have it out here."

HEARD SHOT

Miss Thornton's statement, according to the witness, was to the effect that Cline sent Scullion upstairs for a revolver. The detective testified that Miss Thornton said on Scullion's return:

"When the men started to go upstairs, Mrs. Cline attempted to stop them, but I rushed between them and held Mrs. Cline back. Bergen and Cline then went upstairs. I heard a scuffle, then one shot, and Bergen came down stairs, followed by Cline. As Bergen went out, I went into the kitchen to get a drink of water for Mrs. Cline and Cline told me to go home. I went and after I reached home I telephoned to Cline and told him I had passed Bergen lying on the street. Cline made no answer and hung up the receiver."

The defense will begin its case tomorrow.

Six men and six women are on the jury. Miss Susan R. Squire, a 32-year-old stenographer, was chosen forewoman of the jury.

BEAUTY SPECIALIST TELLS SECRET

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."—Advertisement.

OPPOSERS OF KLAN DEFEATED IN COURT

EFFORT TO PUT NAME ON TEXAS BALLOT LOST BY PEDDY MEN

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW ORLEANS (La.) Oct. 23.—Supporters of E. H. Peddy lost their fight today before a special tribunal of Federal judges to force the use of his name on the Federal Texas ballot for United States Senator in opposition to Earle B. Mayfield, Democratic nominee and reputed Ku Klux Klan candidate. The judges held they were without jurisdiction.

The case was transferred to New Orleans after an injunction had been filed in Mobile to compel the Secretary of State of Texas to put the name of Peddy on the ballots.

National politics became involved in the case today when attorneys for the anti-Ku Klux Klan, or Fusion faction, announced that R. B. Creager, one of the complainants, had received a letter from President Harding, in which the National Executive was declared to have commended Texas Republicans for aiding independent Democrats. Texas Republicans, it was said, were commended by the President for aiding Democrats "in coalition against all groupings and classes" dictated upon dictation contrary to American ideals."

In presenting their arguments, attorneys for the Peddy action contended that Mayfield is the candidate of the Ku Klux Klan, which, they declared, has absorbed the Democratic party in Texas. Therefore, they charged, Mayfield is not the Democratic candidate. They maintained their client was being "unconstitutionally discriminated against" by the Texas election laws as construed by the Attorney-General.

Attorneys for the State argued that the Klan issue was not a part of the question. The issue, they declared, was whether the State has the right to regulate its own primaries. Atty.-Gen. Keeling declared that he was not defending the Klan or Mayfield, but was defending the officers of the State of Texas, in the discharge of their duties.

The Attorney-General insisted that the Federal court had no jurisdiction, as the issue was purely political.

GRAND JURY STARTS ROSENBLUTH INQUIRY

ENTIRE CRONKHITE MURDER CASE WILL BE REVIEWED IN NEW YORK

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A Federal grand jury here will start an inquiry tomorrow into the charges made by former Capt. Robert Rosenbluth, the so-called "American Dreyfus," against the Department of Justice in connection with its handling of the case growing out of the murder of Maj. Alexander Cronkhite at Camp Lewis, Wash.

Summons served today on Capt. Rosenbluth and his attorney, Jonah J. Goldstein, requiring their appearance before the grand jury tomorrow afternoon, were issued by U. S. Dist.-Atty. Cole Hayward under Section 271 of the United States Criminal Code, which is the section covering murder and manslaughter. The summons states Rosenbluth and Goldstein are to be questioned under that section, indicating for the first time that the New York inquiry will cover the whole Cronkhite case and not merely the charges of Rosenbluth against Atty.-Gen. Daugherty and secret service operatives.

Leighton H. Blood, a New York Daily News reporter, who has frequently interviewed Rosenbluth and his attorney since the former Army captain was rearrested last week, following his indictment by a Federal grand jury at Tacoma, Wash., on a charge of murdering Maj. Cronkhite, and who transcribed Capt. Rosenbluth's series of articles presenting his side of the case, was served with a subpoena requiring his appearance with copies of all statements Capt. Rosenbluth made to him in connection with the case.

CHINA IS THREATENED

Political Conspiracy With Sun as Instigator Likely to Mean Disastrous Civil War

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

AMOY (China) Oct. 23.—A political conspiracy which may mean another disastrous civil war in China is believed to have been uncovered in the province of Fukien, whose capital, Foochow, recently was taken by the invading forces of Hsu Tsung-Chi.

According to advices from Foochow, Sun Yat Sen, deposed president of South China, has plotted with Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian war lord; Tuan Chi-Jui, Hsu Shu-Cheng, known as "Little Hsu," Chang Wen-Sung of Anhui and Lu Yun-Hsiang of Peking to form a coalition of the Fengtien, Anfu and Kwominting parties. This coalition, it is said, plans to take Shantung and drive Gen. Chen Chiung-Ming from Kwangtung, and Chi Hsieh-Yuan from Klangsi, thus gaining control of the Chinese coast.

The unification plan will mean the creation of a formidable foe in Gen. Wu Pei-Fu, the conqueror of Chang Tso-Lin. There was said to be a possibility of Gen. Tsao Kun, the North China military leader, joining the coalition.

Gov. Li Hao-Chi of Fukien, who fled from Foochow upon the approach of Hsu's troops, is accused of playing a double game, secretly helping the plotters while nominally supporting the Peking government. His attitude toward Peking, it is said, is due to his fear of losing his office of Tuchun, or Military Governor of Fukien because of the recent government policy of eliminating the tuchuns. Both Chan Wen-Sung and Lu Yuen-Hsian, North China leaders, are also believed to be preparing to forsake Peking for the same reason.

It is declared that the coalition, if successful, will bring together the worst elements of all the political groups. The situation is extremely complicated and the future is uncertain.

COST OF NAVY PER CAPITA NOT LARGE

ADMIRAL TELLS HOW FUNDS FOR SUPPORT OF FORCES ARE RAISED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The Navy costs each American citizen approximately $3 a year, according to Rear Admiral Rogers, chairman of the executive committee of the general board of the Navy, who, with the approach of Navy Day, October 27, is seeking to reawaken public interest in naval defense.

Financial support of the Navy, he says also, falls even less heavily upon those who live in the Middle West, his estimate of the per capita cost to people in the interior being about 2½ cents a year.

Asked as to the "burden of the Navy" upon the individual taxpayer, Admiral Rogers said:

"The expenditures of the Navy, like everything else worth having, may be termed a 'burden,' but it is well worth carrying and would be so if its cost were much greater. I hope my answer to the first question may make this point as clear to others as it is to myself. However, the so-called 'burden' is really much less than most people fancy.

"The per capita cost of the Navy to the whole people is somewhat over $3 a year.

"But I am assured by those who have looked into it more deeply than I have and who deserve confidence, that the financial support of the Navy falls unequally upon different regions of the country and that the districts about the Mississippi and to the west thereof and particularly the agricultural parts of this region are least taxed for the Navy. In such country districts the per capita cost of the Navy seems to be about 25 cents a year. The Federal taxes, although not so equally distributed as local taxes, are in total only about one-third of the whole taxation by State and nation.

"The Navy absorbs about 8 per cent of the Federal taxation or 2½ per cent of what the taxpayer has to find to satisfy all demands upon him. Those who do not pay large Federal income taxes contribute comparatively little to support the Navy. Those who pay small Federal luxury taxes also contribute little to support of the Navy although the Navy, by its influence on world business, does as much to make these classes prosperous as it does for others.

GREEKS IN GERMANY ORDERED TO ARMS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—Mobilization orders have been issued to all Greeks of the class of '23 living in Germany. They are ordered to leave and join the colors within six days. The same orders have been issued to all men of the classes of '17 to '22 who for any reason are not with the army. All exemptions and postponements of military service are voided.

The advance mobilization of next year's recruits, which presumably applies to Greeks in other countries as well as Germany and recalls students who hitherto had been permitted to continue their work abroad in the midst of the campaign in Asia Minor, is indicative of the Greek view of the situation left by the Mudania conference.

TEMPORARY INSANITY WOMAN'S DEFENSE

ACCUSED SWEETHEART SLAYER, PEGGY BEAL, ON TRIAL FOR LIFE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Oct. 23.—Temporary insanity will be the plea of Marie L. (Peggy) Beal in her trial for the slaying of Frank Warren Anderson, her attorney said in his opening statement to the jury late today.

"Mrs. Beal brooded over her shattered love affair with Anderson and her mind was reduced to such a weakened condition that she slew him," the attorney declared.

The defense counsel said the night before the asserted murder Anderson told Mrs. Beal he could not marry her, after he had asked her to come to Kansas City from Springfield, Ill., to be married.

"Don't you want to do what is right?" the attorney told the jury Peggy Beal had asked Anderson.

"I'd like to, but I can't because I'm married," the jurors were told Anderson replied.

In the State's opening statement to the jury, Anthony P. Nugent, assistant prosecutor, recited the story of the fatal shooting which took place in a hotel room here June 3.

"The evidence will show," Nugent said, "that the killing of Anderson was deliberate; that it had been studied and planned by Mrs. Beal, and was accomplished while Anderson was asleep."

William L. Lasley, patrolman, first State witness, identified a book, "Thuvia, Maid of Mars," which he found on a table of the hotel room in which Anderson was slain. He said the book was opened at an illustration of the heroine Thuvia standing over Tario, whom she had stabbed.

CASH OR STOCK GIVEN TO VOLUNTEERS IN RECENT STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—All employees of the Southern Railway, who volunteered to leave their regular duties and serve in its shops during the strike last summer, are being presented this week with either checks for $350 or certificates for five shares of its stock. At railroad headquarters the action was said to represent the appreciation of the company for loyalty to its interests shown by the men concerned, and not to represent a bonus or wage payment in any way.

A large number of other railroad companies affected by the strike, it was said, had taken somewhat similar action. The donation went to several hundreds of employees on the Southern lines, but no estimate of the number or the total amount involved was made public.

Jail a Treasonable Offense

Editors Advised to Be Careful

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A penitentiary sentence of from 10 to fifteen years is hanging over the head of every foreign correspondent in Germany and most of the newspaper men who printed the principle of the prosecution that it is a crime to publish any news dispatches of the activities of the Germany or for the discovery of hidden plots of the activities of German organizations like the Stahl Helmet and the Black Reichswehr, since by the publication of such information German spies might be brought into trouble with the German powers.

Such a ruling for TREASON

by his decision, establishes the remarkable paradox of a country exposing the secret activities of anti-Republican forces by publishing the secret plans of arms shipments of these organizations to the republic, because of treason to the republic, since it is an illegal monarchist organization within the Federal republic, which tried to disband

Ten-Year-Old Sammy Is Not Under Proper Guardian, Ruling of Court

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The Children's Court today placed Samuel Rzeochwski, 10-year-old chess wizard, on parole until the 30th inst., after he was arraigned on a charge of being without proper guardianship.

He was also held in $1000 bail as a material witness in connection with summonses issued for his parents and William Lowey, who are charged with violating the law pertaining to appearance of a minor as a public entertainer.

have enjoyed the countenance and protection of the local authorities.

The circumstances that the three culprits whom the court sentenced from ten to twelve years do not seem to have acted under entirely irreproachable motives, and that one, at least, resorted to faking his news do not impair the precedent and it is safe to say that there is not a foreign correspondent in Germany today, who has not rendered himself liable to a long term in the penitentiary for telegraphing news about the discovery of hidden cannon, as, for example, the attempt to conceal hundreds of howitzers in a factory in Saxony, the operations of the Bavarian home-guard forces, the mobilization of military organizations for the defense of Upper Silesia, etc.

CORRESPONDENTS WARNED

Even to report the subversive efforts of any monarchist organization is ruled qualifying for jail. A representative of the German Foreign Office told your correspondent in all seriousness today that he would advise him and all other foreign correspondents to keep outside the jurisdiction of the Bavarian court because it was impossible to tell how far the Bavarian authorities might go. At any moment they may nab a correspondent venturing into Bavaria and easily put together an indictment from which he could not escape.

ALLIED PRINTING MEN HAVE CLOSED SESSION

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW ORLEANS (La.) Oct. 23. After a brief session behind closed doors, the meeting of the board of governors of the International Allied Printing Trade Association adjourned today to meet in Indianapolis next February. Members of the board said that nothing of great importance had been taken up.

The governing board, through its secretary, declared that the forty-four-hour week was almost a complete success. Only a very few isolated spots, it said, remain using the forty-eight-hour week and these were declared to be rapidly disappearing.

El perro notó que su amo, que iba caminado detrás de Aerick, tropezaba y caía, disparándose al propio tiempo su rifle, cuyo proyectil penetró en la espalda de Aerick, quien, a su vez, daba en tierra. Loco de pesar, Freitag se mató allí mismo.

OWSLEY IS GREETED BY HIS HOME FOLKS

NEW LEGION COMMANDER HAS TO MAKE SPEECH IN TOWN SQUARE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENTON (Tex.) Oct. 23.—Col. Alvin Owsley, new national commander of the American Legion, came home today and received his greatest reward following his election of the New Orleans convention—a big hug from his mother and a hearty hand clasp from "Dad." Col. Owsley was greeted by the "Home folks" in regular small town fashion. Crowds filled the square, including a delegation from the local American Legion post, city officials and heads of civic organizations and students.

The new national commander was taken from an automobile in which he traveled from Dallas and carried by his enthusiastic townsmen to the Court House lawn, where the inevitable occurred—a speech. Col. Owsley was as visibly touched as when he came home to a similar welcome from the World War. "If there is any personal honor in my victory, I bring it now and lay it at your feet," he said.

Col Owsley has two speaking engagements tomorrow and will leave late in the day for Indianapolis, national headquarters of the American Legion.

Flower of the North

by James Oliver Curwood

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALLMENTS

Philip Whittemore, adventurer, conceives a plan to corner/monopolize the fish fishing concessions of a Canadian wilderness when he learns of the construction of a railroad which will cut the heart of a rich country filled with lakes and rivers. Bruce, Whittemore's deceased father's business partner, obtains a provisional license to operate the industry, and Whittemore goes north to take charge. In his absence Bruce organizes the Great Northern Fish and Development Company and sells a million and a quarter in stock. Whittemore returns and is enraged to find that this legitimate undertaking has been turned into a wholesale stock-jobbing scheme. Still hopeful that the business may prove profitable to its stockholders, he frames a plan for further development, and Bruce backs him with the company's funds. Whittemore returns north, broken versus him by falsified land deals that factions are planning to wreck the enterprise. Shortly after, two warehouses are burned. Tom Gregson, Whittemore's artist friend, joins him in the fight. Through the intercepting of a letter addressed to the mysterious Lord Fitzhugh Lee, who is directing the plot against them, they learn that their enemies are about to act. The following day Bruce and his daughter Eileen arrive in the north. That night Pierre Cloutier and his sister Jeanne, friends of Whittemore, en route to meet him at their forest residence, are attacked by unknown men assailants. In the fight that ensues Pierre is wounded. Whittemore answers to the shots and rescues, but the men escape, abducting Jeanne in their flight. Whittemore follows in pursuit.

Opposite the rock where Pierre and Jeanne were to have met him he stopped and stood up in the canoe. The wind had dispelled the smoke shadow. Between him and the distant ship lay an unclouded sea. Two-thirds of the distance to the vessel he made out the larger canoe, rising and falling with the smooth undulations of the tide. He sank upon his knees again and unstrapped Pierre's rifle. There was a cartridge in the chamber. He made sure that the magazine was loaded, and resumed his paddling.

His mind worked rapidly. Within half an hour, if he desired, he could overtake the other canoe. And what then? There were three to one, if it came to a fight—and how could he rescue Jeanne without a fight? His blood was pounding eagerly, almost with pleasure at the promise of what was ahead of him, and he laughed softly to himself as he thought of the odds.

The ship loomed nearer; the canoe vanished behind it. A brief stop, a dozen words of explanation, and Philip knew that he could secure assistance from the vessel. After all, would that not be the wisest course for him to pursue? For a moment he hesitated, and paddled more slowly. If others joined with him in the rescue of Jeanne what excuse could he offer for not bringing her back to Churchill? What would happen if he returned with her? Why had Pierre roused himself from something that was almost death to entreat him to take Jeanne to Fort o' God?

At the thought of Fort o' God a new strength leaped into his arms and body, urging him on to cope with the situation single-handed. If he rescued Jeanne alone, and went on with her as he had promised Pierre, many things that were puzzling him would be explained. It occurred to him again that Jeanne and Pierre might be the key to the mysterious plot that promised to crush out the life of the enterprise he had founded in the north. He found reasons for this belief. Why had Lord Fitzhugh's name had such a startling effect upon Pierre? Why was one of his assailants a man fresh from the London ship that had borne Eileen Brokaw and her father as pasengers? He felt that Jeanne could explain these things, as well as her brother. She could explain the strange scene on the pier, when for a moment she had stood crushed and startled before Eileen. She could clear up the mystery of Gregson's sketch, for if there were two Eileen Brokaws, Jeanne would know. With these arguments he convinced himself that he should go on alone. Yet, behind them there was another and more powerful motive. He confessed to himself that he would willingly accept double the chances against him to achieve Jeanne's rescue without assistance and to accompany her to Fort o' God. The thought of their being together, of the girl's companionship—perhaps for days—thrilled him with exquisite anticipation. An hour or so ago he had been satisfied in the assurance that he would see her for a few minutes on the cliff. Since then fate had played his way. Jeanne was his own, to save, to defend, to carry on to Fort o' God.

Not for a moment did he hesitate at the danger ahead of him, and yet his pursuit was filled with caution. Gregson, the diplomat, would have seen the necessity of halting at the ship for help; Philip was confident in himself. He knew that he would have at least three against him, for he was satisfied that the man whom he had wounded on the cliff was still in fighting trim. There might be others whom he had not taken into account.

He passed so close under the stern of the ship that his canoe scraped against her side. For a few minutes the vessel had obstructed his view, but now he saw again, a quarter of a mile distant, the craft which he was pursuing. Jeanne's captors were heading for the river, and as the canoe was now partly broadside to him he could easily make out the figures in her, but not distinctly enough to make sure of their number. He shoved out boldly into the moonlight, and, instead of following in his former course, he turned at a sharp angle in the direction of the shore. If the others saw him, which was probable, they would think that he was making a landing from the ship. Once he was in the deep fringe of shadow along the shore he could redouble his exertions and draw nearer to them without being observed.

No sooner had he reached the sheltering gloom than he bent to his paddle and the light birchbark fairly hissed through the water. Not until he found himself abreast of the pursued did it occur to him that he could beat them out to the mouth of the Churchill and lie in wait for them. Every stroke of his paddle widened the distance between him and the larger canoe. Fifteen minutes later he reached the edge of the huge delta of wild rice and reeds through which the sluggish volume of the river emptied into the Bay. The chances were that the approaching canoe would take the nearest channel into the main stream, and Philip concealed himself so that it would have to pass within twenty yards of him.

From this ambuscade he looked out upon the approaching canoe. He was puzzled by the slowness of its progress. At times it seemed to stand still, and he could distinguish no movement at all among its occupants. At first he thought they were undecided as to which course to pursue, but a few minutes more sufficed to show that this was not the reason for their desultory advance. The canoe was headed for the first channel. The solution came when a low but clear whistle signaled over the water. Almost instantly there came a responsive whistle from up the channel.

Philip drew a quick breath, and a new sensation brought his teeth together in sudden perplexity. It looked as though he had a bigger fight before him than he had anticipated.

At the signal from up-stream he heard the quick dip of paddles, and the canoe cut swiftly toward him. He drew back the hammer of Pierre's rifle, and cleared a little space through the reeds and grass so that his view into the channel was unobstructed. Three or four well-directed shots, a quick dash out into the stream, and he would possess Jeanne. This was his first thought. It was followed by others, rapid as lightning, that restrained his eagerness. The nightglow was treacherous to shoot by. What if he should miss, or hit Jeanne—or in the sudden commotion and destruction of his shots the canoe should be overturned? A single error, the slightest mishap to himself, would mean the annihilation of his hopes. Even if he succeeded in directing his shots with accuracy, both himself and Jeanne would almost immediately be under fire from those above.

He dropped back again behind the screen of reeds. The canoe drew nearer. A moment more and it was almost abreast of him, and his heart pounded like a swiftly beating hammer when he saw Jeanne in the stern. She was leaning back as though unconscious. He could see nothing of her face, but as the canoe passed within ten yards of his hiding-place he saw the dark glow of her disheveled hair, which fell thickly over the object against which she was resting. It was but a moment's view, and they were gone. He had not looked at the three men in the canoe. His whole being was centered upon Jeanne. He had seen no sign of life—no movement in her body, not the flutter of a hand, and all his fears leaped like brands of burning fire into his brain. He thought of the inhuman plot which Lord Fitzhugh's letter had revealed; in the same breath Pierre Couchee's words rang in his ears—"It is death—worse than death—for her—"

Was Jeanne the first victim of that diabolical scheme to awaken the wrath of the northland? In the madness which possessed him now Philip shoved out his canoe while there was still danger of discovery. Fortunately none of the pursued glanced back, and a turn in the channel soon hid them from view. Philip had recovered his self-possession by the time he reached the turn. He assured himself that Jeanne was unharmed as yet, and that when he saw her she had probably fainted from excitement and terror. Her fate still lay before her, somewhere in the deep and undisturbed forests up the Churchill. His one hope was to remain undiscovered and to rescue her at the last moment when she was taken ashore by her captors.

He followed, close up against the reeds, never trusting himself out of the shadows. After a little he heard voices, and a second canoe appeared. There was a short pause, and the two canoes continued side by side up the channel. A quarter of an hour brought both the pursuers and the pursued into the main stream, which lay in black gloom between forest walls that cut out all light but the shimmer of the stars.

No longer could Philip see those ahead of him, but he guided himself by occasional voices and the dip of paddles. At times, when the stream narrowed and the forest walls gave him deeper shelter, he drew perilously near with the hope of overhearing what was said, but he caught only an occasional word or two. He listened in vain for Jeanne's voice. Once he heard her name spoken, and it was followed by a low laugh from some one in the canoe that had waited at the mouth of the Churchill. A dozen times during the first half-hour after they entered the main stream Philip heard this same laughing voice.

After a time there fell a silence upon those ahead. No sound rose above the steady dip of paddles, and the speed of the two canoes increased. Suddenly, from far up the river, there came a voice, faintly at first, but growing steadily louder, singing one of the wild half-breed songs of the forest. The voice broke the silence of those in the canoes. They ceased paddling, and Philip stopped. He heard low words, and after a few moments the paddling was resumed, and the canoes turned in toward the shore. Philip followed their movement, dropping fifty yards farther down the stream, and thrust his birchbark alongside a thick balsam that had fallen into the river.

The singing voice approached rapidly. Five minutes later a long company canoe floated down out of the gloom. It passed so near that Philip could see the picturesque figure in the stern paddling and singing. In the bow kneeled an Indian working in stoic silence. Between them, in the body of the canoe, sat two men whom he knew at a glance were white men. The strangers and their craft slipped by with the quickness of a shadow.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY

MOTORISTS DRIVE OVER REMAINS BELIEVING IT TO BE STRAW EFFIGY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—From dusk yesterday evening until daylight this morning the body of Miss Marie Carlson of Batavia, Ill., lay on the Lincoln Highway near that town, the plaything of many passing motorists. The drivers of passing cars thought the limp bundle a straw effigy thrown on the highway by mischievous boys so they speeded up and ran over it.

Miss Cora Jensen, a resident of Batavia, passing that way on foot early this morning, was horrified to discover the mangled body. She summoned help and an examination showed that every bone in the victim's body had been broken and her flesh had been churned to jelly by the hundreds of wheels passing over her.

Identification was difficult, owing to the mutilation of the face and body, but inquiry and examination of the clothes established the remains as those of Miss Carlson, who had been employed as a maid in the home of H. P. Zimmerman. She was on her way to visit a friend, it is thought, when a car struck her and sped on, leaving her the target for other cars all of the night.

INDIAN BOY ON WAR PATH

Seeks Life of Rival After Quarrel at Dance

Kills Owner of Home Where Merrymakers Gathered

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 23.—Angered because he had been sent home to bed following a quarrel with another lad, Diego Gomez, aged 12 years, of the Indian reservation at Tejon, returned to the home of Victor Cordero, also a resident of the reservation and fired a shot that fatally wounded Peter Cordero. Cordero died a short time after being taken to the County Hospital early yesterday morning by representatives of the Sheriff's office.

Gomez is now in the County Jail awaiting the result of a Coroner's inquest, which is under way today at the reservation. Information charging Gomez with the murder of Cordero was made this morning before Justice of the Peace F. W. Bunnell by Victor Cordero, brother of the slain man.

Sheriff D. B. Newell went to the scene of the shooting this afternoon to make a personal investigation of the tragedy.

According to Deputy Sheriffs C. B. Stapp and D. P. Feely, who went to Tejon reservation early yesterday morning, following a telephone call to the Sheriff's office, the shooting took place shortly before midnight at the home of Cordero, where a dance had been in progress throughout the evening.

When another lad obtained a dance, which Gomez claimed as his, it is said, they became involved in a bitter quarrel which ended only when relatives of the latter interfered and sent him home with instructions to go to bed.

Gomez left the place, according to information given the officers, vowing vengeance on his rival. The quarrel was forgotten in a few minutes, however, by the other dancers and order was restored.

The dancers were at the height of their pleasure when bullets began to fly through the windows of the house and the crack of a Winchester .44-caliber rifle put an end to the revelry.

Rushing to the door, Peter Cordero fell, mortally wounded through the body. Others pushed over his prostrate form to where the Gomez lad was standing, the rifle still in his hands, it is said. He was seized and taken into the house where relatives of Cordero had already given the injured man what attention was possible.

Word of the shooting was immediately telephoned to the Sheriff's office here, and Deputies Stapp and Feely rushed to the scene in an automobile. When they arrived at the reservation, Cordero was found to be in a serious condition and without waiting to make a thorough investigation of the shooting, they placed the injured man in the machine and made a record-breaking run back to the County Hospital. Little could be done for the wounded man, however, and his death took place in a short time.

Later the deputies returned to the reservation and brought Gomez to jail. He refused to talk or to attempt an explanation of the shooting.

ONTARIO GIRL IS MISSING

Young Miss Located by Her Mother Saturday Again Disappears

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 23.—Lou Dell Stephens, pretty 16-year-old Ontario girl, who ran away from her home, 535 West Park street, a week ago, only to be found Saturday by her mother, has again disappeared. The girl's mother, Mrs. Mabel Stephens, agreed, upon the girl's promise to make good, that she might remain at the home of Mrs. E. Paul Young, 182 North Alexandria street, Los Angeles, with whom she had found employment.

Mrs. Young telephoned Mrs. Stephens this morning that the girl had remained out all night, and when she returned at 6 o'clock this morning and was taken to task, she promptly gathered her clothing together and departed. The girl failed to disclose to her mother Saturday during a telephone conversation, the address of Orilla Mortensen, the other Ontario girl who disappeared last week, or that of the latter's elder sister, Agnes Mortensen, who is said to be employed as a domestic in a Los Angeles home and who is said to have aided the two younger girls in their plans to run away from home.

It was said this afternoon that a charge of contributing to the delinquency of minors may be filed against the elder Mortensen girl. Both the runaways are said to be anxious to get into moving pictures and it was learned today that Miss Stephens, without the knowledge of her mother, has already appeared in pictures with Antonio Moreno, well known star, and is said to have been offered a contract for screen work which she was unable to accept when her mother refused to give her consent.

Auto Driver Charged With Intoxication

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 23.—Earl Chamberlain of Los Angeles is held in the Upland Jail today, following his arrest on a charge of driving a motor car while intoxicated. His preliminary examination has been set for Thursday before Judge George R. Crane.

H. B. Todd of Niland, who was Chamberlain's companion, was found guilty of intoxication and paid a fine of $30. The two were arrested after Chamberlain was said to have wrecked his car by attempting to drive it through a blockade into a closed street at Tenth street and Central avenue.

Early in the day the car struck a machine driven by J. H. Stokesbury, 705 North San Antonio avenue, Ontario, and when the Ontario man asked their names he is said to have been knocked down by Todd.

FIND MAN'S BODY

Officers Investigate Cause of Contractor's Death

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA ANA, Oct. 23.—Officers of San Diego and Orange counties today started an investigation into the cause of the death of Frank Smedley, 1218 West Broadway, Anaheim, a well-known cement contractor, whose body was found in Lake Hodges, near San Diego.

According to reports, Smedley, accompanied by Miss Adele Dalton of San Diego, motored to the lake, where he left the young woman in his machine and went duck hunting. When he did not return Miss Dalton became alarmed and a searching party was organized last night.

Marks were found on Smedley's body and the officers are puzzled as to their cause, unless they are from violence, or possibly from the grappling hook used in the search for the body.

He is survived by his wife, Irene Smedley of Anaheim.

THEATER SAFE CARRIED AWAY

Daring Long Beach Theft Brings Arrests

Former Policeman Accused of Complicity

One of Trio Confesses, Say Officials

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 23.—A former Long Beach police officer and two companions are being held by local police today following the looting of the box office of the Laughlin Theater early this morning and the carrying off of a safe containing nearly $1000.

The prisoners against whom charges of burglary are to be filed, according to Captain of Detectives Robberson, are Clay D. Bizzant, until recently a patrolman in the city service; Bruce Paul, 23 years old, of 624 Pacific avenue, and Roy W. Wessels, 23 years old, of the Pine Inn.

SAFE TAKEN AWAY

The theft was committed sometime between 2 and 5 a.m., today, according to the police. The burglars, after secreting themselves in the theater building earlier in the evening, pried off the lock on the office door after E. V. Tracey manager of the playhouse, left the building. The safe, a 300-pound affair, was taken from the building and removed to some other place where it was broken open and the contents removed. In addition to more than $950 in cash, the safe contained a number of valuable papers, Tracey told the police.

One of the trio under arrest is said by Capt. Robberson to have made a partial confession, naming the other two as companions in the burglary and safe looting. When searched Bizzant had $220 in his possession. The other two each had a large sum of money.

WELCOME VISITOR

Bizzant, who recently resigned from the police force to go into the garage business, sold his interest in a garage on Pacific avenue a short time ago and has not been employed since, police say. He has been a frequent and welcome visitor at the Laughlin Theater for several months and was in the office of the theater chatting with Manager Tracey and a number of friends until a late hour last night, Tracey said.

Capt. Robberson and Detectives Gott, Kane and Alyes, together with Motorcycle Officers Hanner and Woods, are credited with rapid work in clearing up the burglary case. Within three hours after the robbery was reported at police headquarters this morning the accused men were in custody. Detectives are trying to find the stolen safe.

Police detectives searching the water front late this afternoon discovered the safe looted from the theater buried in the sand near Alamitos Bay. Near the safe the officers also uncovered a sack containing $230 in silver. According to the officers the safe was thrown into the sea at high tide and was covered with water for a number of hours.

Manslaughter Trial Opens at Santa Ana

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA ANA, Oct. 23.—Peyton Gibson, Hollywood aviator charged with involuntary manslaughter, went to trial today in Department Two of the Superior Court. The hearing will be resumed tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The charge grew out of an accident on the strand at Huntington Beach, July 9, when Gibson's plane, in making a landing, struck and fatally injured Miss Anna Feichlin of San Francisco, who died on the way to the hospital.

Most of this morning was consumed in selecting a jury and this afternoon several witnesses testified regarding the circumstances of the accident. Gibson was accompanied to the courtroom by his mother, Mrs. Archie Gibson; his grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Peyton, and an aunt, Miss D. C. Peyton, all of Hollywood.

MAD DOG SCARE

Orange County Officials Consider Canine Quarantine

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA ANA, Oct. 23.—A campaign to eradicate an epidemic of so-called rabies among the canine population of Orange county is under way today, with all county and municipal officials co-operating. E. H. Wilkins, County Veternarian, is directing the campaign and indicated that a county-wide quarantine is in prospect when all stray dogs may be killed on sight and all other dogs must be kept on leash for at least two weeks.

The disease, it is said, was brought from Los Angeles several weeks ago, and its effect has spread to Fullerton, Brea, Santa Ana and Huntington Beach. Wilkins himself was compelled to undergo treatment after being bitten by a cow at Delhi, which was believed infected, and three Mexican residents are now undergoing treatment.

At Huntington Beach City Marshal Tinsley is said to have killed fifty stray dogs. Several dogs were killed at Delhi Saturday and residents of this Mexican settlement were advised to keep their animals tied up.

TAUNTS LEAD TO KILLING

Enraged Husband Clubs Wife to Death

Professed Love for Youthful Suitor is Cause

Tears Clothing of Intruder Into Shreds

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

FRESNO (Cal.) Oct. 23. — Taunted by his young wife's profession of affection for a 19-year-old youth found in his place when he returned home unexpectedly at 4 a.m. yesterday, George T. Harlow, North Fork power-house operator, near here, clubbed the wife to death and slashed up clothing left behind by the fleeing youth.

He was driven frantic by the wife, Harlow said, when she stood in front of him and calmly asked him: "How do you like it?"

Harlow is being held in the Madera County Jail by Sheriff John Barnet while Dist.-Atty. Mason A. Dailey determines what action to take as a result of the verdict of the Coroner's jury that the slaying was "justifiable homicide."

YOUTH IN JAIL

In another cell is the youth, H. C. Blanchard. He is being held partly for his own safety and partly while the authorities determine if action can be brought against him.

The authorities rushed to North Fork and immediately held an inquest, townspeople and neighbors of the couple being on the jury. After a short deliberation they brought in the verdict which has disturbed the authorities.

The dead woman, who was just 18 and the mother of a 3-year-old baby, had attended a dance while her husband worked and was escorted home at midnight by the youth. They had been friendly some time, witnesses told the Coroner.

CAME HOME EARLY

About 4 o'clock yesterday morning, Harlow, feeling ill, left his work and went to his home. He says that in groping about the darkened bedroom, he came upon the sleeping form of Blanchard, who fled while he went to the front of the house for a shotgun.

The discharge of the gun was accidental, the lawyer says. The woman was not shot. After the wife had admitted her relations with the youth and taunted him with her affections, Harlow says he struck at her blindly with the shotgun, smashing the stock.

As she turned and fled, he followed, belaboring her with the barrel of the heavy gun until she fell at his feet.

WAS DRIVEN MAD

"I didn't mean to kill her—I just realized that something terrible had happened and I went mad," he declared this afternoon.

"She stood in front of me when I asked, 'How long has this been going on?'

"I became blind with rage when she smiled and said: 'Long enough. How do you like it?'"

Harlow then returned to the home and found portions of the clothing left behind by the youth when he fled. He slashed them with a large knife and was wrecking the furniture and dismantling the house when neighbors took him into custody.

Harlow, who is just twelve years his wife's senior, and the dead woman, were married at Eureka when the girl was 14 years old. She lived with her father, F. L. Orr, at Rogue River, Or., until coming here a few months ago.

ELSINORE IS THREATENED BY FLAMES

Plunge and Auditorium Destroyed; Sugar Loaf Fire Extinguished

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 23. — Amsbury plunge and auditorium at Elsinore, thirty miles southeast of here, was destroyed by fire this afternoon. The loss is estimated at $12,000. The business section of Elsinore was saved only by the quick work of fire fighters and the organization of a bucket brigade of 300 men from Elsinore, Perris and Alberhill.

Workmen were tarring the roof of the auditorium when it caught fire. Within a few minutes the entire building was in flames and in twenty minutes it was practically in ashes. Sparks flying in all directions ignited the roofs of a dozen cottages and other nearby buildings.

The brush fire on Sugar Loaf Mountain at High Grove, three miles north of Riverside, was extinguished early this morning after 250 acres of watershed had been destroyed. Valuable orange groves and bee colonies in the vicinity of the fire escaped destruction.

"HONEYMOON" LINER SAILS

Newlyweds Are on Maiden Trip to Hawaii

Louis Lissner and Bride Happy Voyagers

President Harrison Departs With Eighty Passengers

A honeymoon ship is the giant Shipping Board liner President Harrison, this morning steaming westward through sunlit seas on her maiden voyage to Hawaii. The big craft sailed from Los Angeles Harbor at noon yesterday, and the centers of attraction for all her holiday crowd were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lissner, newlyweds.

Mr. Lissner is the son of Meyer Lissner, California member of the United States Shipping Board, while his bride, formerly Miss Myna Eisner, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Eisner. Both young people are socially prominent in this city and have many friends throughout the Southland's younger set.

Mr. and Mrs. Lissner came overland from Washington, D. C., last week for their son's wedding, while the bride's parents were also at the Los Angeles Steamship Terminal yesterday to wish the couple a joyous honeymoon voyage. They occupy the bridal suite on the President Harrison and after a week's visit at Honolulu will return on the same vessel.

ON MAIDEN VOYAGE

The President Harrison went out yesterday on her maiden voyage in the service of the Los Angeles Steamship Company, with her passenger accommodations filled to capacity. Eighty happy travelers lined her starboard rail as she dropped down the main channel, her flags standing out stiffly under the brisk westerly breeze.

Capt. N. H. Anderson, port captain of the operating company, was on the bridge of the President Harrison when she sailed yesterday. He is making the single trip to Honlulu to better acquaint himself with terminal conditions at the Hawaiian port and Capt. Harry R. Lester is thus afforded to rest up for a month after the ordeal of the City of Honolulu fire.

Officials of the Los Angeles Steamship Company announced yesterday that arrangements are being made for the permanent location of a steamer for the Los Angeles-Honolulu service, after the arrival of which vessel the President Harrison will be turned back to the Shipping Board.

PASSENGER LIST

Among the prominent passengers sailing yesterday on the President Harrison are:

Mrs. Edith Anderson and son Riley of Watts, C. B. Becker and wife, Fred Bowman, E. F. Brittingham, Mrs. Bernice Crail and daughter, Miss Gladys, all of Los Angeles.

A. W. Gillis and wife, Miss Elizabeth Gillis, Robert Stuart Gillis of Honolulu, J. H. Gale of Los Angeles, Mrs. Alice L. Hall and daughters, Misses Elisabeth and Catherine of Long Beach, Miss Lillian Starrett of Waukegan, Ill.

Arthur Henderson and wife and daughter, Miss Carroll of Long Beach, C. W. Keaney of Honolulu.

PORT NOTES

News of the long overdue schooner Alert will be brought to Los Angeles Harbor today by the steamer Sinaloa, in ballast from Kobe, Japan. The Sinaloa sighted the Alert last Friday in latitude 46 degrees, 43 minutes north, longitude 141 degrees, 39 minutes west, en route from Frisco to the South Seas, with a cargo of coal. The Alert had not been spoken for more than 180 days and her consort, the E. K. Wood Lumber Company, had feared the big windjammer was lost.

Arriving here at daylight this morning the Sinaloa will load 90,000 barrels of fuel oil at the Standard Oil terminal for the Orient, while tomorrow her sister ship, the Tasculan, will arrive in ballast from Hongkong to load out for the Far East.

The British freighter Cardiganshire, in the Extra-Pacific service of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Line, arrived at the port early today from Antwerp and London. The big liner had a costly fire in her holds on the 19th inst., but a survey of the damage by Lloyd's representative shows that little Los Angeles cargo was touched by the flames. The Cardiganshire sailed for the north late last night.

As long as disposal of cargo is interfered with at Philadelphia because of a longshoremen's strike recently called at that port, the Lorchenbach Line will divert freight via New York, according to word received here last night.

The ships will receive Philadelphia cargo at both ends of its trade route, however, westbound cargoes being sent by rail to New York and thus from the Pacific Coast being handled in the same way.

Ships are being worked at Philadelphia at present in spite of the strike, although with limited forces, and it is promised that there will be no material delays as to shipments except when the strike was precipitated. The company, however, has decided to forego sails pending a settlement of the trouble.

The Crowell & Thurlow liner William A. McKenzie arrived yesterday from New York on her first visit westbound since she was in ballast two months ago with the Japanese passenger liner Shoyo Maru, from this port for Honolulu. The William A. McKenzie brought a large consignment of east coast finished products for Los Angeles.

BUSINESS NEWS OF BUSY MARTS

Shoe Market Survey Shows Interesting Trend

Prices Stiffen to Meet Quality Demand

Chicago Omelets Cost Less Than in Los Angeles

Discrimination as to quality rather than price is the prevailing tendency in the retail shoe trade in Los Angeles, where dealers assert that both men and women are evincing marked interest in higher priced goods this season as contrasted with last year. Buyers are demanding new and novel styles in footwear, and at the same time are insisting that the goods are made of fine leather, rather than of the cheaper grades of skins that were worked into the finished product during the previous season. This tendency toward higher priced goods is caused primarily, in the opinion of one of the leading shoe merchants in this city, by the fact that prices are about one-third less than those prevailing last year.

With the fall and winter trade well under way, prices are now beginning to stiffen slightly, although dealers do not anticipate any material advances. Manufacturers have raised their quotations to dealers on an average of 25 cents a pair, but as yet, the retail consumer has not been asked to accept this increase. A further stiffening of prices will probably obtain before the season is over, as the public begins to buy with its customary confidence, but the rise in price will proceed slowly.

Sales of women's shoes are mounting rapidly, and in Los Angeles, are an especially important part of the season's revenues. A 30 per cent increase in business over last year is reported by one merchant with a clientele composed largely of the exclusive trade. Purchases are being confined principally to black satin, patent leather and black suede low shoes, for both street and evening wear, with a heel higher than that in fashion last season. Heels considered fashionable now range from one and three-fourths to two and one-eighth inches in height. The colonial affect in tongues is predominating, ornamented with cut steel or rhinestone buckles, ranging in price from $2.50 to $75 a pair. Shoe prices run from $3.50 to $35 a pair, exclusive of the buckles.

Second to black as the popular color are light shades of brown, confined chiefly to otter and beaver skins. Bronze is also in vogue, but grays are lighter in this color. Black satin and silver pumps are commanding the greatest amount of attention for evening wear, and as in street wear, open work models are in heavy demand.

Men's shoe prices range from $9 to $15, and pigskin, calfskin and Scotch grain leathers are the most popular in the oxfords. Shark-skin leather is a favorite in the novelty models, with a wide selection of colors available.

NO SURPLUS HERE

Los Angeles egg dealers are emphatic in stating that egg prices will descend to levels now prevailing in Chicago, where it is reported that increased activity of the hens has forged dealers to quote prices around 37 cents a dozen for fresh eggs. Prices on the Los Angeles Produce Exchange for fresh eggs yesterday were quoted at 62 cents, with expectations that quotations would gradually work higher because of the demand for California eggs in eastern markets. California white eggs are selling in New York at 85 cents a dozen and there is an equally strong demand in Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia, the principal primary markets in the country.

Officials of the Los Angeles Produce Exchange are at loss to explain the anomalous condition in the Chicago market, although they state that the eggs produced in the sections contiguous to that city are reputed to be of inferior quality, as evidenced by the prices paid for California eggs in eastern markets. Statistics of egg receipts reported in Chicago dispatches are cited here as absurd, and fail to indicate a surplus.

There is no likelihood of a shortage in Los Angeles this season, as supplies are estimated to be adequate to care for the 2,000,000 people normally supplied by Southern California egg men. Eggs in storage now are about 100,000 cases, and weekly consumption runs around 14,000 cases weekly, which in the opinion of dealers, presages no shortage before the beginning of the next season.

ACQUIRES ROYALTIES

United States Royalties, listed on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, has acquired a 60 per cent royalty interest in a well spudded in yesterday on Block 84 in the Santa Fe Springs field. The company announces its intention to drill to the Meyer sand, which is estimated to be about 3700 or 4000 feet deep, and below the Bell sand on which the majority of the Santa Fe Springs companies are operating. Only three other wells are said to be pumping the black fluid from the Meyer sand.

The company has also purchased a 4 1-6 royalty in the Leonard-Jones producing well on Block 83, and a similar interest in the MacIntyre well to be drilled.

NEW MEMBER

Thomas Beyrle, Van Nuys Building, has purchased a seat on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, according to an announcement made by the secretary of the exchange yesterday.

NEW UTILITY ISSUE

A syndicate composed of Blyth, Witter & Co., M. M. Byllesby & Co. and Cyrus Peirce & Co. if offering $5,000,000 Western States Gas and Electric Company fifteen-year 6 per cent gold notes, series A, due 1937. The notes are offered at 96 and interest, to yield about 6.40 per cent. The proceeds from the sale of the issue will be used to provide funds to complete the extension of the company's hydroelectric developments and also to refund $2,668,000 ten-year 6 per cent notes and $1,199,000 five-year 6½ per cent collateral trust notes.

NEW YORK BOND QUOTATIONS

Prices Irregular

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Price changes in today's bond market were irregular but the main trend was decidedly downward in sympathy with the movement in stocks.

Although bid and asked prices were generally lower apart, foreign bonds moved within comparatively narrow limits. Changes for a point or more in Anglo-American Tobs. French bonds held up well in the face of a sharp reaction in sterling, but Italian issues were heavy. Liberties and issues being registered in fractions. Mid the decline in rails were Erie Rys. This stock gave evidence of a good technical position.

Losses of a point or more were quite common in the railroad list, some of the prominent ones being Louisville and Nashville unified 4s, Ann Arbor 4s, Rio Grande Western collateral trust 4s, Minneapolis-St. Louis refunding 5s, Cleveland Cincinnati Chicago & St. Louis general 4s, Coast Line first 4s, at off 1½ to 2 points. Northern Pacific and Western convertible 4s, however, moved up 2 points in response to the strength in the stock of the road, buying being based on expectation of a higher dividend at tomorrow's meeting of directors. Gains also were made in New York, Chicago and St. Louis debenture 4s, Cuba Railroad 5s, Denver and Rio Grande refunding 5s, Lehigh Valley collateral 6s and Baltimore and Ohio gold 4s. Industrials of a quiet on the reorganization plan of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company required earnings of 1 to 5½ points in the various liens of that utility.

Industrial mortgages moved in the same general manner as the railroad liens. Gruhler Copper Company 8s, Barnsdall Refining Corporation 8s, Tidewater Oil gold 6s, Republic Steel 7s and Standard Milling 6s and Baltimore Gas and Electric gold 5s, indications of a quiet on the reorganization plan of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company required earnings of 1 to 5½ points in the various liens of that utility.

THE COUNTRY OVER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Oct. 23. — Merchants here are preparing for and are experiencing a most satisfactory fall trade and the increased purchasing power of the public is plainly in evidence. Premiums continue to be paid for bricklayers and plasterers, because of the great amount of building construction in progress, but in other lines wages seem well stabilized. Leading department stores say their turnover is 20 to 25 per cent higher than at this time last year. New lumber business booked in the last week in this territory is 25 per cent below production. This is due to car shortage.

CLEVELAND (O.) Oct. 23. — Cleveland automobile manufacturers are not disturbed over the latest price reduction announced by Henry Ford. Local manufacturers say Ford actually is following rather than leading in price reductions. George Graham, vice-president of the Chandler Motor Car Company, said Chandler and its affiliated company, the Cleveland Motor, joined the general price-cutting movement early in August and that the Ford cut corresponds to that made by the general trade two months ago. Steel manufacturers here are handicapped by car shortage and many are shipping sheets in gondolas covered with tarpaulin, because of inability to get box cars.

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Oct. 23. The first real frosts of the season in Missouri, Kansas and surrounding territory have stimulated the growth of retail business. Kansas City stores and wholesale houses report a steady increase of buying.

COTTON MARKET ABSORBS SELLING

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Movements in cotton futures today were irregular, with steady undertone. A good deal of realizing came into the market early, but the absorbing power displayed was sufficiently strong to prevent any sharp declines, gains and losses being about evenly divided up to noontime. Demand came chiefly from Liverpool, Continental mills and Wall street, while selling was largely profit-taking from old longs and southern interests. In the face of greatly increased selling for the account of old longs, now taking profits and for Wall-street bear interests, the market stood up very well all day. Declines in no case exceeded 25 points, and there were frequent slight rallies from the day's low. Business was active and broad and the close was about 3 to 10 points up from the low and 12 to 15 points under Saturday's final bids.

Spot was quiet, 25.75, 20 points decline for middling upland.

Sundry markets: Galveston, 25.50c, 15 points decline; New Orleans, 25.10c, 12 points advance; Savannah, 25.25c, 15 points decline; Memphis, No. 2, 25 points advance; Houston, 25.10c, 15 points decline; Little Rock, 25.25c, unchanged.

RIGHT TO SELL STOCK GIVEN GAS COMPANY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation was authorized by the Railroad Commission today to issue $3,000,000 of its 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock to pay in part of the cost of additions and extensions to the company's plants.

The Railroad Commission will not divide an operative right for an automobile transportation line, it announced in a decision today, denying the application of David Schmidt and F. K. Emich for authority to split their truck lines from Fresno to Cutler into two routes between Fresno and Cutler and Fresno and Dinuba.

LONDON EXCHANGE TENDS TO FIRMNESS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The stock exchange was business to harden at the opening but the demand was rather small and after a time most of the early improvement was lost although there were still indications of firmness. British funds on the gilt-edge market, after an initial advance, slipped back. In foreign bonds French issues were weak with the unofficial fall in exchange. Home rails displayed irregular features, dollar rails were firm and foreign rails irregular. Industrials were generally neglected but iron, steel and engineering firmed up. The oil market was depressed due to Paris offerings of stock. Mexican Eagle, 2 27-32; Shell, 6¼; Royal Dutch, 36¾. African Mining had strong spots. American issues improved.

Loanable credit in Lombard street was fairly stringent and as much as 2 per cent was paid for overnight money while futures were refused at 1½ per cent. Bar silver is quoted 3s 15-16d and 3s¾ for spot and forward delivery. Foreign exchanges: New York, 4.45¾ to 4.45¾; Paris, 61.35 to 61.45; Berlin, 17,000 to 18,500.

DAILY TRADE TALK

Views of Well-informed Men on Tax Exemption and Business Expansion

The most interesting developments in yesterday's boring into the business and financial affairs of the community and the country came in the form of statements from two leaders who advanced in their own way arguments of vital interest to every one who follows the trade cycle. One of these had to do with the agitation for a law to make public all income tax returns, and the other contains the impression left upon the mind of a well known Los Angeles banker as the result of a trip through the financial centers of the country.

Robert F. Purvis, formerly acting secretary of the Board of Federal Tax Reviewers in discussing the income tax publicity declared it to be the opinion of noted economists "that Congress will recognize the serious consequences of a law that would permit the publication of income tax returns. No thoughtful body of men could sanction such a revolutionary measure, the dire effect of which is so apparent to all businessmen. The government now exercises the right to examine the books and records of all taxpayers, but to make such intimate matters accessible to the public at large would accomplish no useful purpose and would result in great harm to business in general. It would not prevent the filing of dishonest returns, in fact, it would tend to greatly increase dishonesty in reporting profits.

STOCK DIVIDENDS.

"The recent declaration of a 700 per cent stock dividend by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has occasioned considerable comment in the public press, but it should be understood that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has paid full taxes upon all of its taxable earnings since the passage of the income tax law in 1913. The declaration of dividends, whether payable in stock or cash, will have no bearing whatsoever upon the income tax to be paid by the corporation for this or any other year. The corporation income tax is computed on the net earnings of the corporation and it must be paid by the corporation, regardless of any distribution to its stockholders.

"The Supreme Court has held that Congress has no power to tax, as income of the stockholder, a stock dividend made lawfully and in good faith against profits accumulated by the corporation. Prior to this Supreme Court decision, the Treasury Department had consistently assessed and collected individual surtaxes on stock dividends distributed to stockholders, but it has since been required to refund such taxes which were held to have been illegally collected.

ACCUMULATED PROFITS

"The accumulation of profits by a corporation is not illegal unless it can be shown that such accumulation is beyond the reasonable needs of the business. Section 220 of the Revenue Act prescribes that where gains and profits are in any case permitted to accumulate and become surplus, it shall not be construed as evidence of a purpose to prevent the imposition of the surtax upon its stockholders unless the Commissioner of Internal Revenue certifies that, in his opinion, such accumulation is unreasonable for the purposes of the business.

"The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey had accumulated over $200,000,000 of surplus before the passage of the income tax law in 1913. This amount would not have been subject to surtax in the hands of stockholders even if distributed in cash instead of in the form of a stock dividend. The remainder of the 400 per cent stock dividend represents accumulations of profits since 1913 which have been retained in the business to provide for reasonable industrial growth. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has found no evidence of the accumulation of surplus beyond the reasonable needs of the business and has conceded the soundness of the principle that it is impractical for an active corporation to distribute all the net earnings in cash dividends to the stockholders.

"When the stockholders realize a profit from the sale of the stock received by them in this stock dividend, such profit will be subject to income tax in the year in which the sale is consummated. Therefore, there is no evasion of tax even on the part of the stockholders, the tax merely being deferred until an actual profit is realized by them."

FLINT MAKES SURVEY

Motley H. Flint, Los Angeles executive vice-president of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, returned yesterday from an examination made of business conditions in New England and the North Central States where he made a survey of manufacturing conditions, and from a visit through the agricultural districts of Iowa, Missouri and Kansas. In addition Mr. Flint inquired into the financial situation of the country at New York and Boston.

"This winter," he said, "will be the greatest that Southern California has ever had if present conditions are maintained. Canada will send us thousands of winter visitors and to help this out the Pacific-Southwest Bank will par Canadian exchange in order that this factor may not interfere with the winter movement. Already the trains from Seattle are loaded and the movement is beginning from the Middle West with trains already running in two sections.

"The farmers of Iowa have turned the corner and this year will make a little money from their crops and the same situation holds throughout the agricultural districts. Cotton is up and that will affect the movement of people from the Texas-Oklahoma districts."

BETTER BUSINESS

"The main trouble in the East lies in the fact that the railroads cannot take care of the traffic demands. With a summer strike the buyers held up on their Christmas orders, and then, with the settlement of that difficulty, flooded the factories with orders. The factories now have difficulty in getting raw materials and shipping finished goods. This means, however, that the psychology of the nation is tending toward better business with increased optimism.

"There is nothing in the way of prosperity on this Coast in so far as the East is concerned for there are only two types of people left in the East—those coming to California and those who want to come.

"I had a long talk with some of the best bankers in Chicago less than a week ago and the feeling is implanted in the minds of the financial leaders of the country that even the difficulties of Europe cannot prevent a betterment of American business conditions."

WHEAT AND CORN PRICES INCREASE

ADVANCE LARGELY DUE TO OVERSELLING BY TRADE AT LOW LEVELS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23. — Wheat prices have advanced 17 1-8 cents and corn 17 3-8 cents for December from the low point of the season, with a reaction of 6 1-4 cents on wheat and 3 3-8 cents on corn from the high point. Oats have advanced 10 1-8 cents, with a reaction of 2 3-4 cents.

The main basis for the advance was largely the overselling by the trade in general at low levels and advance in cash premiums to abnormal figures, due to transportation difficulties. There has been a partial readjustment of premiums and while the markets are regarded as two-sided for the present there is an undertone of confidence among the trade in general that prices will ultimately work higher. At the finish practically all the advance of the week had been lost.

The reason for expecting higher prices later in the season is the free marketing of winter wheat early and the recent record movement of spring wheat on both sides of the international line, with only small accumulations. A shortage of 250,000,000 bushels wheat and nearly 100,000,000 bushels rye in European importing countries, as a result of this year's harvest, is the basis for much of the optimism in the wheat trade. Indications are that all of the 450,000,000 bushels' surplus of United States and Canada, as well as that from crops in Australia and Argentina, will be wanted before another harvest. What this will mean in prices is problematical, but the impression is that wheat should go above $1.25, and there is a disposition to buy on all breaks.

Taking the estimates of European crops of 775,000,000 bushels, against 997,000,000 bushels last year, importing countries will have to buy around 755,000,000 bushels if they consume as much as last year. Whether they continue consumption at a high rate is dependent upon their financial ability to buy. Viewed from the present standpoint, supplies will be fairly consumed, and the carry-over at the end of the season may be small.

Transportation is a big factor, particularly in the export trade, at present. Indications are that Eastern lake ports will get more cars and that grain will be moved to Atlantic ports in larger volume, which will enable exporters to fill their sales, relieve the congestion and reduce cash premiums.

Lake rates are so high that grain is going all-rail to the seaboard at a relatively cheaper rate than by water. There is so much grain at lake ports that it may be difficult to clean up before the close of navigation, so that liberal shipments all-rail from the west may be expected to continue.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF SAN FRANCISCO, TRUSTEE

Western States Gas and Electric Company, or its predecessors, has been successfully engaged in business in California for 34 years. (Upon completion present financing)

Fifteen-year Gold Notes, 6%, Series "A," due 1937 (this issue)	5,000,000

Common Stock	3,231,500

*$1,734,000 additional First and Refunding Mortgage 5 per cent Bonds are deposited as additional security for the First and Unified Mortgage Bonds.

The Company's present electric business exceeds the output of its water power and steam generating electric capacity to an extent that necessitates the purchase of a large amount of power from outside sources. In order to replace this power purchased from other companies, as well as to provide for immediate and future power demands, the Company is engaged in the construction of a hydro-electric plant with an initial capacity of 20,000 k.w., on the south fork of the American River, which it is estimated will be in operation in the latter part of 1923. The Company has recently sold $5,000,000 of its First and Unified Mortgage Bonds, the proceeds from which are being used in the construction of this hydro-electric plant.

The proceeds from the present issue of these Notes will provide funds for extensions and additions to the properties, and for the redemption of $2,668,000 Ten-year 6% Gold Notes, and $1,190,000 Five-year 6½% Collateral Trust Notes, which latter notes constitute in effect a mortgage lien, inasmuch as they are secured by $1,724,000 First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Bonds, which will be released and pledged under the mortgage securing the First and Unified Mortgage Bonds.

Net earnings for the year 1922 (with three months estimated) are approximately 1.94 times the annual interest requirements on the outstanding First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Bonds and on this issue of Fifteen-year Gold Notes, 6%, Series "A."

The interest on $5,000,000 First and Unified Mortgage Bonds is being included, during the period of construction of the new hydro-electric development, in construction cost. Average annual net earnings during the last four-year period (with three months of 1922 estimated) have been in excess of the annual interest requirements on all bonds now outstanding and the present issue of Fifteen-year Gold Notes, without allowance for the estimated increase of $400,000 in annual net earnings to result from the substitution of power that will be generated in the new hydro-electric plant for power now purchased.

The Trust Agreement under which the Notes will be issued will permit the issuance of additional Notes in series, bearing interest at such rate and redeemable at such price as may be determined by the directors of the Company. Such additional Notes may be issued only when earnings, as defined in the Trust Agreement, shall for twelve consecutive months ending not more than 60 days prior to application for the issue of Notes have been equal to at least 1½ times the annual interest charges on all bonds of the Company then outstanding and on all these notes then outstanding, including those about to be issued, or for the purpose of retiring notes of other series.

The Trust Agreement will provide that no additional mortgage (except purchase-money mortgages) shall be placed upon the property of the Company unless these notes shall be secured equally and ratably with the other obligations secured by such mortgage.

Notes are offered when, as, and if issued and received by us and subject to approval of Messrs. Chickering and Gregory of San Francisco, California, for the Bankers, and Messrs. Cummings, Roemer and Flynn, of Chicago, Illinois, for the Company. Delivery will be made in the form of Interim Receipts, exchangeable for Definitive Notes when, as and if issued and received.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Material recessions in quoted values took place in today's active stock market, which was featured by a heavy speculative selling movement, founded on the belief that the recent upward swing had been overdone. The market offered little resistance in selling pressure until prices had fallen 2 to 5 points below Saturday's closing figures.

The decline was particularly acute among high-priced industrial shares.

The first selling pressure today was directed against the shipping shares on announcement of the local Federal District Court's decision upholding Atty.-Gen. Daugherty's ruling prohibiting liquor aboard ships.

Motor shares were next attacked, apparently without special reason.

The most violent fluctuations took place in the high-priced oil shares. Mexican Petroleum established a new high at 234½ soon after the opening, dropping to 226, climbing to 234 and then see-sawing back and forth until it closed at 229¾ for a net loss of 2 points on the day. Standard Oil of New Jersey moved within a 6-point radius and closed 3½ lower and losses of 1 to 3¾ points also took place in Pan-American A and B, Producers and Refiners, Standard Oil of California and Houston.

Equipment stocks were hard hit despite the fact that large orders are still coming into the big companies. Baldwin suffered a net loss of 4 points, while American Locomotive, Pullman and American Car were off 2 to 3 points.

Indications that the September earnings statements of railroads this week will show a material improvement failed to halt the reaction in dividend-paying railroads. Central of New Jersey registered a net gain of 17 points, but the other coalers were unable to hold the gains made in a brief flurry of buying. Reading dropping back 1¾ points below Saturday's close. Norfolk and Western was strong.

United States Steel common sold off 1⅝ points, Crucible 2¾ and Republic 1¼. Other weak spots were Studebaker, Corn Products, American Can, Consolidated Gas, International Harvester, National Lead, Postum, Cereal, U. S. Alcohol, Remington Typewriter and Otis Elevator, the losses ranging from 1⅛ to 5 points.

Sales were 1,244,000 shares.

Call money held steady at 4½ per cent. There was plenty of demand for time money at 4¾ for the longer maturities, but bankers were demanding 5 per cent. Commercial paper showed a somewhat firmer tone.

Heavy selling of the currencies of continental issue in the London and allied markets was the feature of the foreign exchange market. French francs established a new low record for the year at 7.10 cents, a decline of 22 points below Saturday's price. Sterling was strong abroad, but dropped here to $4.44⅝ on a heavy offering of cotton and grain bills.

A River of Oil

Signal Hill

Wells are coming in on every side of CALIFORNIAN'S two Signal Hill leases! Tremendous gushers are making CALIFORNIAN'S leases surer of gusher production each day! Immense storage tanks are being erected. Tens of thousands of dollars are being offered for mere drilling sites!

Roaring gushers just a few hundred feet from CALIFORNIAN have thundered in with such an output of oil they could not be controlled—a veritable river of oil is flowing down Cherry Street, soaking CALIFORNIAN Lease No. 1 with oil! CALIFORNIAN No. 1, started two weeks ago, is drilling at 2600 feet. CALIFORNIAN No. 2, near the monster City Jergins well, is preparing to drill. Action on these leases—action all around them! They are in the very heart of the whirlpool of wealth-making activity.

At Athens-on-the-Hill

Athens-on-the-Hill, where CALIFORNIAN'S No. 5 lease of 44 acres is located, almost on a straight line between the Potter well and the Union well, is wild with excitement. The Long Beach Press, the Long Beach Telegraph and the Los Angeles Examiner are authority for the statement that the Potter well has unearthed at a little below 3700 feet a most promising, rich showing.

At Santa Fe Springs

The Hamilton 4 has thrown CALIFORNIAN Leases No. 4 and No. 5 right into the heart of the big play—has made them the center of attraction—made the envious eyes of old-time operators jealous with desire to own them. They are jam-up monster oil acres, in the very heart of the creamy southern extension of this marvelous field.

One Of The Greatest Investment Opportunities Ever Offered

That's CALIFORNIAN!—Signal Hill—Santa Fe Springs—and Athens-on-the-Hill—five leases—60 acres—the Fosters—with four big, successful, money-making syndicates to their credit, backing CALIFORNIAN with their finances and their experience! The choicest of leases—the best of drillers—the finest equipment—a great, magnificent enterprise—with every chance to grow and develop. The Fosters have made provision to drill additional wells and buy additional leases for CALIFORNIAN out of 25% of CALIFORNIAN'S production.

Only 4000 Can Ever Share in Californian

To share in all of those leases—all the oil CALIFORNIAN ever gets—all the millions it ever makes—there are only 4000 units. Each unit costs $100. Each unit gives its owner absolute, perpetual ownership of 1-4000th of CALIFORNIAN'S profits. We have some of these units for sale at exactly the same price that Fred B. Foster & Co. sold them before the Hamilton 4 and a dozen other big gushers near CALIFORNIAN electrified oildom!

History Repeats

What Santa Fe Springs and Signal Hill have done in the past you can expect them to do in the future. What the Fosters have paid in dividends from small wells, you can expect them to triple and quadruple with Santa Fe Springs and Signal Hill gushers.

We are the only firm that can deliver CALIFORNIAN units at $100 each. ONLY A FEW LEFT. Come to the Office! Wire or Phone!

While our supply lasts, orders for CALIFORNIAN units will be filled in the rotation received. Telegraphic information that remittance is in mail booked as orders. Office open until 9:00 P. M.

DEATH ENDS LONG LIFE SPAN HERE

Woman Who Beheld City Fifty Years Ago Taken at Age of Eighty-six

There wasn't a frame building in Los Angeles fifty-four years ago when Mrs. Sarah E. Clough arrived here from Salem, Mass.

She died late yesterday afternoon at the family home, 676 South Western avenue, at the age of 86, after having seen Los Angeles grow from a mere village of 4000 inhabitants to the wonder city of the United States.

Most of the business houses and practically all of the dwellings in Los Angeles were constructed of adobe when Mrs. Clough arrived here in 1868. There wasn't a business house south of the old Plaza and most of the inhabitants lived out Buena Vista way. Her journey to Los Angeles from Salem, Mass., where she was born in 1836, was typical of the times.

Franklin S. Clough, her husband, died in 1888 and was buried in the old High School Cemetery.

Mrs. Clough was a member of the Ebell Club and one of the board of directors of the Young Women's Christian Association. She was the only living charter member of the First Christian Church. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. A. C. Smithers. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the church, Eleventh and Hope streets. Burial will be conducted by Pierce Brothers in Hollywood Cemetery.

COMPANY TIES UP MEXICAN FUNDS

SEEKS TO COLLECT CLAIMS ON RAILWAYS DURING REVOLUTION

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Seeking to recover about $1,250,000 from the Mexican government on claims arising from private operation of the Mexican National railways during the revolutionary period, of the Carranza regime, a writ of attachment designed to tie up funds of the Mexican government in New York City banks has been served J. P. Morgan & Co., it was revealed yesterday in a suit instituted by the Oliver Trading Company of New York. The action has been brought jointly against the Mexican government and the Mexican National Railways.

Denial, however, that J. P. Morgan & Co., was the depository for any funds of the Mexican government was made by Thomas W. Lamont, one of the Morgan partners, after the writ had been served.

Jerome S. Hess of Cardin & Hess, counsel for both defendants, declared that the Oliver Trading Company seeks to recover funds for equipment which the latter concern operated on the National railways of Mexico during the Carranza revolution, and for some time thereafter on the ground that the railways withdrew the Oliver Trading Company's operating privileges.

SAYS RED FLAG TALE NOT TRUE

Local Impresario Does Not Believe Boston Story of Isadore Duncan's Dance

In spite of the fact that dispatches received by The Times last Sunday from Boston say that Isadora Duncan, noted dancer, raved a red flag at her audience and said: "This is what I am," L. E. Behymer, Los Angeles impresario, late last evening emphatically repudiated the story and declared that she would positively appear in person at the Auditorium in this city the latter part of next month.

"Miss Duncan's engagement here next month will be her third appearance in the Tschaikowsky program in Los Angeles. I am surprised to hear that her acting has been criticised," Mr. Behymer said. "Miss Duncan is a wonderful dancer, and I know that she would not add lines to her part if they were not already there," he declared.

"The dance, as interpreted by Miss Duncan, depicts the life of pleading Russia during the days of the Czar's domination, and naturally a red scarf would be her acting. As far as the quotation is concerned, I do not believe that she said it. I have known Miss Duncan for many years and I have never seen her do anything that would shock an audience."

MARY GARDEN IS TO LEAVE FOR CHICAGO

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONTE CARLO, Oct. 23.—Mary Garden of the Chicago Civic Opera Company will leave here Thursday for Paris. Today she sang the new opera "Sakuntala" for its composer, Maestro Alfano, director of the Conservatoire Bologna, who desired her to create the leading role.

Miss Garden will return to Paris next spring to resume her part in "Pelleas et Melisande" at the Opera Comique.

Poison Responsible for Serious Condition of Man

Despondency was given as the cause of what police believe to be an attempt at suicide last night by James Sullivan, who was discovered lying on the pavement at First street and Broadway suffering from veronal poisoning. Sullivan was taken to the Receiving Hospital by Detectives Wilde and Dryden. Police Surgeon Wallace Dodge pronounced his condition serious. He was later removed to the County Hospital.

Arrangements were made for but 150 persons, and accommodations were taxed to the limit.

WOMEN ARE INJURED IN AUTOCRASH

Police Book Driver After Asserted Flight; Charge Drunkenness

In an automobile collision last night at Normandie and Santa Monica Boulevard, Mrs. Leah Euwer, age 37, of 1244 La Brea avenue, and her three daughters were severely injured, while Robert W. Thomas, 524 North Ardmore, who was driving the other car, was held at the Hollywood station charged with driving while intoxicated.

Mrs. Euwer sustained injuries to the back and, according to Police Surgeon Wallace Dodge, may be suffering from a fractured spine. Mary Lou Euwer, 15, suffered contusions, abrasions and cuts from flying glass, as did her sisters, Jeane, 14, and Eleanor, 16.

According to D. C. Eaton, 1246 Detroit street, who was driving the car in which the Euwers were riding, he was crossing the intersection of Normandie and Santa Monica when Thomas, driving swiftly, came out of Normandie, striking the rear of Eaton's car and overturning it. The occupants were thrown out, and Mrs. Euwer was pinned under the machine. Eaton said Thomas's car was uninjured, and the man continued in flight. Special Deputy Sheriff Bert Eaton, who happened to be near, pursued Thomas, effecting his arrest. Police officers at Hollywood station declared that Thomas had been drinking.

The injured people were rushed to the Receiving Hospital, where they were tended by Dr. Dodge. They were later removed to their home.

Consider Your Children's Stomachs

PURE MILK for BABY

It is conceded by all that not only Babies but growing boys and Girls should drink all the milk they want. And there is no cheaper food than pure milk—But it must be clean and pure or it's not fit to put in any child's stomach.

Not the kind that comes to town in an ill kept tin can which has sat in the sun for hours.—But the kind that's certified, and is guaranteed pure by the County Medical Association.

CLUB FUNDS DISAPPEAR, CLERK GONE

Employee of Los Angeles Athletic Organization is Sought by Police

Jack McDermott, desk clerk, and $1432 are missing from the office of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, according to a report made to the police yesterday by J. E. Fencel, superintendent of the club.

Both the money and McDermott, an employee of the club for more than seven years, vanished mysteriously, according to the police.

No action was taken by officials of the club yesterday connecting Mr. McDermott with the disappearance of the money, but Mr. Fencel requested the police to make a search for both.

According to Mr. Fencel's report, McDermott was supposed to have been on duty Sunday until midnight, but shortly before midnight he had a bell boy relieve him. The latter was then relieved by the night clerk when Mr. McDermott failed to return.

The night clerk, according to Mr. Fencel, reported that the cash drawer in the office safe was locked. In the morning, Mr. Fencel said, he had the drawer opened by another official of the club who had the duplicate key. When the drawer was opened the money was found missing. Mc Dermott, according to the police, failed to show up for work yesterday.

Detective Sergeants Carr and Christianson have been detailed to investigate the case.

Mr. Fencel corroborated his report to the police over the phone last night. He declared that no official action will be taken in the matter until the special meeting of the board of directors is called

OSBORNE'S CONDITION IMPROVING

Heart Attacks Suffered Aboard Boat Necessitate Complete Rest

Recovering from two severe heart attacks while en route to Los Angeles on the steamship Ecuador, Congressman Osborne is under orders to take a complete rest of two or three weeks, it was stated yesterday by members of his family.

"His illness is not serious," it was announced, "but Congressman Osborne is in a weakened condition."

He is resting comfortably at his home, 401 West Twenty-third street.

The heat of the tropics is responsible for the attacks, which were nearly fatal. The Congressman refused to be removed to a Central American hospital from the steamer, preferring to brave continuance of the trip to his home here.

On arrival in Los Angeles Harbor yesterday he was met by his son and taken to his home, where a physician is in attendance.

END FEUD, EDICT TO STUDENTS

Rioting Must Stop, Declare University Heads

Summary Expulsion for All Trouble Makers

Branding of Youth is Being Investigated

In a vigorous effort to stamp out warfare between the students of the University of Southern California and the University of California's Southern Branch last week, officials of both institutions yesterday announced executive sessions to cope with the situation.

The U.S.C. faculty met last night with Comptroller W. R. Bovard and representatives of the trustees. The executive session at U.C.S.B. will be held today, according to Director Ernest C. Moore.

This morning, Dudley Hayes, U.S.C. senior and president of the student body, will address the students and warn them to "forget" the feud and to take no more measures against the rival university's students.

"Any U.S.C. man caught on the U.C.S.B. campus under circumstances connecting him with the feud will be immediately suspended pending trial for expulsion," he will warn the student body, it was stated last night by Comptroller Bovard.

FACE EXPULSION

Bovard also stated that the 300 students who participated in the campus-bonfire riot a few nights ago are now under probation, and expulsion without trial will be the fate of any of them caught in any further disturbances.

Investigation is also under way seeking to fix the guilt for the branding of William Sykes, U.C.S.B. student, night before last. Sykes, tied to his bed in his own home by three unidentified men, was branded with the letters U.S.C.

"I do not know whether acid or iodine was used in the branding," stated Director Moore of the U.C.S.B. last night, "but the disfiguration on Sykes's forehead cannot be removed. It can only wear off."

Original reports had it that nitric acid was used by the marauders, but this has not been verified. Sykes said he could not recognize his assailants, but it is possible that as well as talking to the U.S.C. in an effort to identify them if they are of that institution's student body.

"This entire feud is a sort of family fight," stated comptroller Bovard last night. "Many of the men live on the same block, and with such a situation, the matter is almost out of bounds as far as our efforts to control it are concerned.

FIGHT CONDEMNED

"The fight, of course, is officially condemned. Reports that the officials of this university are backing the fued are ridiculous. There is nothing but the friendliest cooperation between the officials of both institutions in an effort to put an immediate end to this warfare."

Dr. Moore, director of the U.C.S.B., expressed fear that serious consequences might ensue before official action could stamp out the feud.

"Each fresh outbreak only further inflames the spirit of the youths," he said, "and I am afraid that they may resort to extreme violence unless the matter can be quieted down."

A joint meeting was held last night by members of the student body executive committee of the University of Southern California and the faculty committee of student affairs for the purpose of investigating the recent riots between the members of the student body of the University of Southern California and the Southern Branch of the University of California, the following resolutions were adopted:

RIOT IS SEQUEL

"First, that the student battle which was staged between the members of the University of Southern California and the members of the student body of the Southern Branch was caused as a result of the attack which the students of the branch made on the woodpile of the southern school last year.

"Second, that the affair was caused directly by an unofficial challenge which was delivered by telephone Wednesday afternoon to certain members of the University of Southern California student body, in which the challenged were

FOREST FIRES STILL RAGING

New Outbreaks Reported as Men Fight Hard

San Bernardino Mountains Like Volcanoes

Disabled Men at Arrowhead Springs Removed

Motorists who are planning on going to the San Bernardino Range today or tomorrow are cautioned by the Auto Club of Southern California that the forest fires on the Waterman and Mill Creek roads are about to make those highways impassable. Trips on these roads should not be attempted without first consulting the information bureau of the club.

While large crews of men were making desperate efforts to check an epidemic of forest fires in Southern California, new outbreaks continued to be reported last night.

The San Bernardino Mountains, with thousands of acres of brush eaten by the creeping flames, and dense clouds of smoke pouring from the peaks, took on the appearance of a range of volcanoes. The sky for miles reflected a red glow.

Forest rangers, directing the fight to save resorts and the big pines from the fires sweeping the lower ranges in Waterman and City Creek canyons, were heartened when a lull in the wind retarded the progress of the blaze.

One hundred and seventy-eight disabled war veterans, who were removed from the Arrowhead Hospital yesterday were back in the mountains last night, with the exception of a few seriously ill patients, when it appeared that the buildings were no longer menaced. They were unable to bear the smoke fumes and were removed to San Bernardino and Redlands for a few hours. The Arrowhead, a landmark of legendary interest, was burned over and is now barely visible from the city.

SENT TO JAIL

F. W. Link, Eagle Rock real estate dealer, yesterday began serving a fifteen-day sentence in the County Jail as the result of starting a brush fire in the Hill-avenue district, which spread alarmingly. He pleaded guilty before Judge Harold Ida Crume in the Eagle Rock Police Court, but asserted he thought he had extinguished the blaze before he left the scene.

Fires from Somis to Saticoy were reported out last night, but another fire raging on the Broome ranch near Point Magu was reported searing thousands of acres of grazing land. Thornehill Broome of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards is part owner of the property.

Fire-fighters at the South Slope Oil Company and Oak Ridge Oil Company near Santa Paula managed to keep the flames from destroying rigs and houses. The Converse cattle ranch was reported safe.

C. W. Dabney, Jr., son of a millionaire Santa Barbara oil man, who leased 8000 acres on the Broome ranch on which to raise cattle, is now in Texas, where he went to purchase 500 head of stock for this pasture. It is not known whether he has been apprised of the fire or whether the cattle are being shipped to Oxnard. The fire that left a large

BODIES GUARDED BY BOB

Dog, Man's Best Friend, Watches Over Dead Master; Friend Killed in Hunting Tragedy

Saved from the desert coyotes and vultures by an Airedale terrier, the bodies of August Freitag of 2504 Thirty-third avenue and Henry E. Aerick of 5445 Victoria avenue—one the victim of an accidental shooting and the other a suicide—were buried yesterday.

High on the crest of a ridge near Pine Tree Canyon, twenty-five miles from Mojave, on October 9, Bob, the Airedale terrier, followed his master, August Freitag, and Henry Aerick, through the thick brush hunting for deer. The dog saw his master, walking behind Aerick, stumble and fall. His rifle exploded and then Aerick fell, shot through the back. Overcome with grief Freitag then shot himself.

Around and around the two bodies Bob, the Airedale dog, took up the watch. For five days and nights without food or water the faithful dog fought off the coyotes and vultures. Day and night he barked and howled looking for a human being to assist the two men who lay huddled so close, and who refused to answer his whines.

Five days after the death of the two hunters, a searching party climbing the mountainside heard Bob and answered. When they reached the bodies, the Airedale, just able to crawl, was snarling and growling at a dozen huge desert vultures perched on the brush near by. The bodies had not been touched.

Emaciated and more than half dead the dog was carried down the mountainside by members of the searching party and taken to Mojave. There the animal was fed and watered and then brought to this city in an automobile. Yesterday Bob was not allowed to attend the funeral of the man, who had been his master, because it was feared that he would not allow anyone to touch the coffin.

According to Mrs. Freitag her husband secured Bob when he was 6 months of age from a rancher in Montana. They took the dog on a tour of the United States by automobile which lasted two years and then brought it to this city. The animal, according to Mrs. Freitag, is an expert hunting dog and when told to guard an automobile will allow no one but the owner to approach the machine.

DOUBLE DEFENSE PLANNED

Clara Phillips to Make Fight for Life on Unwritten Law and Insanity, Says Attorney

A double defense will be used by Clara Phillips in her fight for vindication of the charge of murdering Alberta Meadows. According to a statement issued at the close of the second day of Clara's trial by Attorney Bertram Herrington, her counsel, the insanity plea and the unwritten law will be linked together in the double defense plan.

Attorney Herrington suddenly shifted his tactics when Clara's trial was resumed yesterday morning. From the defense of the unwritten law, which he played upon last Friday, he jumped to the insanity defense and laid the foundation for such a program.

OPINIONS VARIED

Opinions of the cause for such a reversal were varied. First, it was thought Attorney Herrington had originally planned on the unwritten law defense. Then the prosecution forces advanced the theory that Clara's lawyer had no idea what sort of a defense he would advance for her, that he would not decide until the prosecution laid all its cards on the table. These varied opinions were sidetracked by the statement, made last night by Attorney Herrington.

"I have never abandoned the insanity issue—nor the issue of the unwritten law," said Mr. Herrington. "I intend to use both of these issues as a defense for my client. There are very few cases in California of the unwritten law which do not involve the issue of insanity."

One thing was certain when Superior Judge Houser adjourned court last night. Attorney Herrington will undoubtedly use all of his peremptory challenges before he will pass upon a jury. This procedure is known to be one of his methods of defense. He has nine peremptory challenges left. He used five yesterday in removing prospective jurors from the box. According to this ratio a jury will not be obtained before Wednesday afternoon.

ELEVEN IN BOX

Eleven prospective jurors remained in the jury box last night. They were:

George McWilliams, grocer, 89 North Michigan avenue, Pasadena.

S. J. Mead, retired grocer, 252 West Sixth street, Claremont.

William John Blackburn, rancher, La Mirada.

Mrs. Allie Smith, 402 East Sixteenth street.

RAIL GRANT TO BE DENIED

"Scuttling" of Santa Fe's Application for Extension to Harbor Recommended by Utilities Committee

Recommending that the present application of the Santa Fe Railroad Company for authority to extend its lines to Los Angeles Harbor be denied and that future approval be given only under conditions which officials of the railroad declared yesterday afternoon to be most unjust, the Public Utilities Committee of the City Council yesterday afternoon submitted a report on the Santa Fe application, which has been in the hands of the committee for months.

The report was made only after most persistent prodding by Councilman Mallard, who at yesterday's session of the Council offered a motion that the entire matter be taken from the committee. Upon the presentation of this motion, Councilman Sanborn, chairman of the Utilities Committee, said that the report would be forthcoming at once, and Councilmen Sanborn, Sparks and Conaway, the members of the committee, held a hurried meeting yesterday noon and prepared the report which will be read at this morning's meeting of the Council.

REPORT OPPOSED

Councilman Mallard will oppose it, but unless the unforeseen occurs, the report will be adopted by the Council, as agreed upon last week by the Councilmen who are seeking excuses to vote against the Santa Fe extension. The committee's action was predicted in The Times of last Saturday morning, and, as predicted the report filed yesterday sets forth that the entrance of the Santa Fe to Los Angeles Harbor "is extremely desirable," and then launches into a discussion of the grade crossings on the present right of way of the Santa Fe along Slauson avenue, which would be used by the harbor-bound freight of the Santa Fe if the extension is built. The committee's report concludes:

"Your committee, therefore, recommends that the application (of the Santa Fe) in its present form be not granted, but that the Santa Fe Railway Company be notified that if it will make some reasonable and definite contract with the city to bring about a separation of the objectionable grade crossings when the volume of traffic requires it—and to do this at its own expense—instead of expecting the city to share the same—that the franchise application will be approved.

"JOKER" IN REPORT

The phrase—"at its own expense"—is, as the article in The Times last Saturday morning said, the "joker" in the report which may result in keeping the Santa Fe out of Los Angeles Harbor, the result expected and desired by the Councilmanic opponents of the railroad.

Attorneys said yesterday that for the city to thus attempt to force the Santa Fe to pay for the entire cost of separation of grades on Slauson avenue, the cost of which the committee estimated at $2,500,000 over and above the $1,600,000 which the extension itself will cost the road, was unprecedented, and they expressed doubt that such an agreement, even if the railroad would submit to thus being "held up," would stand. Under the laws of California, the State Railroad Commission has complete control over grade crossing separations and has the power, which it has always exercised, of hearing all of the facts and then issuing an order for the separation of grades and dividing the cost between the city and the railroad on a basis of benefits received.

The Santa Fe has offered at all times to act under the law, and if in the future the grade-crossing hazard along Slauson avenue should increase, the elimination of grade crossings would not be opposed by the road, which would accept the orders of the commission and its division of the cost of the separation.

Lasky Goes to New York City With Invitations to Distributors

Efforts to bring to Los Angeles next month the annual fall convention of Paramount Pictures' distribution department are being made by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who left for New York yesterday on that mission.

He is being aided by the Los Angeles and Hollywood chambers of commerce and local civic and industrial leaders. In his possession are invitations to the 160 executives of the convention to come to Los Angeles, including letters from Mayor George H. Cryer, Frank H. Wiggins, secretary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, and George L. Eastman, president of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Lasky said he was confident of the success of his mission.

"I am making this trip," he said, "to impress upon Adolph Zukor and S. R. Kent, general manager of distribution of this corporation, and other executives of the organization, my reasons for wanting to bring to this center of motion-picture production this important body of men whose business is the distribution of motion pictures. So confident am I that I am planning to return to Los Angeles on one of the two special trains that will be chartered for the trip if Los Angeles is selected as the scene of the convention."

Auto Collision Deprives Man of His Memory

Charles Jewsbury, age 43 years, of 604 Lexington avenue, Glendale, suffered possible fatal injuries in a collision between two automobiles at the intersection of East Twenty-seventh and San Pedro streets late yesterday. Police Surgeon Dodge, who administered emergency treatment, declared that Jewsbury was injured internally. He also suffered concussion of the brain and was unable to remember the details of the accident.

From what police could learn from the injured man he was riding in an automobile with another man when the car collided with another machine. Thrown against the steering wheel Jewsbury was knocked unconscious. The driver of the other car had not made a report to the police at a late hour last evening.

Wife of Oil King Sues for Divorce and Alimony

Fourteen Unnamed Women Are Co-respondents

Hotels and Boats Cited as Rendezvous

B. H. Hopkins, millionaire oil man, founder of the Midwest Oil and Refining Company and stockholder in the Standard Oil Company, was yesterday sued for divorce by Mrs. Isabel Hopkins. Fourteen co-respondents are named by Mrs. Hopkins, all of them referred to as Jane Doe.

According to Mrs. Hopkins, her husband's loving ways were observed in many and varied places. Hotels in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Avalon were scenes of his amours, the complaint recites. Twice is he accredited with gay parties aboard the yacht Kick-a-Poo and again aboard steamers plying between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Mrs. Hopkins, in the complaint, which was prepared by Attorney Dave H. Smith, states that the couple were married in Colorado Springs in September, 1903. There are two children, one 2 years old and the other 13. The couple separated May 1, last, it is stated.

Mrs. Hopkins asks for the community property and requests the court to grant her reasonable alimony. She states that her husband is a heavy stockholder in the Standard Oil, the Mutual Oil, owns Liberty Bonds and a ranch in Iowa.

Mr. Hopkins recently came to Los Angeles from the Salt Creek field of Wyoming, where he sold out his principal holdings in the Midwest Oil Company, which he founded, to the Standard. He is now interested in the Santa Fe Springs and other oil fields here.

Mrs. Hopkins filed her complaint early in the day and secured a restraining order from the court keeping the document a secret until 5 o'clock.

ANGELENO IS CRITICALLY ILL IN EAST

Attorney Willoughby Rodman, in Philadelphia Hospital, May Not Recover

Willoughby Rodman, of 2631 Orchard avenue, prominent attorney of Los Angeles, has been critically ill in the Presbyterian Hospital in Philadelphia for the past six weeks and is not expected to recover, according to messages from Mrs. Rodman, received yesterday by friends here.

The Rodmans planned to be gone from Los Angeles for two years when they left about two months ago on a proposed trip around the world. They reached the eastern seaboard by way of the Panama Canal, and were spending a few days there before sailing for Europe when Mr. Rodman became ill.

Letters from Mrs. Rodman received here yesterday declared that physicians had pronounced his condition hopeless.

Wobblies Shun Welcome Places Provided Here

Wobblies who were reported to be on their way to Los Angeles after being "given the air" in Portland, Or., will give this section of the country the "go by" and congregate in San Diego and Imperial Valley, states a note received by Detective Lane of the police I.W.W. detail yesterday from I.W.W. Delegate X 211. The note, according to Lane was written in San Diego.

"That may be just a stall," explained Detective Lane, "as I have very good information that several hundred of them have planned to come to Los Angeles and vicinity to spend the rainy months."

BURCH JURY IMPANELED

Ten Women and Four Men Speedily Chosen to Hear Murder Case Evidence; Two Are Alternates

For the first time in the history of the local courts, according to court attaches, a jury of fourteen will hear the evidence in a murder trial, as the result of a decision yesterday by Judge Shenk to have two alternates in the trial of Arthur C. Burch, accused of the murder of J. Belton Kennedy on Aug. 5, 1921.

The jury was completed yesterday, after sixty-one talesmen were examined, and the jury was sworn in for the case. Evidence in the third trial of Burch will begin today, when judge, jury and counsel for the State and defense make a trip to Beverly Glen, the scene of the asserted slaying.

PRECAUTION TAKEN

Previously the Burch juries have consisted of twelve jurors and one alternate, making thirteen. The alternates were selected in case one of the regular jurors becomes ill or in event of death. As an added precaution two alternates were selected for this trial.

The jury consists of eight women and four men, and the two alternates are women. The jury was chosen in record time, but four days being required, while previous Burch juries were chosen with longer delay.

The twelve jurors are Herman C. Smith, 637 North Rampart street; Miss Grace Dauphin, 4963 Fountain avenue, Hollywood; Mrs. Clayton Biggs, 1445 East California street, Glendale; Mrs. Grace Hancock, 432 Temple street; M. W. Baibley, 432 West Seventy-fourth street; Miss Alberta A. Reid, Hermosa Beach; Mrs. Jessie Thompson, 2025 East Second street; Andrew D. Bradbeer, Fourth and Main streets; Miss Tina T. Wilson, 226 East Avenue 62; Mrs. C. R. Luton, 647 South Manhattan Place; Mrs. Gertrude Carnal, 1540 Highland avenue, Hollywood, and A. T. Tuttle, 228 South Herberta avenue, Redondo Beach. The alternates are Mrs. Florence H. Noe, 127 North Hobart Boulevard and Mrs. Dora L. R. Shackelford, 1155 East Thirty-fourth street.

Burch, who is jointly charged with Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain with conspiracy to murder Kennedy, is being defended by Attorney Paul Schenck. Dep. Dist. Atty. Clark is prosecuting the case. Mrs. Obenchain's trial is set for November 20.

TEACHERS NOT UNIT FOR ACT

Number to Attend Lecture on Power Measure

Fruit Growers' Exchange President Opposed

Half Billion Dollars Plan Meets With Obstacles

That the minds of the majority of the school-teachers of the city are yet open on the $500,000,000 Water and Power Bond Act, despite the concentrated drive of the proponents of the measure among their numbers, was made clear yesterday. It was announced that a great body of the city's teachers had signified their intention of attending tomorrow night's mass meeting at Trinity Auditorium to be held under the auspices of the Women's Bond and Tax Study League.

At this time Richmond P. Hobson, one of the country's eminent foes of alcohol, and Leslie B. Henry, investment banker, will point out the perils involved should the $500,000,000 measure be adopted by the people at the polls November 7.

TEAGUE IS OPPOSED

In addition to news of the teachers' interest in the campaign, announcement was made by C. C. Teague, president of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, that he considers the half-billion-dollar measure one that should be overwhelmingly defeated.

"It seems to me a dangerous proposition to mortgage our property and place $500,000,000 at the disposal of a State commission to parcel out as they see fit," Mr. Teague declared. "It is said by the proponents of the measure that it will not cost the State anything, as this money must be paid back out of the profits of the enterprise. They neglect to point out that a large number of these enterprises engaged in by private corporations are failures, and never pay anything, and that, unless the politicians are wiser than the average business man, a large share of the $500,000,000 that would be advanced to this organization would never be returned.

"I am absolutely opposed to the wholesale mortgaging of our property for any such purpose, and believe it would be unsound and unsafe."

TO HAVE DEBATE

Mr. Henry is to speak twice this evening on the evils involved in the half-billion-dollar measure, first in debate with Rudolph Spreckles of San Francisco before the Forum Dinner Club at Egan's Little Theater, and later before the Pasadena Merchants' Association at the Maryland Hotel, Pasadena.

Tomorrow, in addition, to the Trinity Auditorium mass meeting in the evening, there will be meetings at Rivera, Inglewood, Vinalia and Hollywood.

George A. Hughes, president of a manufacturing concern of Ontario, Can., is scheduled to tell the Inglewood Women's Club about the Ontario hydroelectric developments not used by the proponents of the act, who have used as an argument in favor of the adoption of the State development of power the asserted success of the Ontario projects.

Pointing out that lower rates for current mean more business for his company, and in consequence he would favor any scheme promising cheap power, he will tell his audience that he pays less for California power developed by a private corporation than he does for the same class and quality of service in his Canadian plant using publicly developed power.

DENY ASSAULTING FATHER

Accused of assaulting her father, Charles B. Williams, with intent to murder him, Mrs. Sylvia Rowlett and her husband, Frank Rowlett, pleaded not guilty yesterday in Judge Reeve's court. The dual trial was set for November 17.

OLD ROMANCE SHATTERED

Husband Married 48 Years Accuses 72-year-old Wife; He Was Cruel, She Charges in Court

In two more years A. W. McCready and his wife, Sarah A. McCready, could have celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. But such a happy event was spoiled by "the green worm in the bud."

Mr. McCready, who is well-to-do, discovered, so he said in Judge Toland's court yesterday, that another man had entered the life of his 72-year-old wife. He sought a divorce. Being a purposeful man, he told his story with considerable vigor. After a partial hearing the case was continued until next Tuesday.

KISSED LETTERS

"I saw her kiss his letters when she thought I was not looking, but I could see through the curtain. I listened in on the telephone when she thought she had it stuffed," he declared.

"Did you ever see any affection displayed between your wife and this man?" he was asked.

"No; I would have killed him for it."

"She threw a bottle at me which missed me," he continued. "I thought I would go and shake her for it."

"Did you ever threaten her life?"

"I think I did when she was playing with this man. I would have killed them both."

The husband admitted they had an altercation over a picture he prized when she was stripping the house. The wife had him arrested but a police judge dismissed the case, he said.

"Why, judge, she has written this man a twenty-four-page letter," McCready exclaimed.

CORRESPONDENCE OFFERED

The correspondence was offered in evidence. One paragraph, a letter to the wife, a sample of others, reads:

"Sweetheart: My recollections of Sat.—my living again and again thro the sweet incidents of that afternoon and this evening blend so harmoniously with my musings and offers a flowing image to bear along upon its bosom the affections that are grouping in my reverie."

Mr. McCready charges his wife with desertion.

She replied in an answer that he struck, abused her and threatened to kill her. He told her he did not want another thing to do with her. He wanted her to leave. Her interest in the other man was to reform him from drinking, it was said. McCready was represented by Attorneys Jonse and Weller. The wife's counsel was J. E. Pawson.

Crane to Give 'Charley's Aunt' for Elks' Fund

A cast of screen luminaries will support William H. Crane in the presentation of "Charley's Aunt," the seasoned but always enjoyable comedy selected as this year's production for the benefit of the Elks' Orphan Christmas fund. The play will be given at Philharmonic Auditorium November 9, 10 and 11. Included in the cast are Ruth Roland, Mabel Van Buren, Chester Conklin, Larry Semon, Lionel Belmore, Shirley Mason and Viola Dana. Rehearsals already have begun.

"Charley's Aunt" has been one of Crane's favorite vehicles. Theater goers of forty years ago will remember other productions in which he starred, such as "The Senator," "The Henrietta," and "Ultimo," productions in which he rose to the front ranks of America's comedy kings.

Friends Present Inscribed Watch to Jail Guard

In appreciation of the courage shown by Deputy Sheriff Henry Purrier, who was injured in trying to prevent Herbert Wilson, asserted mail bandit and convicted murderer, and two other prisoners from escaping from the County Jail recently, his associates in the Sheriff's office and several friends yesterday gave him with a fine gold watch and chain.

On the inside of the cover was inscribed a few words showing the appreciation of his devotion to duty on the day of the jail break.

Deputy Sheriff Purrier, whose head is still swathed in bandages, was called to the Sheriff's office. Deputy Sheriff Hutchinson made the speech of presentation. The recipient was taken by surprise.

The two other turnkeys who were on duty at the time of the escape were suspended by Sheriff Traeger pending an investigation of the jail break.

Valuable Site Purchased at Santa Monica

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 23.—What is said to be one of the most prized portions of Santa Monica real estate at Seventh street and San Vicente Boulevard was purchased this morning by James M. Hardman, local real estate operator, from J. J. Davis and R. C. Gillis, both of Los Angeles, for a consideration of $75,000.

The tract, which measures 1000 feet by 330 feet, is located on a high bluff affording a splendid view of the Santa Monica Canyon and the ocean.

According to Mr. Hardman the tract will be divided into small estates and will be open only to exclusive homes. To be known as Adelaide Park, it is the plan of Mr. Hardman to open the attractive Adelaide Drive, heretofore a blind street, over the section.

City engineers of Santa Monica are plotting the section.

SAWTELLE PROTESTS TRUCKS

Sawtelle residents yesterday complained to the Board of Public Utilities that motor busses were using the streets in the vicinity of Ohio avenue as public garages and loading stations and were a nuisance. The board will conduct an investigation.

TRUCK DEAL OPPOSITION EXPECTED

Mayor's Veto Likely With Council Approving Contracts Over His Head

The third contract in the so-called "truck deal" at the City Hall, that with the General Motors Company under which it will sell twenty trucks to the city for $70,509.90, to be paid for over a period of three years, will be sent to the City Council today by City Attorney Stephens, approved as to form by him and prepared by him under instructions of the City Council.

The contracts with the Moreland Motor Truck Company and the Garford Motor Truck Company have already been signed, approved by the City Council and are now in the hands of Mayor Cryer.

The delay over the General Motors contract arose over a doubt that the company intended that the three yearly installments would be applied as payments on the trucks, but this fact is definitely set forth in a supplemental contract which will be sent to the Council with the original contract. The General Motors contracts will be approved by the Council and forwarded to the Mayor, who is expected to return all three of them to the Council without his approval and signatures and giving his reasons for refusing to approve of the transaction, under which twenty trucks will be purchased from each of three companies or a total of sixty trucks, calling for a total expenditure over a period of three years of $207,431.17. The City Council, upon the Mayor's refusing to approve of the contracts, is scheduled to empower President Criswell to sign the contracts and thus consummate the transaction.

Councilman Mallard has stated that he is opposed to the entire "truck deal" and has voted against the approval of the present contracts.

Old Soldiers Made Victims of Bad Liquor

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SAWTELLE, Oct. 23.—Investigation of the sale of poisonous liquors which made several veterans of the Soldiers' Home seriously ill, and which are supposed to have caused the death of one recently, will be made by the Federal authorities, according to Sawtelle police today.

C. C. Comstock, alias William Rogers, alias Frank Wright, was arrested last Friday by Patrolmen Flannery and Gruff on the charges of illegally possessing and transporting liquor. According to the police complaint was made of Comstock's activities in peddling liquor among old soldiers. When arrested a quantity of liquor was found in his car. He is being held by Federal authorities under bond of $1000.

IDENTITY IS MYSTERY

El Centro Officials Seek to Find Relatives of Young Man Victim of Amnesia

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, Oct. 23.—County authorities and American Legion workers here today are receiving telegrams from all over the country, including Marine headquarters in San Diego and from Mrs. Lora Buster of Kansas City, Kan., in an effort to help a young ex-service man here determine who he is and if possible to reconstruct his past life for him and get him under the care of a hospital as soon as possible.

Giving his name as Miles Johnson, a young fellow was picked up on the streets of Calexico a week ago, but could give no account of who he was nor of how he came there. He asserted that Miles Johnson was his real name, but could remember nothing more except the name and address of a woman, Mrs. Lora Buster, of Kansas City, where he said he at one time boarded. Don Bitler, Assistant District-Attorney here, stated today that a reply had been received from Mrs. Buster stating that her son, Charles Roy Buster, had wandered away from home June 6, 1921, and had never been heard of since. Her description of her son tallied in many respects with the young man held here at the County Farm.

Dr. J. N. Huey of the Marine post in San Diego has replied to a query to the effect that a Miles Johnson had apparently wandered away from there, where he was under treatment. Young Johnson is apparently in the best of health.

He will not talk, except that he will answer questions in an honest manner as well as he knows how, but two minutes afterward will not remember of having been asked a question.

Mrs. Buster states in her letter that her son spent twenty months in France, but the young man here denies having been in France, except in 1914, when he says he was "in Europe." His mind seems to be that of an infant and strange flashes remaining with him have convinced authorities here that he is a victim of amnesia. Photographs are now awaited from Kansas City and further information to assist in identification.

Is This Miles Johnson?

HEARS VOICE IN HONOLULU

Far Pacific Station Gets Speech from 6XJ

Dean Farran Makes Test Showing Progress

Tests of Few Years Ago Pale in Comparison

A few years ago, just before the war, an elaborate series of experiments in radio-telephony were carried out by radio engineers of the American Bell telephone interests, with the assistance of the Naval Radio Service. The great naval radio station at Arlington, Va., across the Potomac from Washington, D. C., was placed at the disposal of the experimenters, and the huge antenna, supported on steel towers hundreds of feet high, was energized by dozens of vacuum tubes, combined into a powerful undamped wave transmitter. Telegraph and telephone wires across the continent connected naval radio stations on the Pacific Coast with Arlington, and when everything was in readiness speech was transmitted at predetermined times to the listeners on the western coast, and other listeners were patiently waiting in Paris and in Honolulu. The world was startled by the report that communication by telephone, without connecting wires, had been accomplished from Washington to Paris and Honolulu.

Contrasted with the above tests, a local amateur, using a single 50-watt vacuum tube for telegraph purposes, during conversation with Clifford Dow in Wailuku, on the Island of Maui, of the Hawaiian group, casually asked for a report of voice, hooked in another tube as a modulator, called a few times and back came the report, "Weak but understandable, very clear." Thus was communication established by voice over 2000 miles in an entirely unpremeditated test, using an antenna only sixty feet high and sixty feet long, from the experimental station of Dean Farran, 6XJ. The progress in radio-telephony is self-evident.

Mr. Farran has carried on communication by voice with Portland, Or., Roswell and State College, N. M., and Denver, Colo., and has received reports from stations in the Mid-West as far east as Ohio. The station utilizes one 50-watt tube for telegraph purposes, with another tube of the same size for modulating the output of the oscillator for telephony, the plate current being supplied by a small motor-generator set. No speech amplifiers are used, and the modulator tube is controlled by an ordinary line transmitter, such as is used on the wire telephone. A Standard Kennedy receiver is used for reception, and signals from most of the above-mentioned points are received with sufficient strength to allow the antenna to be kept connected to the transmitting set, making it possible for the operator at the distant station to break in at any time if interference is experienced.

Such work as this is typical of many experimenters working toward improvements in radio telegraphy and telephony today. It is a significant fact that the majority of the broadcast stations now in operation throughout the country are operated and in many cases built by the so-called amateur. The newcomer in radio is often inspired to wrathy protests against the amateur activities after the local broadcast stations have completed their daily schedules, on the ground that such activities are interfering with Mr. Newcomer's listening to distant stations still filling their broadcast schedules. Although the need for the amateurs' experiments is not apparent to the average radio listener, a little reflection on the statements here made should result in leniency, even interest, in any experiments which affect even in a minor degree the developments of the radio science.

Toy Machines, Map, Explain Auto Accident

Like manikins on a military map, Justice Chambers yesterday moved three toy automobiles on large black and white street diagram in such a manner that Jack H. Martin was able to explain to the court why he should plead guilty to a charge of reckless driving. He drove his automobile into another car driven by William S. Alley. As a result Martin was sentenced to sixty days in the City Jail.

The use of the toy automobiles to demonstrate the collision between the cars was an innovation in the prosecution of traffic violation cases in Police Court. According to Judge Chambers it will save a great deal of time in arriving at an explanation of descriptions of street accidents and law violations. The offense for which Martin was sentenced to jail was said to have been committed last Wednesday at the intersection of Sixth and Wall streets.

Cecil B. De Mille and Idea Award

IDEA CONTEST NEARS END

De Mille Urges Entrants in Cinema Prize Campaign to Submit New and Unconventional Plots

BY CECIL B. DE MILLE,

Producer of Paramount Pictures Bearing His Name; Donor $1500, Prizes in De Mille-Times Idea Contest.

Into the "home stretch"!

Today opens the last week of this contest which has been so unexpectedly prolific of ideas. The last ideas sent to the De Mille Contest Editor at The Times must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 31, in order to be eligible for the first prize of $1000, the second of $100 and the third and fourth of $50 each.

I want to urge entrants who have already submitted ideas to submit some more before the contest closes. There is no limit to the number you may enter, and perhaps your last thought may win the first prize.

I make this suggestion to aid hundreds who evidently didn't read my second article of this contest to the effect that I am undertaking it with an open mind. That is, just because I have done divorce and historical plays in the past is no indication that either one of these subdivisions will win the grand prize. In fact ideas under these heads would have to be radically different from anything I have ever done to hold my attention.

DIVORCE IDEAS LEAD

And yet historical and divorce plays are running one-two in the early count. Hundreds of ideas have been submitted which are merely rehashed versions of "Old Wives for New," "The Woman God Forgot," "Why Change Your Wife?" "Carmen" and other of my productions. Naturally, these have but little chance.

Therefore, I want to urge the hundreds who have submitted such rehashes to send in other ideas. This time, get entirely away from the beaten path, send me something you may think I won't like and ten to one—if it is a big, human, vital, different theme—it will win one of the prizes.

TIME FOR "REPEATS"

This is the time for "repeats." Those who have been reading the daily contest articles know by now just what ideas are failing of consideration. Guide yourself accordingly and write again. There is absolutely no limit to the number of ideas you may send in, send a thousand if you wish, but it will make it much easier for the readers if each idea is written on a separate sheet of paper.

Anyone in the world is eligible to enter ideas save employees of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, The Los Angeles Times and their families.

The telegram was sent by Mr. Judah following receipt of the information that the United States District Court of Utah had been instructed to serve the mandate and to proceed with the dissolution of the two roads.

ROB GIRL'S APARTMENT

Furs and Jewelry Valued at $2000 Reported Stolen

Entering the apartment of Miss Margaret Witt, 1134 West Eleventh street, some time yesterday, burglars made away with furs and jewelry valued at $2000, according to a report filed at Central Police station. The burglars presumably gained entrance by means of a passkey.

The loot comprised a mink cape, a Hudson seal coat, a lavaliere, a watch and several other pieces of jewelry.

WATER BOND VITAL, SAYS ENGINEER

Mulholland Tells Voters City's Growth Makes New Pipe Lines Imperative

Necessity for passage of the $5,000,000 water bond issue, which is Proposition No. 19-A on the November ballot, was emphasized yesterday by William Mulholland, chief engineer of the water department, who declared that the growth of the city has made it imperative that practically all the larger pipe lines in the city be replaced with even larger pipes.

Mulholland also stated that reservoir space must be increased to a greater degree, to provide water for irrigation and to take care of the city in case of emergency.

The two recent accidents on the aqueduct were pointed out as instances where the city has been protected by reason of large reservoirs.

On one occasion, a sudden earth movement caused the concrete conduit to break, stopping the water flow for a few days, while the other was the filling of an open section of the Aqueduct by sand and gravel, when a cloudburst caused a landslide.

A more serious accident might necessitate the rationing of water, if additional storage facilities are not provided. Enlargement of the Haiwee reservoir is contemplated, at a cost of $125,000.

Listed among the proposed improvements are the Tujunga reservoir and the Stone Canyon reservoir, the former to cost $650,000 and the latter $676,000. But one-half the cost of this item is included in the bond issue.

Trunk lines and miscellaneous betterments and improvements will bring the total to $5,214,000.

Interest and sinking fund on the bond issue will be paid out of revenues, according to public service officials.

MINISTER TO RESIGN PASTORATE

Rev. Howard Dean French of Church of Messiah Going to Brooklyn

To the surprise and regret of the 500 members of the Congregational Church of the Messiah, Rev. Howard Dean French yesterday morning announced his resignation as pastor of that church and his acceptance of a call to the pastorate of the Church of the Pilgrims at Brooklyn, N. Y.

The invitation to become pastor of the historic old Congregational Church of Brooklyn, made especially famous through the work of Dr. Richard Scores, was first received by Mr. French last spring, when Rev. Richard Robert resigned the pastorate. However, it was not until a few days ago that Mr. French finally decided to accept the invitation.

Mr. French, with Mrs. French and their daughter, Elizabeth, will leave Los Angeles for Brooklyn, November 15. Their son, Paul, is in the East, having recently entered Amherst College.

Mr. French and his family came to Los Angeles seven years ago from Chicago, Mr. French having formerly been pastor of various churches there and in other Illinois cities. In the seven years he has served as pastor of the Church of the Messiah the membership of that church has more than doubled.

The official board of the Church of the Messiah will meet within a few days for the purpose of appointing a committee to consider the selection of a new pastor.

BARRED ROCKS

It is quite the regular thing to send baby chicks through the mails, but the postoffice will not handle a full-fledged rooster. Maybe they think his crowing will wake up the dead letters.

WRONG NUMBER

Woolwine's campaign is for more beer and less Ku Klux. As District Attorney he had reasonably direct connection with both these issues, but as Governor he would have no more to do with them than the man from Mars. He is like a child firing squibs at the aurora borealis.

ARDENT SPIRITS

It is said that greater progress than spirit photography has been made. Now, with the aid of some sensitive plastery mixture, casts of spirit hands are said to have been made. We may yet be able to obtain a spiritual bust of Nebuchadnezzar or other old-time dead ones. When Conan Doyle finishes his ghost trap the humblest medium may be able to lasso the shade of Genghis Khan or P. T. Barnum.

SAFETY IN THE SKIES

Helium gas will not burn and is not explosive. The government has about 5,000,000 feet of it stored and it is figured that this quantity might be doubled in another year or so. It is hoped to use this gas for government dirigibles, but the gas is costly, difficult to manufacture and rather easy to waste. Yet in the interest of safety its use has become essential. With past adventurings in mind the dirigible can never make a successful appeal to the public until it is floated with noninflammable gas.

KEEP MOVING

Lots of the wobblies who are being driven out of Oregon are said to be heading for Southern California. The Sheriff and Chief of Police are preparing to give them a rousing welcome. The Hickory Club will escort the visitors to a barbecue at the stone quarry, where all those who wish to destroy their country will be given hammers and permitted to break it up into fragments one inch in diameter. They can do that or move on. It must be a wonderful satisfaction to a man to so live and think that there is always a uniformed man at the door telling him to move on.

BLIND HUSBANDS

A man who was reporting the disappearance of his wife to the police was unable to recall her first name or the color of her eyes. He could not remember whether she was a blonde or brunette. Said he had only been married for five years and didn't know her very well. As husbands go, we should say that this was not a particularly observing one. How does he know his wife has gone? Maybe she is in the next room. If a man is married ten years before he can describe his wife's features, how would it be with some of these repeaters who have had three or four wives? They wouldn't be able to recognize them on the street. A man who cannot tell whether his wife is a blonde or a brunette should be reasonably happy. He would be easy to suit.

DEVIOUS PATHS

The former head of one of the big unions of railway workers long enjoyed a salary of $15,000 a year with a liberal expense account on the side. But, at that, he didn't seem to be satisfied. An investigation seems to point to a deficiency of some $200,000 in the funds of the union. A single check of $50,000 for "missionary work" has disappeared. In connection with this dent in the treasury it appears that the union executive has in recent years been gradually acquiring title to no less than thirty different pieces of property in the city of Detroit. Although he has been a free spender of the union funds, he has indicated a personal thrift of a striking character. He is in a fair way to become a millionaire. Just as he was going good some of his associates became suspicious that he was getting more than his share and the flare-up resulted. It is believed, however, that he will still be spared the painful necessity of going to work.

ADVENTURES IN MATRIMONY

A St. Louis woman at the age of 43 pleasant summers is just taking unto herself her eleventh husband. So far as now known she has had her matrimonial adventures without any criminal flavor and it must be admitted that it is a wonderful record. On the other hand, an Ohio man has just been arrested for bigamy and h now confesses that he has been married thirty-nine times. Most of his wives a living and he never bothered with the formality of a divorce. He would take him a fresh wife and then disappear when the honeymoon was over. If he could skip out with a few hundred dollars, so much the better for him. He was a professional bigamist and he stuck to the game as long as he could. He has had as many as five different wives in one year and was still going strong at the time of his arrest. He is only 56 years old and might have had several more successful seasons but for the unfortunate matter of his arrest. Some men and women don't make any more of getting married than they do of wiping their nose.

REPUBLICAN ECONOMY

By practicing economy the Republican administration in twelve months has reduced the national debt $1,000,000,000 and effected a saving in Congressional appropriations of $330,000,000.

Democrats choose to make light of this achievement. According to their spokesmen, such sums are too trifling to talk about. It is true that while in office the Democratic party was accustomed to deal with much larger figures—always, however, on the opposite side of the ledger.

We are obliged to admit that $300,000,000 is only a third of the amount spent by the McAdoo railroad administration under Democratic government control and doesn't even equal the amount the Democrats threw away on building belated airplanes. But the voters who returned the Republicans to power on an economy platform will be pleased to hear that so much has already been accomplished toward wiping out the enormous Democratic deficit.

Under the present Republican administration the reduction in the public debt and expenditures of the United States exceeds that made by any other nation in the world since the signing of the armistice.

In dealing with Congressional appropriations the Republican Congress has been steadily lowering expenses. For ordinary expenditures it appropriated one-third of a billion dollars less than were appropriated last year and $1,033,794,127 less than the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921.

Naturally, the largest reductions are those in military and naval appropriations. These are directly due to the conclusions reached by the conference on the limitation of armaments, called on the initiative of President Harding and directed by Secretary Hughes. As a result of this conference the naval appropriations were reduced from $413,189,960 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, to $294,836,577 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923. The combined reduction in military and naval expenditures for the current year as compared with the previous year is $213,140,752.

This is not all, however. Congress reduced the sum necessary to run the legislative branch of the government by $5,458,922; for the State Department, $6,297,857; for the Treasury Department, $45,729,160; for the Interior Department, $14,912,964; for the Agricultural Department, $2,098,261; not a bad series of reductions for one year of Republican economy.

This Republican Congress created the Budget Bureau. The Republican Congress immediately preceding it enacted a similar budget law only to have it vetoed by President Wilson. Under President Harding it was at once re-enacted so that government affairs could be managed in a more orderly and business-like manner.

Of the $24,000,000,000 spent by the Wilson administration during the war period the records show that $14,800,000,000 was squandered without the people, the Army and Navy, the soldiers fighting abroad or the government itself obtaining anything adequate in return. Small wonder, in view of the above record of magnificent waste, that Democratic leaders sneer at the most economies a Republican Congress has been able to bring about in one year's close attention to business.

A SPECIALIST ON "WARNINGS"

M. Tchitcherin, the soviet's long-faced Foreign Minister, has again come forth and solemnly warned the Allies that dire consequences will result to the world unless Russia's demands are heeded. Whatever his powers as a diplomat, Tchitcherin must be given credit for being one of the world's best and most consistent little warners. It is doubtful if he has ever issued a statement since he was appointed Foreign Minister without adding the tag that if his advice was not taken seriously international complications of the worst sort would result.

In spite of Tchitcherin, however, the world continues on its merry way, not in the best of health, to be sure, but showing some signs of convalescence. If Tchitcherin is as much interested in furthering this convalescence as he claims to be his efforts would better be directed toward setting his own house in order rather than sending forth pessimistic promulgations in rapid-fire succession. At that, though, he should not be judged too harshly. It is a human failing. Most of us can settle our neighbors' problems much more easily and quickly than our own.

Tchitcherin wishes Russia to be recognized and to take part in the affairs of the world on the same footing as England, France or Italy. He says that until Russia is so admitted world problems cannot be settled permanently. All of which is obviously true. But before Russia can be so admitted she must alter her government so as to become an entity that can be dealt with as are other nations.

THE ORPHEUM'S BIRTHDAY

The Orpheum is celebrating its third-of-a-century anniversary in Los Angeles.

When the owners of this great vaudeville circuit decided to open a house here Los Angeles was little more than a hamlet. Also, it was a harbor of theatrical wrecks. Many producers had attempted to run stock-company theaters and had retired with empty pockets and grinding teeth.

But the Orpheum people, then a young, struggling circuit, had faith. Unterrified by the experience of others in what was then a notoriously poor "show town," they leased the old Grand Opera on Main street at First street.

Their faith was justified. Almost from the first the new venture was a financial success. The Orpheum moved from Main street to what is now the Lyceum Theater on Spring street and eventually to its present location on Broadway. Prosperity always trailed along. The Orpheum for more than a quarter of a century has been one of the institutions of Los Angeles.

In a way, it marked our emergence from village to city. Its prosperity has not been due entirely to the remarkable growth of the city which its owners foresaw. That it has become one of the finest theatrical properties in the world is due in quite equal measure to the fact that its owners have played fair with the public.

Even in the early struggling, thin days it brought to Los Angeles the finest vaudeville obtainable in the world. It is a concrete example of what foresight and consistency in principles will accomplish.

Why Add to Your Burden? When in Doubt Vote 'NO'

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

INADEQUATE SALARIES

Having voted at the August primaries to give the City Council the authority to increase municipal taxes up to $1.25 on each $100 worth of taxable property in Los Angeles, the voters at the November election could designate no better way of expending some of this added income than by approving of the charter amendments increasing the salaries of city officials. City proposition No. 4-A increases the salary of the Mayor to $10,000 a year. He receives now $4500 a year. This salary was established years ago when Los Angeles was a village. Today the Mayor of Los Angeles is the general manager of a corporation with an annual budget this year of $15,000,000 and annual cash turnover of $25,000,000. The job is worth $10,000 a year and a $10,000-a-year man will save his salary many times over in the care with which he supervises the city's business. The Mayor of New York receives $15,000 a year, Chicago pays its Mayor $18,000, Philadelphia $12,000 and Cleveland, St. Louis, Boston and Pittsburg each pays its Mayor $10,000.

The board of directors of this Los Angeles corporation are the nine members of the City Council. They are now paid $200 a month, an inadequate sum, considering their responsibilities. Under proposed charter amendment No. 7-A each will receive $4200 a year. With this salary attached to the position Los Angeles will doubtless have much better, much abler Councilmen than it has at present. The chances of securing Councilmen who will sense the growth of Los Angeles and the problems that this growth naturally engenders will be greatly improved. New York pays its Councilmen $2000 a year each, Pittsburg pays $6500, Detroit $5000.

The general counsel of the business institution known as the city of Los Angeles is the City Attorney. He now receives $4000 a year. A business establishment of the size of the Los Angeles city government would pay its attorney $25,000 a year at least. Pasadena pays its City Attorney $6000 a year, St. Louis $9000 a year, Detroit $10,000 a year, Boston $9000 a year, while in New York there are sixty-two members of the legal department receiving more than the City Attorney of Los Angeles, and Chicago has twenty-two members of its legal staff receiving more than the City Attorney of this city. Under proposed charter amendment 5-A the salary of the City Attorney would be increased to $7000 a year, the same salary paid the District Attorney and the County Counsel of Los Angeles county. The amendment should carry

All of the arguments advanced in favor of increases apply to the offices of City Auditor, who now receives a salary of $3000 a year. Under proposition No. 7-A the salary would be increased to $6000 a year.

Efficient men will not run for public office in Los Angeles or anywhere else unless the salaries attached to the places are adequate and at least somewhere near the earning ability of such men in private life. If the people of Los Angeles want competent public officials they must be paid salaries that will make public offices worth their while. The Times believes, therefore, that these four charter amendments should be approved by the voters.

FEEDING THE EYES

The judgment of many of those present at the national convention of restaurant men was that colors, draperies and surroundings were more important than food. A man will go into a gorgeous fodder palace and pay $12 for obsequious service without a grunt against the quality of the stuff with which he regales his stomach. If it is spiced and garnished and served under the name of delicons d'angelique he will be pleased to cough up $4 without a wave of remonstrance or regret. If a restaurant has a swell color scheme and a jazz band it doesn't need any ham and eggs. At least that is what most of the proprietors think. And the people seem to be willing to furnish proof that they are right. It is only the eyes that are fed.

TWO MINUTES OF OPTIMISM

BY HERMAN J. STICH

Fear of Failure

Few men are better qualified to discuss the fear—and triumph over—failure than Roger M. Babson, who possessed the will power to rise from his bed at a time when he was considered as good as dead, select a vocation and attain world-wide success in it, in the face of unprecedented obstacles.

Mr. Babson, unlike so many other economists, is no slinger of high-sounding and idle phrases. His every word, sentence and paragraph has meaning and purpose. When he says anything it is direct, practical, concrete.

I have taken the liberty of rearranging a bit what he has to say on the fear of failure; and his words should stimulate our courage to go out with new hope and with clearer vision to do battle with the every-day antagonists to our great goal.

Fear of failure is an obstacle on the road of making good upon which many a toe has been stubbed.

Did you ever stop to realize that the only thing which cannot fail is a worm—or that a man who never makes any mistakes never makes anything else—except trouble?

Life would surely be of the most humdrum sort if there was absent from all of our adventures the least thrill of a possible failure.

Failure is a purifying process. It forces a trial balance of our efforts. Properly utilized, it is a much more wholesome stimulant than anything existent, even prior to the Eighteenth Amendment.

The general manager of one of the leading railway systems of the United States was once discharged from a position as yardmaster paying him $90 per month because of his lack of ability to perform the work.

Henry Ward Beecher stood sixty-fourth in an examination in grammar. The boy who ranked first in the same class grew up to be a barber in Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Beecher failed in many of his efforts, but eventually he achieved his marvelous success as a preacher of the gospel.

Out in Florence, Ariz., is a life-termer in the State penitentiary, who writes articles on Business Letter Writing that are read by hundreds of our leading business men. This man has been reared inside the walls of the penal institutions of the country. He was in a reform school early in life, served five years in Ohio State penitentiary and later received a life sentence in the West. He has been redeemed through work and even though behind prison walls, he seals himself up in the envelope, as he expresses it, and reaches the heart of the business world.

You may fail a half-dozen times and eventually succeed if you are willing to work and think—for it is hard work, consecutive thinking and the exercise of judgment that help a man to make good.

RIPPLING RHYMES

THE BUGGY

My Uncle Hiram has a steed, a critter of a gaudy hue, and he admits his greatest need is something he can hitch it to. He wants a buggy, neat and nice, such as he used in other times; my Uncle Hiram has the price, he is lop-sided with his dimes; and yet he roams the town in vain and brandishes his wad of dough; he cannot find the sort of wain that needs a horse to make it go. The dealers see his bunnie big and weep the tears of bleak remorse, for they can't find a decent rig that might be fastened to a horse. "We'll sell you cars propelled by gas," the dealers cry, in pleading tone, but Uncle Hiram says, "Alas, I want to drive my swaybacked roan. I long to make a daily trip on wheels, along the village street; I have the horse, I have the whip, I have the harness all complete." "We'll find you piebald unicorns," the dealers cry, in their despair; "and bandersnatches, decked with horns, we might provide, with proper care; but buggies, uncle, are extinct, they fell beneath invention's blows; in modern schoolbooks they are linked with mastodons and things like those. So buy a car from us, old scout, the buggy's gone from camp and court; we need that roll you pack about, for we have children to support." WALT MASON.

TURKEY'S HOUSE AND LOT

BY BESSIE BEATTY

The man who has nothing to lose does not mind risking it.

Employers of labor often say that the best cure for social unrest is to provide every worker with a chance to own his own home.

There is an element of sound economic truth in this reasoning. It is simply equivalent to saying that if a man has a big enough stake in the established order he won't want to upset it.

During the last six years I have spent a good part of my time traveling through countries where there were wars and rumors of more wars, revolutions and counter-revolutions, troubles present and troubles to come; misery, bitterness, defeat.

I have come to the conclusion that nations are like individuals. If you want to keep them content you must see that each has its house and lot.

And it does not do to take away Peter's house in order that Paul shall have a roof over his head and a bit of his own earth under foot.

A redistribution of houses on sentimental or punitive grounds does not permanently solve anybody's problem.

Take Turkey. There is no better example of my point. Except in England, where Turkish policy has succeeded in upsetting the government and ousting the invincible Lloyd George, that country has for the moment moved off the world's front page.

Holy war—the name itself is a torch to our jaded imaginations—was never as imminent as the diplomats would have had us believe in the days when its threatening false dawn flared upon the Near Eastern horizon.

But how could Turkey, so utterly crushed at the conclusion of the World War, following, as it did, upon the exhausting years of the Balkan wars, ever bring himself to a position where she could administer a smashing defeat to the Greek armies and make a vigorous gesture of threat in the face of the king of empires?

Turkey's conquerors are responsible for the creation of a nationalist spirit and the re-creation of a Turkish army.

After the armistice Turkey was in a state of apathy. She had no leaders, military or civil, who could move the people; and, as her territory and power were stripped from her, the psychology of despair settled upon the remnants of the nation.

It is a dangerous mental state—dangerous to conquerors and neighbors, for it contains the seeds of new protest.

I do not mean to argue the justice or injustice of the Turkish cause. I mean only to point the fact that Turkey, by the terms of the Treaty of Sevres and subsequent acts, lost her house and lot. This provided her agitators with a cause and her people with a grievance.

Turkey had expected to pay the penalty of a humiliating defeat, but when the actual price became known the lord of the Bosporus was utterly crushed.

The Young Turk movement, rallying point of Turkish progressivism before the war, had failed of its promise. The old Turks, used to life on an entirely different scale, lacked the energy and adjustableness necessary to make something new out of the pieces. Who was to lead?

There was a small and feeble league of rather clever young men whose aim was the preservation of Turkish independence. They argued that if they did not immediately rally they would be annihilated as a nation.

When the armistice was signed this little group of leaders was practically without rank and file. The mass was too apathetic to join them. The old Turks looked upon them with disapproval or contempt.

Today that Nationalist league is Turkey. It ceased many months ago to be a league and became a government and the world at large scarcely marked the change and little suspected its significance.

Every act of Turkey's conquerors helped to strengthen it. When the Turkish Parliament at Constantinople was closed the Nationalists set up their own Assembly at Angora. When Nationalist leaders were arrested and deported to Malta by British order a whole flock of Young Turks rose up to take the place of each.

The apathetic people awoke. Despair turned to resentment. Resentment became resistance. Resistance turned to aggression.

When I was in Constantinople this spring I found the Turks one in sentiment almost to a man. Turks of the old order, men like Abdul Medjid, successor to the Sultan, who not many months ago would have scorned Mustapha Kemal, acknowledged the Nationalist government in Angora as Turkey and looked to its leader as the deliverer of the Turkish people.

Though the Sultan was in disfavor with many of the Nationalists because he had taken orders from England, it was evident that both he and the Crown Prince were bitter. Both said they lived only for the day when Turkish soil and Turkish waters would again be free from foreign men of war.

The Crown Prince, pointing a dramatic finger across the stretch of blue Bosporus to the brown hills beyond, voiced his bitterness:

"There is all they have left to us—a little bit of Asia Minor. Surely we have a right to that. We have a right to live. We have lost so much there's not much left to lose, but we will win or lose all."

He spoke of Lloyd George as a great man, a historic man, but a man of war, not a man of peace.

"For the peace England must have another man," said Abdul Medjid. "The genius of Lloyd George is drained. He is worn out; spent."

Talking to this Turk and to all the others I met, I marveled at the intensity of spirit that has been generated in these short years since the end of the World War.

One man, the editor of the leading newspaper of Constantinople, told me that but for the drastic treatment his country had received at the hands of England, Turkey would have been lost as a nation.

"England's mistakes made Turkish unity and gave us incentive for action," he said.

All this has nothing to do with the question of whether one likes or hates Turks or is merely indifferent to them.

The development of a new national psychology is the important thing to study. No victory is safely won if the victors leave behind in the ruins of the conquered the materials for new wars.

If it were possible with a mighty wish to wipe the Turk and his peculiar culture off the face of the earth that would satisfy a large section of the Christian world. But it is not possible. And, if it were, the problem of the inheritance of the Turkish house and lot would still remain unsolved. It is a coveted bit of property. It stands in the middle of the great trade route from Asia to Europe. That in itself makes it controversial territory. Then, too, there is oil in the back yard. That oil has played a far more important part in the recent Turkish crisis than most of us Americans suspect.

We, sad truth to tell, are gullible sentimentalists in world politics. We still approach them from the emotional point of view. And this despite the bitter lessons of the last half-dozen years. There is something rather nice about our round-eyed, trusting faith. It is beautiful, like a child's belief in fairies, but we shall have to exchange it for some good, hard, grown-up sophistication before we will be competent to sit in with the board of directors to tackle the great game of international real estate.

Turkey has taken back her house and lot by that costliest of methods, warfare. The price has not yet been completely reckoned. It remains for the new boundaries to be surveyed. Upon the fairness of the survey will depend the immediate future of the Near East and the more remote future of countries closer home.

Long Air Record for a Small Boy

When the air service between London and Paris was inaugurated William Sanderson, a boy living at Stonebridge Park, near London, accepted a job as assistant steward and he has held the place ever since, making the trips regularly without interruption. In that time he has traveled 25,000 miles. His only complaint is that he thought the work would be accompanied by some thrills or at least some excitement, but he has not had any such experiences.

Tobacco's Action Largely Psychical

Tobacco smoke does not affect the human system in a direct physical way, it has been demonstrated. Its action is due to its psychical influence, through its taste, odor and the visual sensations it produces. Heavy smokers can tolerate doses of eight milligrams of the pure base of nicotine, whereas the nonhabituated feel noticeable effects after a dose of one-half milligram of the drug.

THIS IS THE DAY

In 1835 the Democrats held a riotous county convention in Tammany Hall, New York, at which a reform faction gained control. Whereupon the Tammany faction withdrew and turned off the gas lights. The reform party continued the convention by candle light, using the new-style sulphur matches known as "loco foco matches." Next morning the Whig newspapers satirically referred to the reformers as "The Loco-Focos." The term spread throughout the country and for a long time was a favorite sobriquet for the Democratic party.

"Epizootic," a strange disease which affected the horses throughout the country, broke out in New York in the year 1872.

A report from Chief Engineer Osborne on the decision in the Pacific Electric rehearing and Hollywood extension case to the Board of Public Utilities was recently approved by the City Council and referred to the conference held yesterday. In it Mr. Osborne recommended a comprehensive joint engineering report by the Railroad Commission and the Board of Public Utilities discussing adequately and fairly the three ways for street railway unification outlined by the former body, the engineering departments of the Pacific Electric and Los Angeles railways to participate.

The three methods in question were: (1) the Pacific Electric to take over the Los Angeles Railway Company; (2) the Los Angeles Railway Company to take over the Pacific Electric Company; (3) the city of Los Angeles to take over both.

SEEK TO LEARN COSTS

The conference yesterday was called to determine how much it would cost the city for its share of the joint engineering report. The valuation of the Pacific Electric is known as a result of the Hollywood extension case, but the last valuation of the Los Angeles Railway Company available dates back to 1912. The company has expanded considerably since then and the present valuation is not known. The valuations of the two roads are among the most important factors involved.

It was decided that the costs of the proposed joint engineering survey should be borne by the railways themselves, the city to pay only for its own supervision of the work. There was no definite action, but merely the decision to refer the subject to the two transportation lines involved. Engineers Osborne and Sachse will attempt to determine from the Pacific Electric Railway and the Los Angeles Railway Company through written question their attitudes toward bearing the cost of the survey and the amount of co-operation that can be expected from them.

DEBATE COLLEGE SITE

Proposed sites for the University of California agricultural college will be discussed Friday morning at 9 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce at open meeting. A special committee of five members will visit five places proposed. The Riverside Chamber of Commerce will hear the matter discussed Thursday evening.

directed to come over to the branch that night and try to burn the woodpile if they dared.

"Third, that the challenges were accepted by the persons challenged, in an unofficial way, and without the consent or authority of the student body as a whole, or of the student body officers. The rioters acted directly against the gentlemen's agreement, which was entered into by the two universities last year after the raid on the U.S.C. campus by the members of the Southern Branch student body.

OFFERS ASSISTANCE

"Fourth, that the U.S.C. students broke down a wire gate and parts of a wire fence on the campus of the Southern Branch when, after assembling, in answer to the challenge of the branch students, some one in the bleachers of the branch fired a gun directly at the mob of U.S.C. students.

"Fifth, that there were sticks, clubs and pieces of garden hose used by the students of both sides in the beginning of the battle which followed the firing of the woodpile, but in a few minutes the weapons were dropped and the battle proceeded without the aid of these.

"Sixth, that the attack which was made upon the person of one William Sykes was perpetrated by persons entirely unknown to the officials of the student body of the University of Southern California, and as the attack was a criminal act, the officials of the university and the officers of the student body wish to offer their help to the officials of the Southern Branch and to the officials of the State in order that the criminals may be apprehended and punished."

Says Goucher Took Roses to Other Woman

Samuel G. Goucher, well-known local business man, was in the habit of meeting another woman clandestinely, according to the opening testimony yesterday in the divorce action of Mrs. Grace Coe Goucher before Judge J. Perry Wood. This charge was made before a courtroom filled with society and club women, friends of both sides.

Mrs. Goucher, who is president of the Southern California Child Welfare Service, told the court that she once saw her husband meet another woman, saw the two separate, and a short time later observed them meet again at Ocean Park, she declared. She lost them a few minutes later.

Mrs. Goucher testified that she and her husband were eating in a fashionable restaurant when Mr. Goucher chided her about the manner in which she used her butter knife, a fact which caused her a great deal of embarrassment.

In the Goucher yard are a number of bushes of Cecile Bruner roses, the wife told the court. Each morning her husband arose and picked a large bunch of them which he took to his office. One morning she chartered a taxi and followed her husband and the roses and found that he met a young woman, whom she later found to be a Miss Christine Moen, at the end of the Vermont car line.

After meeting Mr. Goucher handed the young woman the roses and they sauntered off together, Mrs. Goucher testified.

The trial will be resumed this morning before Judge Wood. Mrs. Goucher will be cross-examined today by Mr. Goucher's counsel.

'RENGTH OF COACH HENDERSON'S TROJAN ELEVE Y

ROCKNE THERE AS A COMEDIAN

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SOUTH BEND (Ind.) Oct. 23.—Knute Rockne, University of Notre Dame football mentor, would make good as a theatrical producer, the football fans here declare.

Rockne gave the spectators at the Notre Dame-De Pauw game last Saturday entertainment from the kick-off until the final play. He filled in the intermission between halves with a burlesque entitled "Football in 1930." The opposing teams were the cake eaters, dressed in clown suits, and the tea hounds, attired in frock coats, derby hats, athletic underwear, pink shoulder pads and striped hose. A flap on the wrist was the equivalent of a diving tackle.

TIGERS TO SPRING ON GLENDALE

South Pasadena Eleven Just a Hurting to Fly at Dynamiters Today

Coach Hayhurst's lightweight Dynamiters from Glendale High will tackle the baby Tigers from South Pasadena on the latter's field this afternoon in the second football game of the Central League 130-pound struggle.

Judging from the manner in which the Glendale trampled on the Covina lightweights last week, it appears that they should have little trouble in conquering South Pasadena. Willard Roberts, the dashy halfback-captain, and Jeter at center have played a consistent game for the young Glendalians, and will put up some real opposition for the lads from South Pasadena.

The junior Tigers are as yet practically an unknown quantity, not having participated in many practice contests, but it is expected that they will put up a real game of football and give the Glendale lads the fight of their lives.

New Shaving discovery
Here is one thing we learned about shaving cream in our scientific tests.
The bubbles must be strong, enduring—must not break. They support the hairs for cutting. Without them, hairs lie down.
That's a new discovery. Heretofore men never thought about that shaving cream requirement.
Four other needs
There are four other essentials, and we've met them all in Palmolive Shaving Cream.
It multiplies itself in lather 250 times.
It softens the beard in one minute. No rubbing, no hot towels, no finger rubbing.
It maintains its creamy fullness for ten minutes on the face.
It acts as a soothing lotion, due to palm and olive oils.
Be fair to it
Now we ask you in all fairness to give this shaving cream a test. We have spent 60 years in soap study. One of our creations—Palmolive—is the leading toilet soap of the world.
We made up and tested 130 formulas to get you a shaving cream better than you know. Prove it out, in justice to yourself and us. Cut out the coupon now.

BATTLES PROVE BEARS' POWER

Bruins Improve With Every Start Thus Far

Local Squad May Not Equal Last Year's Team

Southern California Loses Many Star Players

BY PAUL LOWRY

A species of football mania similar to that which preceded the California-U.S.C. football game at Berkeley last year has enveloped pigskin centers of Los Angeles, and before the Bear and Trojan warriors collide at Pasadena next Saturday, there will have been enough hectic oratory turned loose to make Hiram Johnson turn green with envy.

The big questions in the minds of the U.S.C. supporters are: (1) Is the 1922 U.S.C. Trojan varsity as strong as the 1921 aggregation? (2) Is California up to snuff compared with the so-called "wonder teams" of '20 and '21?

IT'S A BEAR

In our opinion California will witness the passing of a lot of year marks before another Golden Bear team takes the field the equal of that truly wonderful aggregation that faced Ohio State and trampled on the prides of the Middle West by a score of 28 to 0. Last year's eleven was not the equal of the 1921 team, but it does not necessarily follow that this year's bunch is not better than the 1921 team.

Judging by the improvement which has been noted each week in California's play, based on the newspaper reports, the Golden Bear is some Bear this year.

Just how good U.S.C. is, no one really knows. The Trojans lost some smart football players when Charlie Dean, "String" Leadingham, Jimmie Smith, Orrie Hester, Paul Greene and "Swede" Evans passed from the lists.

On straight football these boys were good enough to more than match California last year, but the Bears' smartness ran to forward passes and in this respect they ran circles around the Trojans.

GOOD COMBINATIONS

Trojan scouts, back from the north, where they saw California mutilate the best Olympic Club team turned out in years, say that Andy Smith's charges have two or three new forward-passing combinations equally as good as the par-ticular one that brought three touchdowns to California against U.S.C. last year.

California's offensive strength seems to be pretty well known or at least guessed at. U.S.C.'s is a mystery. Straight football and fresh, enthusiastic head Artman Nevada was downed in the closing minutes of play on Saturday by one successful forward pass, Campbell to Dolley, and some clever end running by Campbell and Tiarman. For over three-quarters of the game Nevada's offensive was on a par with that of U.S.C. and no one would say that the Sagebrushers have a chance to beat California. At least not anyone who saw California play last year and knows what Andy Smith has in his line-up this year.

Basing one's dope on this, you would say that U.S.C., barely able to beat Nevada, stands no chance with California, and in a measure you are right. U.S.C.'s real offensive has not been exposed to the public gaze this year, but on the other hand California's probably has not either. Andy Smith's boys unfurled two or three new plays on the Trojans at Berkeley in 1921 that Gloomy Henderson never saw or heard of before, though he stood in the rain at a previous game to get the dope. It is safe to assume that he has something up his sleeve this year.

REQUIRES TIME

Taking the U.S.C. teams of 1921 and 1922, man for man, it is hard to see where the Trojans gained anything by the graduation of a bunch of stars and substituting for them players from last year's freshman squad. It takes time to make football players, and rarely does a sophomore loom up strong enough for the coaches to forget all about a Dean or a Leadingham or a "Swede" Evans.

In the line Callard and Lowell Lindley form an impregnable pair at left guard and center, respectively. John Hawkins at the other guard is learning his position, but he's far from being an Orrie Hester. Norman Anderson, if he plays like he did in the last half of the Nevada game, will do a lot to recall the feats of Swede Evans, and his booting from the kick-off seems to be quite as powerful.

There is no Johnny Boyle on the campus for the other tackle position, Newman, Cummings and Blair scrapping it out for the honor of starting in the place of the man who was the big hero on the forward line for U.S.C. last year.

QUARTET OF ENDS

Milton, Emmons, Phythian and Boice are the quartet of ends from whom Henderson will do his picking for Saturday's game, and they will have quite a task in performing better than Smith and Green.

Back of the line Henderson has Bullet Baker to take plunging Charlie Dean's place. As a line plunger, Baker may rank with Dean, but not as an open-field runner. Old Reliable Hobo Kincaid, the guy who ran the heavy interference for Dean, will do the same

Did Somebody Say Brick Was Through?

Brick Muller, California's Wonderful End

A lot of wise guys who have been announcing the retirement of Muller every few days were jolted when the red-headed demon played the game of his young life against the Olympic Club Saturday. He is sure to be a big feature of the California-U.S.C. fracas at Pasadena this week. They always take pictures of Brick throwing a pass, but this feature of his game is the least important, for his blocking, tackling and receiving of passes is above par.

Warns Andy's Outfit Against Being Too Cockey

BY ED. R. HUGHES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—If University of Southern California showed its true strength when beating Nevada 6 to 0 last Saturday, that team is in for a torrid afternoon next Saturday when the California team takes them on at Pasadena. California looked great last Saturday when beating the strong Olympic Club eleven 25 to 0—great in every department—kicking, running, passing and line plunging, and it would have taken a very high-class team to have beaten them that day.

If the Golden Bears have the same fine edge next Saturday, Los Angeles will see a powerful, smooth-running machine in action. If the boys get cocky, however, and think they have a snap, U.S.C. may surprise them and it will serve them right. If California goes into the game next Saturday with the same determination that it had against U.S.C. last year, it will be a question only of the size of the score.

ANDY DUBIOUS

Andy Smith was dubious about the game with the Olympic Club for he did not want to have any of his men hurt, knowing that he had to meet U.S.C. the following Saturday. He had good luck, for no one was hurt. Jim Spalding has a bad shoulder and was hurt and had to be taken out of the game, but he is not seriously injured and will play part of the game at least next Saturday.

Brick Miller had not been able to scrimmage because of injuries so he was just about counted down and out, but at the last minute last Saturday Andy Smith started him and the big red-head gave about as fine an exhibition of playing end as has ever been seen around these parts. He played the first two quarters and got

Bluenose Squarely Beaten by American Boat

Race a Very Close Contest All the Journey

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

GLOUCESTER (Mass.) Oct. 23. A crew of fishermen who were turned from mutiny to racing by urge of patriotism from the Secretary of the Navy, and by plea of pride from a slip of a woman, went out to sea with the Henry Ford, schooner out of Gloucester today, and beat the international champion, Bluenose of Canada. Bluenose was beaten by only two and one-half minutes in forty miles. The official times were: Henry Ford 5:01:34; Bluenose 5:04:00.

But this victory after two days of disturbance over the action of the international race committee in refusing to count the Henry Ford's first success on Saturday, was doubly sweet. As the performance of a vessel, the sails of which had been twice cut down to meet conflicting official rulings, and of men who from the abandon of mutinous despair rose to the stuff for which the port is famous, taking out a vessel with mainsail still unbent to make a quick shift to meet the international champion, it set a standard of high achievement. Only twenty-eight of the thirty men of the Ford sailed with her, two mutineers remaining on the dock.

WHIRLS WHEEL

Capt. Clayton Morrissey whirled the wheel of the Henry Ford, shifted sails, smelled out wind and matched wits with Capt. Angus Walters of the Bluenose, gaining the honors at every point.

The day did not pass without a new complication, however, namely a written protest from Capt. Walters at the starting line that the Bluenose was racing with keel probably damaged by grounding in the mud at his wharf during the

FORM SWIMMING CLUB

The Santa Monica Swimming Club, which is now being organized, will fill a long-felt want among the many who enjoy the surf bathing in the Pacific. As everyone recognizes, our Santa Monica Bay region has become so crowded, due to the enormous growth of Los Angeles and vicinity within the past few years, that on the crowded days space is at a premium and it has become practically impossible to find a place to park one's car, and in many instances it has been impossible to get into the water at all.

The Santa Monica Swimming Club will own a piece of very choice beach frontage, upon which they will erect a very luxurious and commodious clubhouse and will enjoy the privacy of their own beach. This type of club, while new upon the Pacific Coast, enjoys great vogue at the eastern coast resorts and has been developed in the East in a very complete manner. The clubhouse will contain all of the features usually found at a country club, such as men's and women's lounging quarters, a restaurant, ballroom, etc., as well as large, airy dressing quarters, plenty of shower baths, sun parlors and other features that will add greatly to the pleasure of the membership.

The headquarters of the Santa Monica Swimming Club are at the Ambassador Hotel. The organizers are Harry Mull, Richard Vickrey, Mahlon B. Hamilton, Edward Keating and Jack Lawrence. A great many of the most prominent residents of Los Angeles, Hollywood and Beverly Hills have already been enrolled as charter members.

On Wednesday evening, the 25th inst., the Los Angeles Newsboys' Athletic Club will put on a first-class series of fisticuffs at their hangout at 209 Court street. The receipts from the fights will go to defray the expenses of the club.

The boys have arranged a big double main event bill with Fidel La Barba, Pacific Coast flyweight champion, and Hymie Sherman, champion in the same class of Canada. Co-starring with them are Kid Chili and Young Joe Rivers who will battle at 112 pounds. Another feature of the evening is two battle royals which always prove to be good stuff.

Big boy Jess Willard has signed up to do the honors as referee Wednesday evening.

part of the Broome land a scorched waste started on the J. P. Lewis ranch near Camarillo Sunday and spread rapidly. The Conejo ranch and Malibu are out of the danger zone.

ASKS MORE HELP

Additional men and apparatus have been sent in an effort to check the fire which has been surging through Mandeville Canyon since Sunday. County Forester Flinthan asked for 200 more fire fighters, reporting that 1000 acres of brush had been consumed and that another 1000 would be burned over before the fire could be controlled.

Several small ranches have been destroyed and others are in the path of the flames.

The District Attorney's office was apprised late yesterday that recent fires in Bouquet Canyon and along the Ridge Route were possibly of incendiary origin. S. A. Leroy, a farmer in Tique Canyon, voiced the suspicion that radicals were responsible for new outbreaks Sunday and yesterday. He provided a list of names, and his evidence will be investigated by John Diamond and Clark Kirkman.

The fires in the San Bernardino Mountains gained such headway yesterday that United States Forest Department officials drafted hundreds of men in the streets of San Bernardino. An emergency force of 150 employees of the Arrowhead Lake Company was dispatched to the scene, and scores of cabin owners augmented the army of fire fighters.

COLONIES THREATENED

Early in the day the flames swept into Waterman Canyon and crept steadily toward Skyland Heights and Squirrel Inn, an exclusive summer colony where U. S. District Judge Trippet and other Southern Californians have homes. Pine Crest and Strawberry Flats, as well as other summer colonies, are in the line of destruction.

To the east the fire is climbing the crest from City Creek Canyon. Lake Arrowhead, where $2,000,000 was spent during the past year in the construction of a beautiful resort project, lies just three miles beyond the crest in a forest of green pines.

E. H. Charlton, forester of the Angeles National Forest, is personally directing the fire fighters. Backfires skirt the crest and a determined effort is being made to halt the flames from crossing the 101-mile Rim of the World drive to the resorts and heavily timbered canyons.

The family of Huley Poppett, State highway road superintendent, was driven from the Poppett estate in Waterman Canyon yesterday. Fire fighters saved the house. Scores of campers arrived in San Bernardino yesterday afternoon with their equipment loaded on automobiles and trucks. Thousands of brush rabbits and mountain quail are fleeing before the leaping tongues of flame. Fires in Lytle Creek Canyon and near Glean Ranch, twelve miles to the west, were discovered yesterday.

SUN IS HIDDEN

The sun was hidden all day by smoke and ashes rained steadily on streets and lawns.

The fire on South Mountain, which menaces oil properties, has been driven by a strong breeze, which is shifting from east to west. A west wind will fan the flames into many canyons and endanger the derricks and houses of the Willard and Harvey leases.

Calls for assistance were sent in yesterday from the South Mountain Lemon Company. Desperate fighting saved the premises of the South Slope Oil Company when the flames were within a short distance of the houses and rigs.

The flames have swept down the face of the mountain to the Santa Clara River, firing the brush along its edge. Valuable lemon orchards have been destroyed.

A brush fire of incendiary origin beyond Hollywood Bowl on the west side of Cahuenga Pass, covering approximately ten acres, was being fought late last night by more than a score of men. Two truck loads of men were sent to the scene of the fire by the Fire Warden. It was well under control, it was reported at a late hour last night.

SHIPPING BOARD SUED FOR ENORMOUS SUM

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ALEXANDRIA (Va.) Oct. 23.—Argument of counsel in the cash brought by the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation, in an effort to recover approximately $6,000,000 from the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation, was begun today before Federal Judge Waddill, with attorneys for the government not only disputing the validity of the claim, but contending that the corporation and the Groton Iron Works, Groton Ct., with which it is consolidated, is indebted to the government to the extent of $34,000,000.

Charles W. Morse of New York, former president of the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation, who, with his three sons and eight alleged business associates, was indicted last February by a District of Columbia grand jury for conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with shipping contracts, was among those in court.

VITAL ISSUES DISREGARDED

"wet" apologist is to receive the same sort of a reply to such questions as was received by the State's bosses and prosessional politicians in the primary. As a matter of fact a large proportion of Mr. Woolwine's audience was whispering during his discourse as he touched upon numerous issues not a part of the gubernatorial campaign.

In a manifest bid for the vote of Los Angeles policemen and firemen he departed wholly from his regular address to urge support of the municipal amendment relating to pensions for those city employees.

He referred to The Times as his "old college chum," and then asserted that The Times is telling lies about him. He had a good word for many humanitarian measures placed on the statute books of California by Republican officials, but appeared to take care from time to time to emphasize his independence of the ideals and obligations either of the Republican or the Democratic parties.

He talked about Lincoln, Valley Forge, employment agencies, the Declaration of Independence and, when his audience was becoming more and more restive, finally took up his accustomed attack upon the Ku Klux Klan and his defense of his declaration in favor of "light wines and beer."

ATTACKS KLAN

He said that the Klan is "an un-American band of hooded cowards who wish to set aside the law," and that the Klan leaders are evil men. If elected Governor, Mr. Woolwine said, he would ask the Legislature to draw up an act abolishing the Klan in this State.

He then asserted that the Ku Klux Klan has indorsed Richardson and demanded that Richardson declare himself upon this issue.

"Now, about this wine-and-beer question," he said, and the audience, which had been again growing restive, settled down in anticipation of a statement of how he proposes to solve the question—an anticipation that did not meet with realization.

"I want the Constitution of the United States respected," said Mr. Woolwine. He then proceeded to indicate that the way he expects to get respect for the Constitution is by a "relaxation" of the Eighteenth Amendment.

And when he had finished and those present filed out into the street on their homeward way the gist of comment centered around the one big, unanswered question, "How will he do it?"

FAILS ON PROBATION

Former English Officer Writes More Checks, Court Told

John Strathey, former captain in the British army and spectacular figure here several months ago, when he was arrested on a charge of passing a check without sufficient funds in the bank, was unable to make good under probation, it is charged by Probation Officer Carl May. Strathey was given probation of six months, but before the period had expired he had passed additional checks, according to charges made by Mr. May in Judge Shenk's court. Strathey was lodged in the County Jail to await a hearing on a charge of violating the terms of his probation.

ASSERTED KILLER HELD

Aurelio Pompa, accused of the murder of William D. McCue on the 20th inst., was arraigned yesterday in Justice Hanby's court. The defendant was held without bail until his hearing, which was set for November 2 in Justice Baird's court.

A FLEET of automobile trucks, busy throughout the day yesterday hauling hundreds of sacks of mail from the offices of the Los Angeles County Registrar of Voters, seemed to have failed to make the slightest impression upon the tons and tons of envelopes that nimble fingered girls, working in eight-hour shifts, day and night for the past two weeks, have been preparing for Los Angeles county voters.

Registrar Lyons could furnish no official figures yesterday as to the number of tons of mail that would leave his office within the next week. The pamphlets containing arguments for and against the proposed amendments alone filled two freight cars when they were shipped to Los Angeles from Sacramento. It is believed that the sample ballots and instructions to voters contained in each envelope will double this weight, and a conservative estimate placed the bulk at four carloads.

ROOMS FILLED

Entire rooms on the lower floor of the Courthouse are filled with neat packages of envelopes piled ceiling high. Corridors are crowded with outgoing shipments and one entrance to the Courthouse was almost blocked throughout the day with piles of sacked mail. Truckmen tugged at the huge sacks all during the day, but at nightfall the pile seemed larger than ever.

More than 200 girls have been addressing envelopes and making them ready for the past two weeks. Approximately 110 of them start to work at 8 a.m. each day, while a second shift, coming on at 4:30 p.m., works until almost midnight.

WORK COMPLICATED

A sample ballot, a booklet containing arguments for and against the proposed amendments, instructions to voters and a small slip informing the voter as to the location of his polling place are inclosed in each envelope. Mr. Lyons estimated yesterday that there would be 450,000 of the envelopes.

Much checking and rechecking must be resorted to in an effort to get to each voter the sample ballot that is applicable in his precinct. The fact that there are fifteen Assembly districts and five supervisorial districts in which elections are to be held increases the possibility of a mistake. Four parties besides the Nonpartisan, are named on the ballot.

Mr. Lyons expects to clear his office of the present job within the next week and will then take up the task of supplying each precinct with election supplies in time for the election on November 7.

PEDESTRIAN IS ROBBED

Two Men in Auto Get Cash From Their Victim

While walking on Harrington street, in the 300 block, L. F. Russell was held up by automobile bandits and robbed of $55, according to a report last night at Wilshire station. The hold-up men drove up to the curb in a small car and one stepped out, thrusting a gun in Russell's face.

Both men were masked. Russell failed to get the number of the machine, but gave an accurate description of it to Officers Weaver and Stole, who were assigned to the case.

BODY OF POSTAL EMPLOYEE FOUND

The body of Vernon J. Thach, the local postoffice clerk, who lost his life while duck hunting at Elizabeth Lake, has been recovered, and will be sent back to his old home in Jasper, Tenn. The body was found by R. C. Casner, foreman of the special delivery department who, with others of the local postoffice force went to the scene of the tragedy soon after his drowning was reported last Wednesday evening.

Can you build a brick house without bricks?

IF a man told you he was going to build a brick house without using any bricks, you'd think something was wrong with him, wouldn't you?

Well, then, what about the man or woman who plans to build a sturdy human body but neglects to eat the kind of food that builds that kind of body?

Many "refined" and denatured foods are lacking in the mineral elements which the body requires—especially for bones, nerves and teeth.

You do get the right mineral elements in Grape-Nuts—the delicious cereal food made from whole wheat flour and malted barley.

Every bit of the nutrition which Nature puts into the grains is retained in making Grape-Nuts. Lime phosphates, iron, magnesium, potassium—are all there. And then, too, there's that wonderful flavor and crispness that makes eating a joy.

Try Grape-Nuts with cream or milk for breakfast or lunch tomorrow, and see if you haven't been missing an unusually delicious and sustaining food. Sold wherever good food is sold or served.

WILL STUDY METHODS OF EDUCATION

Local Psychology Expert to Observe Systems Used in Eastern Schools

Dr. Arthur H. Sutherland, director of psychology and educational research for the Los Angeles school district, was granted a month's leave of absence by the Board of Education yesterday to enable him to study educational systems in eastern cities.

Dr. Sutherland will leave about November 6. Besides making a general investigation of new developments in a large number of cities, he will make a special study of El Paso's handling of the large Mexican population, including children just arrived from Mexico; the educational clinic maintained by St. Louis; the vocational bureau of Cincinnati; the vocational guidance work of Rochester and Pittsburg, the special schools of Chicago and the administrative organization of the Detroit school system.

Dr. Sutherland, who, according to Elliot Craig, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Board of Education, is one of the foremost child psychologists in the United States, is doing pioneer work in Los Angeles in establishing ungraded class work. These classes, it is stated, are about 100 per cent more efficient than the old system of graded classes and are declared to be less expensive.

Plan Inquest Over Anaheim Contractor

An inquest will be held in San Diego this morning in the death of Frank Smedley, prominent Anaheim cement contractor, whose body was recovered from Lake Hodges. Smedley, whose wife is well known in Anaheim society, was on a duck-hunting trip with Adele Dalton, an Anaheim schoolteacher, when the drowning occured. Both his wife and Miss Dalton are expected to testify at the inquest.

Smedley came to Anaheim from Illinois about two years ago. He met Miss Dalton a few months ago, according to the authorities, at a teachers' institute.

Indications are that the boat in which the two were hunting tipped over, and that Smedley, unable to swim, went down, the girl being unable to save him.

Smedley's coat and gun were found on the shore near where the body was recovered, according to the searchers.

ROCKNE THERE AS A COMEDIAN

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SOUTH BEND (Ind.) Oct. 23.—Knute Rockne, University of Notre Dame football mentor, would make good as a theatrical producer, the football fans here declare.

Rockne gave the spectators at the Notre Dame-De Pauw game last Saturday entertainment from the kick-off until the final play. He filled in the intermission between halves with a burlesque entitled "Football in 1930." The opposing teams were the cake eaters, dressed in clown suits, and the tea hounds, attired in frock coats, derby hats, athletic underwear, pink shoulder pads and striped hose. A flap on the wrist was the equivalent of a diving tackle.

TIGERS TO SPRING ON GLENDALE

South Pasadena Eleven Just a Hurting to Fly at Dynamiters Today

Coach Hayhurst's lightweight Dynamiters from Glendale High will tackle the baby Tigers from South Pasadena on the latter's field this afternoon in the second football game of the Central League 130-pound struggle.

Judging from the manner in which the Glendale trampled on the Covina lightweights last week, it appears that they should have little trouble in conquering South Pasadena. Willard Roberts, the dashy halfback-captain, and Jeter at center have played a consistent game for the young Glendalians, and will put up some real opposition for the lads from South Pasadena.

The junior Tigers are as yet practically an unknown quantity, not having participated in many practice contests, but it is expected that they will put up a real game of football and give the Glendale lads the fight of their lives.

BATTLES PROVE BEARS' POWER

Bruins Improve With Every Start Thus Far

Local Squad May Not Equal Last Year's Team

BY PAUL LOWRY

A species of football mania similar to that which preceded the California-U.S.C. football game at Berkeley last year has enveloped pigskin centers of Los Angeles, and before the Bear and Trojan warriors collide at Pasadena next Saturday, there will have been enough hectic oratory turned loose to make Hiram Johnson turn green with envy.

The big questions in the minds of the U.S.C. supporters are: (1) Is the 1922 U.S.C. Trojan varsity as strong as the 1921 aggregation? (2) Is California up to snuff compared with the so-called "wonder teams" of '20 and '21?

IT'S A BEAR

In our opinion California will witness the passing of a lot of year marks before another Golden Bear team takes the field the equal of that truly wonderful aggregation that faced Ohio State and trampled on the prides of the Middle West by a score of 28 to 0. Last year's eleven was not the equal of the 1921 team, but it does not necessarily follow that this year's bunch is not better than the 1921 team.

Judging by the improvement which has been noted each week in California's play, based on the newspaper reports, the Golden Bear is some Bear this year.

Just how good U.S.C. is, no one really knows. The Trojans lost some smart football players when Charlie Dean, "String" Leadingham, Jimmie Smith, Orrie Hester, Paul Greene and "Swede" Evans passed from the lists.

On straight football these boys were good enough to more than match California last year, but the Bears' smartness ran to forward passes and in this respect they ran circles around the Trojans.

GOOD COMBINATIONS

Trojan scouts, back from the north, where they saw California mutilate the best Olympic Club team turned out in years, say that Andy Smith's charges have two or three new forward-passing combinations equally as good as the particular one that brought three touchdowns to California against U.S.C. last year.

California's offensive strength seems to be pretty well known or at least guessed at. U.S.C.'s is a mystery. Straight football and fresh substitutes beat Arizona. Nevada was downed in the closing minutes of play on Saturday by one successful forward pass, Campbell to Dolley, and some clever end running by Campbell and Tiernan. For over three-quarters of the game Nevada's offensive was on a par with that of U.S.C. and no one would say that the Sagebrushers have a chance to beat California. At least not anyone who saw California play last year and knows what Andy Smith has in his line-up this year.

Basing one's dope on this, you would say that U.S.C., barely able to beat Nevada, stands no chance with California, and in a measure you are right. U.S.C.'s real offensive has not been exposed to the public gaze this year, but on the other hand California's probably has not either. Andy Smith's boys unfurled two or three new plays on the Trojans at Berkeley in 1921 that Gloomy Henderson never saw or heard of before, though he stood in the rain at a previous game to get the dope. It is safe to assume that he has something up his sleeve this year.

REQUIRES TIME

Taking the U.S.C. teams of 1921 and 1922, man for man, it is hard to see where the Trojans gained anything by the graduation of a bunch of stars and substituting for them players from last year's freshman squad. It takes time to make football players, and rarely does a sophomore loom up strong enough for the coaches to forget all about a Dean or a Leadingham or a "Swede" Evans.

In the line Callaid and Lowell Lindley form an impregnable pair at left guard and center, respectively. John Hawkins at the other guard is learning his position, but he's far from being an Orrie Hester, Norman Anderson, if he plays like he did in the last half of the Nevada game, will do a lot to recall the feats of Swede Evans, and his booting from the kick-off seems to be quite as powerful.

There is no Johnny Boyle on the campus for the other tackle position, Newman, Cummings and Blair scrapping it out for the honor of starting in the place of the man who was the big hero on the forward line for U.S.C. last year.

QUARTET OF ENDS

Milton, Emmons, Phythian and Boice are the quartet of ends from whom Henderson will do his picking for Saturday's game, and they will have quite a task in performing better than Smith and Green.

Back of the line Henderson has Bullet Baker to take plunging Charlie Dean's place. As a line plunger, Baker may rank with Dean, but not as an open-field runner. Old Reliable Hobo Kincaid, the guy who ran the heavy interference for Dean, will do the same

Did Somebody Say Brick Was Through?

Brick Muller, California's Wonderful End

A lot of wise guys who have been announcing the retirement of Muller every few days were jolted when the red-headed demon played the game of his young life against the Olympic Club Saturday. He is sure to be a big feature of the California-U.S.C. fracas at Pasadena this week. They always take pictures of Brick throwing a pass, but this feature of his game is the least important, for his blocking, tackling and receiving of passes is above par.

FORM SWIMMING CLUB

The Santa Monica Swimming Club, which is now being organized, will fill a long-felt want among the many who enjoy the surf bathing in the Pacific. As everyone recognizes, our Santa Monica Bay region has become so crowded, due to the enormous growth of Los Angeles and vicinity within the past few years, that on the crowded days space is at a premium and it has become practically impossible to find a place to park one's car, and in many instances it has been impossible to get into the water at all.

The Santa Monica Swimming Club will own a piece of very choice beach frontage, upon which they will erect a very luxurious and commodious clubhouse and will enjoy the privacy of their own beach. This type of club, while new upon the Pacific Coast, enjoys great vogue at the eastern coast resorts and has been developed in the East in a very complete manner. The clubhouse will contain all of the features usually found at a country club, such as men's and women's lounging quarters, a restaurant, ballroom, etc., as well as large, airy dressing quarters, plenty of shower baths, sun parlors and other features that will add greatly to the pleasure of the membership.

The headquarters of the Santa Monica Swimming Club are at the Ambassador Hotel. The organizers are Harry Mull, Richard Vickrey, Mahlon B. Hamilton, Edward Keating and Jack Lawrence. A great many of the most prominent residents of Los Angeles, Hollywood and Beverly Hills have already been enrolled as charter members.

SACCO AND COFFEY MIX AT HOLLYWOOD

Jimmy Sacco, the Boston terrier, and Joe Coffey, the Oakland ring wiz, will appear in the main event at the American Legion's Hollywood arena next Friday night, according to the program arranged by Matchmaker Frank Crowley.

The complete card follows:

Jimmy Sacco vs. Joe Coffey, 135 pounds.
Spec Woods vs. Billy Ketchell, 145 pounds.
Sailors Walters vs. Kid Mohn, 128 pounds.
Lee Mailbert vs. Frankie Farrell, 145 pounds.
Ray Lee vs. Pete Herman, 118 pounds.
Billy Maxwell vs. Jack Welch, 138 pounds.
Tommy Fox vs. Sailor Ebding, 145 pounds.

FISHER AND SILVER TO CLASH AT HARBOR

Sailor Lovell vs. Joe Powell, featherweights.
Sailor Thode vs. Battling Murphy, 128 pounds.
Sailor Frias vs. Sailor Buell, 122 pounds.
Sailor Childers vs. Johnny LaRose, 118 pounds.
Sailor Warman vs. Sailor Mincloff, 135 pounds.
Sailor White vs. Sailor Dave Bliss, 118 pounds.

Newsboys Put on Fast Bouts on Wednesday

On Wednesday evening, the 25th inst., the Los Angeles Newsboys' Athletic Club will put on a first-class series of fisticuffs at their hangout at 209 Court street. The receipts from the fights will go to defray the expenses of the club.

The boys have arranged a big double main event bill with Fidel La Barba, Pacific Coast flyweight champion, and Hymie Sherman, champion in the same class of Canada. Co-starring with them are Kid Chili and Young Joe Rivers who will battle at 112 pounds. Another feature of the evening is two battle royals which always prove to be good stuff.

Big boy Jess Willard has signed up to do the honors as referee Wednesday evening.

The rest of the program is as follows:

Johnny Cooper vs. Battling Savage, 125 pounds.

Benny Miller takes on Joe Pete (Pride of San Pedro,) 100 pounds.

Rocky Kansas vs. Young Charlie Wright, sixty pounds.

Aside from the regular bouts there will be a little entertainment by the club boys.

BLUE AND GOLD GIVEN BIG EDGE

Scribe Predicts Torrid Day for Southerners

Fighting Spirit of Berkeley Team is Praised

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—If University of Southern California showed its true strength when beating Nevada 6 to 0 last Saturday, that team is in for a torrid afternoon next Saturday when the California team takes them on at Pasadena. California looked great last Saturday when beating the strong Olympic Club eleven 25 to 0—great in every department—kicking, running, passing and line plunging, and it would have taken a very high-class team to have beaten them that day.

If the Golden Bears have the same fine edge next Saturday, Los Angeles will see a powerful, smooth-running machine in action. If the boys get cocky, however, and think they have a snap, U.S.C. may surprise them and it will serve them right. If California goes into the game next Saturday with the same determination that it had against U.S.C. last year, it will be a question only of the size of the score.

ANDY DUBIOUS

Andy Smith was dubious about the game with the Olympic Club for he did not want to have any of his men hurt, knowing that he had to meet U.S.C. the following Saturday. He had good luck, for no one was hurt. Jim Spalding has a bad shoulder and was hurt and had to be taken out of the game, but he is not seriously injured and will play part of the game at least next Saturday.

Brick Miller had not been able to scrimmage because of injuries so he was just about counted down and out, but at the last minute last Saturday Andy Smith started him and the big red-head gave about as fine an exhibition of playing end as has ever been seen around these parts. He played the first two quarters and got out unhurt.

If Muller is lucky enough to escape injuries the team will be that much stronger. Muller made a big reputation throwing forward passes. Where his real strength lies is in receiving passes and playing defensive end. Burgess, a new

CREW MAKES IT A GOOD ONE

Henry Ford Lads Heave to and Show Spunk

Bluenose Squarely Beaten by American Boat

Race a Very Close Contest All the Journey

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

GLOUCESTER (Mass.) Oct. 23. A crew of fishermen who were turned from mutiny to racing by urge of patriotism from the Secretary of the Navy, and by plea of pride from a slip of a woman, went out to sea with the Henry Ford, schooner out of Gloucester today, and beat the international champion, Bluenose of Canada. Bluenose was beaten by only two and one-half minutes in forty miles. The official times were: Henry Ford 5:01:34; Bluenose 5:04:00.

But this victory after two days of disturbance over the action of the international race committee in refusing to count the Henry Ford's first success on Saturday, was doubly sweet. As the performance of a vessel, the sails of which had been twice cut down to meet conflicting official rulings, and of men who from the abandon of mutinous despair rose to the stuff for which the port is famous, taking out a vessel with mainsail still unbent to make a quick shift to meet the international champion, it set a standard of high achievement. Only twenty-eight of the thirty men of the Ford sailed with her, two mutineers remaining on the dock.

WHIRLS WHEEL

Capt. Clayton Morrissey whirled the wheel of the Henry Ford, shifted sails, smelled out wind and matched wits with Capt. Angus Walters of the Bluenose, gaining the honors at every point.

The day did not pass without a new complication, however, namely a written protest from Capt. Walters at the starting line that the Bluenose was racing with keel probably damaged by grounding in the mud at his wharf during the night. The protest was taken under consideration.

It was only when the international series seemed at the point of going to the Bluenose and to Canada by forfeit through the mutiny of the men of the American challenger and the acqui-

New Athletic Rule Forces Entrant to Disclose His Past Performances

OLD JOEY TO DEAL OUT K.O.

Benjamin Bent on Putting O'Hara to Sleep

Hook-up Breathes All Over of Fervid Action

Bang-up Card of Fisticuffs at Doyle's Tonight

Joe Benjamin, who has scored more knockouts than any 130-pound boxer in the country during the last two years, will attempt to add another K.O. to his record at Vernon tonight. Benjamin and Teddy O'Hara of San Francisco will meet in the four-round main event and good-looking Joe is frank in stating that the mixup will end long before the twelfth minute.

Matchmaker "Wad" Wadhams believes he has arranged a spicy preliminary program. Two old war horses, Bud Soules and Bobby Allen, will mix in the semi-wind-up. Soules has been absent for many weeks and he hopes to make his first appearance one long to be remembered.

A bunch of promising young "comers" are scattered through the preliminaries. Joe Layman, who was forced to give up the ring with a broken hand three months ago, will come back against Benny Kilroy. Up to the time of his accident, Layman had won eleven straight bouts, most of them by knockouts.

Ray Schauer, who gave Georgie Rivers a stiff argument two weeks ago, meets Frankie Novey, the Sacramento marine.

The best bout on last week's card—"Red" Davis vs. Joey Murphy, will be re-staged as the third preliminary. They stood the house on chairs with their slambang mill last week.

Two promising heavyweights, Eddie Bowen and Fred Brady, will meet in the second preliminary while a pair of bantams, Al Crisp and Al Guillot, will box the curtain raiser.

The first bout is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock, with George Blake acting as referee. Manager Joe Lillard reports an unusually large advance sale and another capacity house is expected.

DE ARCE, THE "SQUIRREL," TO TAKE UP HIS DUTIES ON THE ROOF OF L. A. A. C.

Stephen De Arce, Catalina pro, known to golfers around the world as "Squirrel," will today take up the duties of instructor in the steel-framed courts on the roof of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Members of the Mercury institution who prefer to learn and practice and train on the skyward course look forward to a lively winter season under the direction of this nimble expert. He has a wide reputation as a player, with many spectacular performances to his credit, and is an equally able teacher. Local golf will get new pep with the Wrigley islander's personality and energy injected.

"Squirrel" De Arce has the unique distinction of having been born on Santa Catalina Island, where he passed his twenty-eight years. There he has been playing the difficult course since both he and the game in America were in knee pants, so to speak. The picturesque Catalina nine-hole links were among the first in Southern California and the country, laid out in 1903 and De Arce has played them ally for fifteen years. His record for the double round is 65, three strokes lower than the record held by David Bell, open champion of the United States and Great Britain from 1903 to 1910. De Arce also made the marvelous average of 74 for twenty rounds, 180 holes, and three strokes to spare. His career has been watched with keen interest by famous pros and amateurs everywhere. He is regarded as a second Gene Sarazen.

TUFTS'S CADDY

Years ago De Arce was caddying for Ed Tufts, and there he got the sobriquet that stuck. The barefoot lad would go into a cactus patch, find a ball as unerringly as a retriever a bird, and come out without a scratch. He was so active that the ground couldn't hold him and often when Tufts looked around he saw him up a tree, swinging and grinning, so he green."

dubbed him "Squirrel." Even then the boy could play life course better than many of the amateurs who thought they knew the game.

The new L.A.A.C. instructor is an all-around athlete, a good baseball pitcher and about as classy a swimmer and diver as ever paddled in the Pacific. He holds the Catalina 50 and 125-yard swimming titles; is a distance man with many miles to his credit, and a courageous life-saver. He has rescued shipwrecked boatmen and passengers and once brought a drowning bride from the bottom of the bay, where she had a death grip on a swaying kelp stalk.

WENT TOO FAR

She had ventured too far and had gone down for the last time. When the bride and groom left for the East the former placed in "Squirrel's" hand a little slip of paper directing a certain New York bank to pay him $2500. It bore the name of a multimillionaire. That was three years ago, and every anniversary of the rescue has brought a check for $500 from the same grateful source, simply made out to "Squirrel." When he's not too busy with golf, De Arce may do some stunts in the L.A.A.C. tank, according to Swimming Coach Cady.

De Arce's prowess—he is master of all strokes on sand or grass greens—was aptly illustrated last spring, when Malcolm MacLean of the Chicago Tribune was on the island. "One afternoon," wrote Mr. MacLean, "I heard 'Squirrel' call out to a man at the second tee, 115 yards away. 'Here come your three balls,' and he actually drove those three balls to the fellow's feet. 'Squirrel' showed us how to play a midiron pitch, 150 yards away, so it would cling to the sand greens, and blessed if he didn't pitch two of them so they struck within eight feet of the flag, and the third was at the edge of the

GRID EVIDENCE SUMMED UP

With Saturday's scores in and duly entered, Old Man Dope has received another hard wallop, the Pomona Sagehens and Coach Joe Pipal's Occidental Tigers doing the dirty work this time.

Next Friday's combats between Whittier and Occidental and Redlands and Pomona will draw a fairly good comparison between the teams of the conference. Chief interest centers in the Occidental-Whittier fracas at Occidental, as it will definitely establish the Tigers as contenders or put them out of the running. The Poets aren't as bad as their defeat at the hands of Caltech would intimate, as they amply proved on Saturday by defeating the San Diego Teachers by as many points as the Tigers did.

UPSETS DOPE

Before last Saturday's encounters the general consensus of opinion was that Southern Branch had a mighty good chance of trimming the Oxy crew, and that Fox Stanton's California Tech Beavers might easily slip over a decisive win on the Sagehens. However, the afternoon's play took a different turn, the Tigers handing the Cubs a 14-to-7 beating, and Coach Eugene Nixon's Claremonters running rough-shod over the Beavers for a 46-to-6 victory. And thus were the hopes of the Cubs and Beavers shattered, after a short week of football supremacy in the conference.

The game at Claremont quickly developed into a track meet for the Sagehens. The Blue and White backfield ripped over the Beaver tackles for tremendous gains, Clark on one occasion taking the ball sixty-five yards over the right side of the Caltech line for a touchdown. Glenn Doughty, playing his initial game of the season, hit the ends for ten and fifteen yards practically every time he carried the ball. Stanton's stone-wall line, which had repulsed the mighty Suggett, was a myth to the Sagehens.

Are the Claremonters a great team this year, or did the Beavers play over their heads against Whittier? Probably the Poets are weaker this year, and Stanton had prepared a special defense against Suggett. The Poets were overconfident. As a result, the Caltech crew got the upper hand to start with, and once on top were hard to dislodge. The second question then is, are the Sagehens stronger than last year. Yes, they are. Pomona defeated Caltech only 10 to 0 last season, and that after a hard struggle. Saturday the Blue and White eleven made two touchdowns before the game was five minutes old. Coach Nixon has a well-balanced line and a mighty speedy backfield, undoubtedly the best in the conference.

RISES TO OCCASION

Oxy rose to the occasion in great shape by defeating the Cubs. The teams are apparently very evenly matched. The Tigers played hard football and grabbed the two breaks in the first quarter. After that the Little Bears played the Eagle Rock chaps to a standstill. The Southern Branchers were great favorites to win the game and their defeat leaves the situation rather balled up, until Pomona and the Bulldogs get together at Claremont next Saturday.

Southern California conference standings follow:

Team—	Won.	Lost.	P.c.
Pomona	1	0	1.000
Occidental	1	0	1.000
Caltech	1	1	.500
Southern Branch	1	1	.500
Redlands	0	1	.000
Whittier	0	1	.000

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—By winning Saturday's contest with the Oregon Aggies the University of Washington football machine jumped into first place in the early-season Pacific Coast conference race with two games won and none lost.

The Aggies had the better of the first period, owing to their plunging tactics, but Washington, aided greatly by the punting of Halfback Leonard Ziel, downed the farmers by a score of 14 to 3.

The manner in which the University of California trounced the crack Olympic Club team 30 to 0 led experts to assert that the Bears had a worthy successor to the two preceding championship machines of their school.

The California line, which it was thought might yield to the Olympic attack, proved impervious and the team developed good ground-gaining ability. Brick Muller, sensational player of last year, was at right end for California early in the game and broke up many Olympic plays. Bradshaw, former Nevada star, played well for Olympic but the speedy little quarterback never got clear for runs.

Stanford's defeat of St. Mary's College was not impressive. The only scoring was done by Cuddeback, Stanford fullback, who kicked three field goals which defeated St. Mary's, 9 to 0. Although Stanford had her full force in the game for two periods, St. Mary's line held against their attack.

FINAL RALLY

The University of Southern California defeated Nevada University, 6 to 0, but the score was not made until the last three minutes of play. It was alleged that the Southern Californians were keeping their best plays hidden from possible observers of the University of California, with which institution's fighting crew they will tangle next Saturday. The wonderful game of Halfback "Bunny" Hug, assisted by ten other Nevadans, however, forced the Southerners to the limit to score in the last few minutes on a series of plays started by Halfback Campbell.

The Multnomah Athletic Club of Portland downed Gonsaga University to the tune of 35 to 20.

EASTERN GAMES

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Harvard, Yale and Princeton convincingly demonstrated why they are the "Big Three" of Eastern football and through their trio of victories, gave cause for the prediction that the annual group of contests among them late in the season will be of sizzling intensity.

Overshadowing in popular interest all the other contests staged in the eastern arena last week-end, was the Harvard-Centre game at Cambridge, which, while not fought as closely to form as it had been "doped," ended approximately in what critics had expected, a victory for Harvard.

REAL STUFF

In the second half, the Kentuckians showed that they were more than a picturesque collection of gladiators and that they really had football stuff. Their fumbles in the first quarter, and their inability to collect themselves against the Crimson onslaught, were a poor picture of what the Colonels really are capable.

Harvard proved that it has strength. Yale and Princeton showed that they, too, have power, the former by vanquishing Williams, 38 to 0, and the Tigers by clawing Maryland, 26 to 0.

The upsets of the day included Vermont's amazing victory over Dartmouth, 6 to 3; New York University's defeat of Columbia, 7 to 6, and Washington and Lee's tie game with West Virginia, 12 to 12.

In three games preceding Saturday's Dartmouth had scored sixty points and had prevented its opponents from scoring one point.

NOT AN UPSET

The Navy's clean-cut victory over Georgia Tech was not an upset, even though it had the element of surprise. The much-heralded "jump shift" of the Georgians held no terrors for the Middies, who scored in each of the first two periods by a consistent, persistent attack. The Navy was on top most of the time and deserved its victory of 13 to 0.

Revenge for last year's defeat, 10 to 7, was obtained by the Army in the battle at West Point with New Hampshire, in which the final score was 62 to 0. The Army showed a well-balanced team at the start and later rang in a string of substitutes.

BIG TEN FOOTBALL

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—With five teams still in the 1000 per cent column, Chicago to play Princeton on the midway and three games for next Saturday, followers of Big

Mr. Gus Henderson, who as football coach holds down the chair of pessimistic philosophy at U.S.C., again has the gang, meaning public, guessing.

Question before house is whether Henderson displayed his full strength against Nevada, or is hiding the glory of his gridiron eleven under a bushel.

To some it appeared that the Trojans played real football just ten minutes against the Nevadans. Some contend that the team is capable of playing real football for sixty minutes. That would have made a different score, and if true would place a different aspect on the game with California next Saturday. Not that it would necessarily imply a victory over the Bears, for we doubt that Gus, even in his wildest forays of gleominess, believes his eleven can turn that trick, but it would mean a close battle.

Many, prior to the game with California last season, believed that Henderson possibly had something under cover. This, however, did not prove the case. His eleven, which hardly classed with the Bears, was simply slow in developing, as are most of Henderson's machines. The team did not really "arrive" until some weeks later when in the contest with Washington State, the closing one of the season, the Trojans were at the very top of their game and they rolled up a much larger score against Washington State than had California earlier in the season. The eleven which defeated Washington State, I believe, would have stood an excellent chance with the Bears of this season, unless the latter are fully up to the standard of the 1921 champions.

But the Trojans strike one as possibly several degrees weaker than last year, while the Bears, with second and third teams of experienced players from which to derive their man power, should be very close to their standard of the past three years and, in fact, their game against the Olympic Club would suggest as much.

The Trojans may spring the unexpected, but the process of football building, which requires high-class, experienced reserves of two and three-year men, is in a newer stage in the south, and it is doubtful whether the Trojans will be capable of coping with the Bears before two more seasons have elapsed.

That Henderson's elevens as a rule are slow in developing is no myth. And to this extent he is unfortunate in having an early game staged with the Coast's strongest eleven. Gus once explained this backwardness of his teams during a whispered conversation at a banquet board. He played football at Oberlin under Harvey Snyder, a former Harvard man.

Harvard, probably more than any other eleven in the country, points to a certain game. For this reason the Crimson is never crowded by its coaches, but allowed to develop slowly, and as a result has played some notoriously bad early-season football. This system was so thoroughly instilled in Henderson that he has difficulty in discarding it, if indeed it would be desirable. His hardest game should be the last one on his schedule, and eventually he may get a crack at California under these conditions.

May strike some as sacrilegious to ring in anything as sordid as the clothing business, and particularly the subject of pants, in the same column with our noblest sport, but here is an urgent note which demands attention. In fact, it presents a question as puzzling as an algebraic equation. Listen:

"Dear Sir: Sign near Fifth and Broadway reads, 'Two Pairs of Pants With Each Suit.' How many pants should a customer get? I say three. The other sport says two. Which is what? We pant for a reply.—Fred Atkin, 3530 North Broadway."

While these gentlemen are panting for a reply, yours truly is going to straddle the fence on the subject of pants. What does make a suit? It depends on the kind of suit. If a bathing suit, it takes less to make one in Venice than in Long Beach. The legs are a component part of a union suit and without the legs it isn't a suit. A shirt doesn't make a suit in this country, but is regarded as a full-dress suit in Africa. It would strike one that pants under our system of Anglo-Saxon civilization are not a mere annex to the suit proper, but an integral part of the suit. With these suggestions we leave the subject open for discussion.

Ten football have settled down to watch the reeling dope bucket which all but emptied itself on two occasions yesterday. That it was not entirely upset was due to the one all-important safety by which Iowa was able to nose out Illinois, while the 7-to-7 tie between Minnesota and Northwestern proved the other spill of the day.

Michigan's 19-to-0 triumph over Ohio was not altogether unexpected, the Buckeyes have a green team, while the Wolverines boxed a veteran organization. Other games followed expectations rather closely, Chicago winning from Purdue 13 to 0 and Wisconsin beating Indiana 20 to 0. Notre Dame won handily from the strong De Pauw eleven and Rochne's men are apparently to meet the best in the country on equal terms.

The Illinois game was the greatest surprise of the day as Illinois was considered one of the weak teams of the conference. The Illini have apparently developed the same spirit that beat Ohio against overwhelming odds last year and coaches on the Illini schedule are preparing to meet a dangerous foe. On the other hand, the conquerors of the Yale Bulldogs have shown themselves to be only mortal and teams that have yet to meet Iowa have gained confidence from yesterday's close game.

The Chicago-Princeton game, probably the most important in the country next Saturday, will draw the attention of enthusiasts from coast to coast. Neither team has had an opportunity to show its real strength and neither has extended itself for the benefit of hostile scouts. Chicago's showing since the Georgia game has not been considered as satisfactory as could be wished but no one doubts that the veteran Coach Stagg has kept his sleeve well filled with surprises for this game and will put a real contender on the field. Indications to date are that he will gain entry to beat the Tigers as he did a year ago with the East's own game, the pile driving and slashing type of straight football that in time weakens the best of lines.

RISK STANDINGS

Two of the present conference leaders will risk their ranking in conference games next Saturday—Minnesota and Michigan. Of these two games, the Minnesota-Ohio game should be the most interesting.

Michigan in her game with Illinois will probably be extended to check the spirit which the Illini showed yesterday. The Wolverines will be topheavy fighters, however.

Iowa in the third conference game of the day will meet Purdue.

The Boilermakers were just fair against Chicago's second and third string men Saturday and the Hawkeyes, after their Illinois experience, will probably endeavor to pile up a comfortable score and take no chances. Indiana and the Michigan Aggies mix in the only other game of the day in which a conference team is involved. The Hoosiers have faced heavy odds to date and this game should give them an opportunity to try their mettle on a basis more nearly even.

find in the California back field, can throw a football as hard and as true as Muller, but not for such tremendous distance, so it is not likely that Muller will do much throwing this year. He is more apt to be on the receiving end.

TEST PROVES WORTH

The surprise last Saturday was the strength of the California line. That was the weak spot on the team in the earlier games, but when put to the test by the powerful and experienced Olympic Club linemen, the Bears showed wonderfully well.

That is what makes old-timers say that California has a great team this year. Probably better than last year, if not quite up to the standard of the 1920 outfit which beat Ohio State.

In Spalding, Nichols, Burgess, Erb, Evans, Dunn, Nesbit and Morrison, California has two complete sets of backs and one quartet is about as good as the other.

So, unless Gus Henderson is hiding something big, he will be stepping on his lower lip after California gets through with U.S.C.

for Baker, and in this respect U.S.C. is not one whit weaker.

It's a toss-up who will start in the other two places. Campbell seems a certainty and Dolley will probably draw the other assignment. Dolley is a plugger, but does not have the uncanny ability to slip through openings on the offensive that Leadingham had. Campbell is the will of the wisp of the Trojan backfield this wear. He is as cool as a cucumber under fire, and the team seems to go better when he is in the game. For reserves Henderson has the Galloways, Tony Wayahan, Phil Tiernan, Riddle and one or two other young gentlemen in the backfield.

GLOBE ICE CREAM FIVE TAKES HONORS

Close behind the Globe Bowlers was the Walker Electric Co. with 2850. Shay, Turner, Firestone, Greuner and Cohn formed the Globe five. Last night at the Angelus Alleys, the opening match of the Mercantile League was played.

Spring New Rule in College Athletic Sports

Innovation Will be Tried in Freshmen Race

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—What may be the opening wedge in a campaign for publicity regarding the personnel of all college athletic combinations previous to big contests will be inaugurated at the coming intercollegiate cross-country championship run at Van Cortlandt Park late next month.

The innovation will be tried in connection with the freshman titular race, and will involve a complete disclosure of the entrant's previous scholastic and collegiate athletic activities.

Under the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association of America regulations, the entry of an unlimited number of freshmen is permitted up to the formal closing of the field. At the special request of the leading eastern athletic coaches, a further entry of not more than five men will be permitted up to within forty-eight hours of the start. The coaches originally requested the post entries be received but the committee ruled against this suggestion and compromised on the additional five-man entry. This action in part met the contention of the coaches that it was not always possible to know the ability of all freshmen runners at the time the formal entries closed.

In accepting the forty-eight-hour entry, the I.C.A.A.A.A. saw an opportunity to put into effect a plan of publicity regarding athletic entrants and adopted a rule that all competitors in the first year event must furnish a complete list of school and college scholastic standing, activity and records in all sports in which they had competed, and particularly in track and field athletic events in which a point or prize winning position had been scored.

According to unofficial statements, this method of ascertaining the athletes' complete athletic history may be later adopted for all dual, triangular and championship competitions under the jurisdiction of the organization. Working with other similar collegiate sports governing bodies, it is hoped that in time a plan may be broadened to cover baseball, football, basketball and other intercollegiate sports.

The I.C.A.A.A.A. would then provide for compiling of such data and its distribution, not only to the press, but to competing colleges and alumni, varsity clubs and other similar organizations for inspection previous to competition. This would afford an opportunity for detecting any irregularities in the statement furnished by the proposed contestants and eliminate what is known in college athletic circles as the "ringer," "drifter" and "college jumper."

escence of their skipper, that Secretary of the Navy Denby and Mrs. Jonathan Raymond of Boston, stepped into the picture. Secretary Denby was on the wharf to sail again with the Henry Ford as he did on Saturday. Mrs. Raymond had gone with her husband, a part owner in the schooner, to see what he could do to turn them back.

PLEA TO PRIDE

She stepped in with a word or two, a plea to their pride and they wavered and took counsel on it with another. Secretary Denby addressed them as shipmate to shipmate, as the leader of the nation's Navy to sporting defenders of its flag in an international challenge race and finally with two exceptions, the burly fishermen heeded the brisk command of their captain:

"Boys, get aboard and bend that mainsail."

Honors at the start went to the Henry Ford's captain. The schooners went across in the same second, Bluenose slightly in advance. But she was on the Gloucestermen's lee and was adjusting herself after wearing around. The Henry Ford came down with all kites flying, swung into the weather berth, luffing past the Bluenose. Robbed of the wind, the Canadian swung almost idly, while the Henry Ford and its recent mutineers stepped along to a lead that was never headed.

The international committee in charge of the fishermen's races here tonight reiterated through Chairman W. W. Luhs at a banquet in honor of the two racing crews, that Saturday's race stands as no contest and that the series will be resumed on Wednesday.

The postponement over tomorrow was voted, it was explained, because of the illness of Capt. Clayton Morrissey of the Henry Ford, and at his request.

ALLISON FILM READY

STAR RETURNS AFTER LONG ABSENCE FROM SCREEN

By Edwin Schallert

News of May Allison having been conspicuously wanting for some time, we find interest in the fact that, according to wire from the East, her photoplay, "The Woman Who Fooled Herself," has been completed, and the release date set for next Sunday. This is an Edward MacManus production, the first of a series to be made entirely in Porto Rico. Miss Allison and Robert Ellis, her husband, are featured.

One of the most realistic scenes shows a genuine tropical storm. In another night street carnival is depicted. This was in San Juan itself. The entire town turned out for this carnival, which was photographed in all its native reality. Charles A. Logue directed, with Mr. Ellis.

Alice Brady Feature

Alice Brady's next Paramount picture will be "The Leopardess" from an unpublished novel by Katherine Newlin Burt. The picture will be made at the Long Island studio under the direction of Henry Kolker, who produced "Disraeli" with George Arliss, and who has just completed a picture with Madge Kennedy, "The Purple Highway."

Ultra-Modern Music

Expounding theories concerning ultra-modern tendencies in music, Henry Cowell, a composer and pianist, who is at present residing here, presented the first of a series of lecture-recitals before a small group of musicians last night at the studio of Winifred Hooke, on South Union avenue. Subsequent talks on this subject will be given by Mr. Cowell on succeeding Monday evenings for a period of weeks.

Most interesting was Mr. Cowell's tracing of the development of harmony to overtones and so-called undertones. He showed where the first overtone—that is the octave—dominated music of the Greeks, and how the fifth and second overtone, dominated the earliest church music, giving place in time to the fourth and the third and other elements of the harmonic system.

He argued the undertone is something more than a mere theory, declaring that it was a vibration produced by the collision of two other vibrations in midair, according to the law of physics. He furnished proof of the founding of minor harmonies on a natural system of undertones, whereas the major harmonies are based on overtones.

"Step by step composers have been led into more and more intricate harmonies," said Mr. Cowell, "simply by a natural progress, which is constantly changing all the concepts of consonance and dissonance.

"It is absurd for a composer today to try to write in the style of Bach because he could never master this style as Bach did. It belongs to a different period in the development of music.

"In his time Bach was severely censured for the new harmonies that he introduced. It is much the same in every time."

Comedy on Top at Hillstreet This Week

We just found out yesterday that "Love is an Awful Thing." Watch Owen Moore at the Hillstreet, if you don't believe it, and you will soon agree, for the duration of nine-tenths of the picture at least. It isn't until the very end, when we see Owen and Marjorie Daw lined up before our doubts, that we begin to have our doubts. After all, what he went through was worth the trouble. "Love is an Awful Thing" is farce, but that isn't all. It's good farce.

Sharing comedy honors with the picture on the week's bill is W. C. Field and his Ford. His "Field's Family Ford" is almost as funny as Harry Tate's famous act with the London Follies—and that's quite a recommendation. Also in the comedy line is Al K. Hall, who doesn't pull a souse act in spite of his name, in "The Sap." The sap just about describes it.

Chris Mann's orchestra is supposed to be one of the big ones on the bill. They play each number half a dozen times, and then for fear we don't know what it is, make an announcement of the title. The announcement is appreciated. As a dance orchestra Chris and his gang make a lot of noise. But perhaps that's what they are after.

The Nagyfys are apparently equipped with asbestos interiors. Their specialty is eating fire and applying tremendous heat to the tongue, all of which is very mystifying and interesting. Peggy Bremen and her brother open the show with a ladder stunt that seems to be difficult, and the Ramsdells and Deyo offer a dance act.

Young Tony is Stopping Bill for Pantages

Stopping shows hasn't become so common as to be classed an ordinary occurrence on any vaudeville stage. Little Tony Wyser, associated with Ross, and Wyse at Pantages this week, did it, though. Tony's size is his greatest asset; it makes a hit with everyone right at the start. And they pull a number of new stunts that are very acceptable.

Fox and Fletcher offer a breezy patter line in a manner that evokes laughter. Page, Hack and Mack call especial attention to their finish, which is the nearest thing to a hair-raising act seen in a long time. Their line is tumbling and hand stands, and they excel in that line. George LaShay is a marimbaphonist of some merit. "In a Looking Glass" is a dance revue that offers a number of good-looking girls equipped with numerous changes of costume, not to mention the dancing.

People are still laughing at Harold Lloyd in "A Sailor-Made Man," perhaps because it was one of the best things Lloyd did. That picture is the main attraction on the silver screen at Pantages this week, although there are a number of short films that prove interesting. One of these shows a sea elephant expedition in Guadalupe.

"BEGGAR MAID" STILL GEM OF PHOTO-IMAGER

No program can be described as dull which contains so lyrical a bit of photo-imagery as "The Beggar Maid" showed yesterday at the Garrick Theater. It has been viewed before here, but its return was welcomed, because it is a gem of imagination and beauty. It is the story, as you may know, of the Burne-Jones painting, King Cophetua and the Beggar Maid," based on a poem by Tennyson.

Nature is utilized to give mood and grace to the seperate sequences, while Mary Astor is ideally chosen for the beggar-maid role. She approximates the spiritual type of the Burne-Jones model. Reginald Denny is effectively cast as the prince, while the other characters, the crippled brother of the girl and the yokel who would guard her from the prince's advances, are admirably played.

"The Beggar Maid" has artistry of form and spirit, and may consequently be recommended.

The picture was part of a so-called cinema-vaudeville bill, made up of short film subjects. The remainder of the program contained a vivid melodrama, a rather mediocre comedy and a very engaging scenic.

The entire program is to be changed today.

MATZENAUER SINGS THURSDAY EVENING

Thursday night at the Philharmonic Auditorium, Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, contralto, will give her only recital in Southern California, presenting a program of variety and merit. Her numbers will consist of five groups, including one of Spanish folk songs arranged by the noted pianist-composer, Frank La Forge, and a song dedicated to Mme. Matzenauer by Miss Elinor Warren, "The Heart of a Rose." Miss Warren will also be the accompanist for one group of songs.

ANNIVERSARY BILL

ORPHEUM CELEBRATES ITS THIRD OF CENTURY

By Grace Kingsley

The old boy Orpheus never surpassed his near namesake, the Orpheum, when it comes to doing a continuous performance with a lure. A third of a century ago, the Orpheum started magnetizing us, and the charm has never been broken. There are some new faces, but it's the same old charm.

It would be so easy to go into one's anecdotage, and tell how sketches were built as they went along in those days, and how bare legs were never seen, but we'll resist the temptation. Vaudeville should have reached the age of discretion, but thank heaven it hasn't! It's the same old laugh-teaser as of old.

It is anniversary week, down there, and the place is decorated with flags. Last night Mayor Cryer made a little speech, telling us how much we owed a theatrical institution that made us forget dull care and that sort of thing; and the crowded house showed its appreciation by applauding everything in sight. Numerous picture stars decorated the orchestra chairs, too, most of them born long since the Orpheum was. There were Katherine MacDonald, Tom Mix, Al St. John and half a dozen others.

Then the bill started unrolling, showing us how vaudeville has improved in the last third of a century. Doc Baker shakes a mean lightning-change wardrobe, stepping behind a screen to emerge instantly all dolled up in another get-up. But he doesn't thrust this upon us with a "what-a-brave-boy-am-I" manner. He does it all easily, and there are a lot of girls to take your mind off him if you feel like forgetting how unearthly clever he is. Polly Walker is a lovely bambino of the blonde sort, who sings and steps charmingly, and Bud and Jack Dearson are wizzes at the Siamese twins dancing stuff.

"The Old Family Tin-Type" is a scream, with Chick Yorke and Rose King emerging from the volume aforesaid to do just the things, by heck, you'd expect Aunt Eliza and Uncle Hezekiah to do if they could step out of the plush album.

An exquisite voice has Eldrie Gilmore, besides which she and her partner, Frank Fisher, put over a rube scene that's a whiz-bang and good for the encore, which calls out a coon-shouting melody called "Nobody Lied When They Said I Cried About You," that brings the bull's-eye.

Dick Himber is an infantile youth with a nice violin, who proves he is a lot more than a mere fiddler, and Corrine Himber dances like a baby whirlwind.

We never knew before that canoeing could be done in the hilltops, but heavens! Smith and Strong do it just like that! A canoe brings the boys in, showing them clad in the cowboy and Indian scenery, respectively, and they warble nicely, everything from Toot! to the Pinky Blues.

The opening spot is enlivened by an acrobatic act, done without music, and in a slow fashion that must be a lot harder and which is more entertaining than it would be if done snappily. A mighty neat act, which got good returns from the crowd.

An after-piece, with everybody in the show taking part, winds up the proceedings, and deserves the noise it gets.

ORDYNSKI TO DIRECT FOR FAMOUS-LASKY

They seem to be scooping in at least their share of the big ones out at the Lasky studio. Now it is no less famous a person than Richard Ordynski, who used to help Max Reinhardt put on those great spectacles, over in Europe, who is to aid in picture uplift by directing for Lasky, if present plans do not go wrong.

Mr. Ordynski at present is studying the gentle art of picture direction at the Lasky studio. This will not be his first picture experience, however, as he wrote and directed a Theda Bara starring feature for Fox, a few years ago.

The Russian artist has a big reputation, not only abroad, but in this country, having staged and managed a tour of Gareth Hughes in "Everyman," and having to his credit a few seasons ago the stage direction of productions at the Metropolitan in New York.

He directed the Lasky star, Pola Negri, in the stage production of "Sumurun," abroad a few seasons ago.

Girard Benefit Matinee

This is to be Harry Girard Day at the Morosco Theater. The program promises to be brilliant. Oliver Morosco has donated the use of the theater this afternoon. The members of the Morosco cast playing "Abie's Irish Rose" are giving one act of the play as their contribution to the benefit performance for the veteran actor, Harry Girard. Miss Maude Fulton likewise has donated an act of "The Humming Bird," now playing Egan's Little Theater.

Louise Dresser and Jack Gardner, whose names are famous in vaudeville, have arranged an unusual program of star vaudeville acts. Fanchon and Marco of the Orpheum, Rae Samuels, vaudeville star, Grace Fisher and Walter Hiers and Mrs. Harry Girard are other noted artists who will take part.

Mr. Girard is lying very ill at home, suffering from a broken hip, and even if he escapes the threatened operation, it will be at least three months before he can resume work.

PRODUCER SUED FOR LEGAL FEES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A suit for $55,000 for legal services was begun in the Supreme Court today against Thomas H. Ince, motion-picture producer by Frederick F. Neuman, J. Boyce Smith, Charles H. Duell, Jr., and George Newglass, lawyers, through their attorneys, Stanchfield & Levy.

The action is based on professional services stated to have been rendered since May 31 in connection with an alleged agreement between Ince and the Associated First National Pictures. These services are said, by the attorneys to be "reasonably worth $60,000, of which Ince has paid only $5000 on account."

Big successes are built by taking where others let go.

The man to trust is the man who is too ignorant deceive you.

In tight places, the influence you have in reserve out amazingly.

Adam meant it when he told Eve she was the woman on earth for him.

Reducing ignorance to a science seems to be the aim of the average politician.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HINT
It is not necessary to shampoo your hair so frequently if it is entirely properly cleansed each time. The use of a really good shampoo is the easiest to use and most effective shampoo that we have mentioned to our readers in recent years. It dissolves out all the natural oil of the hair and may be entirely rinsed with very little expense, by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox (which can be obtained from any druggist) in a cup of hot water. Add enough to make a full cup of shampoo mixture, which is so it is easy to apply directly to the hair instead of just pouring on the head. This, when rubbed into the scalp and onto every strand of hair, chemically softens all impurities. It is very refreshing and cooling in its action, and as beneficial to both scalp and hair. After rinsing out the shampoo, as directed, you will find the hair fresh, clean and free from dandruff, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a beautiful luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy, abundant.

Children Are Suffocated!
When children die from croup they usually are poisoned by the phlegm. As long as the air passages are open, croup cannot prove fatal.
The old barbarous method of attempting to dissolve down a child's throat with a spoonful of hot fluid is ineffectual and dangerous. Put a spoonful of Vicks in a cup and let the child inhale the soothing vapor. This liquefies the air passages and controls coughing and gasping. As an extra precaution apply ointment freely to neck and chest, covering with hot flannel. Many a life after other methods have failed.
The genuine Dennis' Kuko Ointment, which has been used successfully for over thirty years in cases of croup, whooping cough, tonsilitis, bronchitis and respiratory ailments, physicians prescribe and recommend. Both 25-cent and 50-cent sizes. Money back if not satisfied. Dennis Mfg. Co., Manufacturing Chemists, Berkeley, Cal.—(Advertisement.)

People and Their Troubles

Elizabeth Jordan's Column.

THE COOLEST HEAD

We all wonder at times how we would act in crises. Some of us have opportunities to find out, and our after-opinion of ourselves is colored by the memory of the way we met those opportunities. More frequently we have a chance to watch others go through crises, and our opinion of them is naturally raised or lowered by their conduct at such times.

Recently I had an opportunity to observe an entire neighborhood meeting a crisis, and it was an educational experience.

One of the houses in our street had caught fire. This was a serious matter to all the residents of the little summer community, for the houses, separated only by their lawns and gardens, are fairly close together and the fire department is temperamental and uncertain. The fire started in the E's house at night and a good stiff October breeze was blowing. The E's house was of wood, with a shingle roof. Most of the houses on the street were built of wood and most of the roofs were shingled. The neighbors gave a sympathetic thought to the E's and hastened to their barns and garages for ladders and lanterns to protect their own houses.

A few, of course, hurried at once to the E's. The fire department, as usual, was late. There was some misunderstanding about the street. Mr. E, one of the supposedly coolest men I know, seized a satchel containing the family's most precious securities and valuables and left it with a neighbor.

With that off his mind, he spent the next fifteen minutes rushing up and down the stairs of the burning house, carrying a lighted lantern in one hand and a small ladder in the other, but stopping nowhere and doing nothing. When he was spoken to he did not hear. He had completely lost his head.

MR. X. KEEPS COOL.

The next door neighbor, Mr. X, a bank official, came in to lend a helping hand in carrying out furniture, for the whole roof of the house was ablaze, and the building seemed to be doomed.

"Whatever we do, let's keep cool," he grasped as he seized a valuable chair and hurled it through the front door with a force that broke one of its slender legs. Above all, let's keep calm." I heard him gurgle, as he smashed a window a little later in his effort to get it open.

A few of the women neighbors were in the house helping Mrs. E. One of the finest of these, a woman universally loved and with good reason, made me an abashed confidence the next day.

"I went in to help Mrs. E. carry out her best things," she said, "but all I could think of when I got there were mother's photographs. Mrs. E. and my mother were lifelong friends till mother died, and Mrs. E. had mother's picture in almost every room in her house. It seemed to me I just couldn't let them burn, so I found myself picking them up, wherever I was, and forgetting about other things."

Other neighbors, with panic fears of a spread of flames were in their homes, collecting their own treasures. Still others, in the crowd that watched the burning house, helplessly gossiped and speculated.

"There's Mrs. E. now, up in her bedroom," cried one. "The poor dear! I wish I could help her, but John's afraid to have me go in the house. He's in there, doing his best. What do you s'pose she's trying to save? I'm sure I wouldn't know what to choose, if my house was burning!" The women around her began to compare opinions as to what one should save.

THE ONE COOL HEAD.

In the house amazingly little was being said. A line had been formed and pails of water were passed to the attic, to be thrown up on the burning roof. Every one was working. If one asked a question no one seemed to hear it. From time to time a certain gruff voice in the amateur brigade gave orders which were blindly followed. Through them, undoubtedly, the house was saved, for the fire was kept under control till the department finally came.

An hour later, when the flames were extinguished and members of the E. family were eating sandwiches and drinking hot cocoa, Mr. E. said, with a shame-faced grin, "Well, I don't know what we'd have done without Tom Ely! He just happened to be passing and he ran in and took full charge. Funny, isn't it, that the town's 'black sheep' could keep his head better than all the rest of us put together!"

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

Refers to Commandments

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In a recent Times, G. W. Brown, in referring to my recent letter, which appeared under the caption, "Modern Commandments," accuses me of seeking to discredit the prohibition law. Evidently he missed the point of my letter altogether. I referred to the Eighteenth Amendment as a symptom of disease merely, not as the disease itself. I did not advance any argument for or against; it is a waste of time when there are those who cannot differentiate between a drink and a drunk!

Mr. Brown asks if I ever knew of a case where coffee drinking or smoking ever caused crime. Certainly not, so why this movement against tobacco? When I was living in Seattle a few years ago it was a misdemeanor there to smoke a cigarette on the street!

My letter was intended as a protest against freak legislation. I advocated an enforcement of the Sixth and Seventh commandments. Mr. Brown ignores that reference. Perhaps if he and others would familiarize themselves thoroughly with all ten, they might be able to forget the liquor question for a while.

REGINALD W. MARTIN.

Didn't Seem to Care

SAWTELLE, Oct. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have been in this State only two days and my observation is a very generous man and very peculiar police. A very presentable man of 70 was knocked sprawling to the sidewalk by a considerably larger man of about 30, of rather athletic physique. He was asked by others who witnessed the act to report to the police. He declined as generously as a man still dazed and bleeding could do. I went to police headquarters, which is only a cross the street, and said to the police: "See that man with a bleeding face and bloody handkerchief. He was knocked down by the man who has the news stand near the corner." I was informed that if the man who was hurt had no complaint to make it was immaterial to them. So far as I could ascertain, the aged man's worst offense was that the ruffian who struck him did not want to be bothered with stock solicitors.

H. E. HALL.

Bananas as Food

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I cannot refrain from an answer to an article in your paper of the 14th inst., "Bananas Must be Matured." With all due credit to Dr. Mendel and his experiments, I, too, have done a little experimenting on my own child, who has eaten raw bananas since he was 8 months old. He is now 20 months old and has never had a sick day. The majority of people do not know a ripe banana when they see one. That is why they disagree with them. Also, they make the mistake of eating them after a good meal instead of eating them as a meal, for they are very nourishing. A ripe banana is a laxative and unripe ones very constipating. A ripe banana is not necessarily soft, but the skin should be black and yellow (spotted) all over and particularly the end must be black with no green on the skin.

Women Will Fight

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have been a reader of your paper for a long time and I am always interested in reading the letters from its readers. It oftimes amuses me to read the really silly letters of the wet advocates. I consider prohibition to be the grandest and most beneficial law ever enacted for the wives and children of workingmen. I and my children suffered and went hungry many, many times, simply because my husband spent his weekly wage or most of it at least, for liquor. He always received big wages, being a bricklayer and always had work, but we were always in want. Our husbands may pass resolutions in their labor unions advocating the return of liquor, but their wives will see to it when election comes around that liquor will be kept on the shelf and out of sight. The wives and daughters of the workingman are the bulwarks and stronghold of prohibition.

Original Schlatter

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] As there seems to be some controversy as to the identity of the so-called divine healer, — Francis Schlatter, I would like to give what information I have upon the subject:

When Francis Schlatter first came into the limelight as a healer, which was at Denver, Colo., in about 1895-6, I was then living in Denver and was one of the number passing through the line to greet him and to watch his work there.

Later on, when "Francis Schlatter" appeared in Los Angeles representing himself to be the original healer of that name who was in Denver, I went to see him for the purpose of discovering if he was really the same man, but I found a totally different looking individual. I satisfied myself at that time, after talking with the Los Angeles healer, that he was not the man who was in Denver, though he represented himself to be such. The man who is now dead in St. Louis is without doubt the original Schlatter who was in Denver, and who became so widely known as the healer.

"Individual Freedom"

PASADENA, Oct. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Permit just a word to Mr. Burt Ordway, and such as hold similar views about, "individual freedom."

—Notwithstanding the Declaration of Independence that man is "endowed with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," our government has, in the past, and will, no doubt again, demand all these, even life itself, of millions of our young men in times of our national stress and war.

For a like reason every town and city deprives us of many so-called rights.

A democracy is government by the people themselves. And the United States of America has agreed that the will of the majority shall rule here.

The burden of drunkenness and all its attendant evils, are a public charge, to a very large extent.

Now the government has a perfect right to prohibit that which causes drunkenness, insanity, idiocy, poverty, murder, etc. Hence prohibition.

Prohibition is in the Constitution and it is there to stay, because the overwhelming majority of us want it there, and because the refusal of only thirteen out of the forty-eight States is all that is necessary to prevent it from being taken out of the Constitution.

Just another word, the writer is a naturalized citizen. He had to swear among other things, "to maintain and uphold the Constitution" of the United States of America, of course. Every native-born citizen is under a like obligation. My penalty for violation of the Eighteenth Amendment would be to be deprived of all such of their citizenship for all time and noncitizen, deported and forever forbidden to return. Vote for the Wright bill.

Protection for the Person Who is Preparing to Build

In order to insure the faithful performance of a building contract, to settle disputes without litigation and to prevent the building from becoming encumbered, it is customary for contractors to furnish surety bonds.

A bond of this sort is highly technical, and should be handled by brokers, such as Cass & Johansing, who are thoroughly acquainted with the laws concerning suretyship. When your bond is obtained through us, you are at liberty to consult us without charge, even while the building is under construction.

RUFFIAN ATTACKS GIRL AT ONTARIO

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 22.—The Ontario police were today seeking a man who early last evening stepped from the shadow of a tree on Euclid avenue, between G and H streets, and seized Miss Mamie Pollock, pretty young daughter of Judge J. R. Pollock, 351 North Euclid avenue, as she was en route to her home.

When the young woman screamed the man ran into the garden of a near-by residence and disappeared. He is said to have been attired in rough dark clothes and to have worn a cap.

IGNITED GAS LEAK DESTROYS TRUCK

An automobile truck belonging to the Federal Grocery Company at 732 Terminal street was almost destroyed by fire early yesterday when a stream of gasoline leaking from a rear tank ignited, either from a carelessly thrown lighted match or the exhaust of the machine. The damage was estimated at about $2000.

Charles Murray, driver, and R. C. Kinman, observing that the gas tank had sprung a leak, had driven up to the curb at North Broadway and College street to make repairs at the time. By the time the fire apparatus arrived the truck was nothing but a pile of charred timbers.

Brackenridge formally introduced to society her daughters the Misses Marian and Margaret Brackenridge. The large rooms were like a garden of choicest flowers in gorgeous colorings. Tall American Beauty roses and dahlias of the same hue filled the reception hall, while in the drawing room, which opened into the conservatory with its rare plants, were masses of dahlias and chrysanthemums. In the dining-room, an elaborate glace confestion in a pyramid shape and beautiful floral decoration adorned the tea table.

Mrs. Brackenridge wore a gown of gold brocade, while her daughters were in pastel shaded frocks. Of the newest fashion was the costume worn by Mrs. Avary McCarthy, who assisted at the tea table.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters, M.D.
Author of "Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories"

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

My Dear Followers:

When sending for material which we offer you, please remember always to inclose a stamped envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must inclose 4 cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper and please remember that, on account of the hundreds of letters received in every mail I cannot make personal replies. I appreciate very much the beautiful personal letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest; for the rest you must consult your personal physicians.

"Dear Doctor Peters:

"I have a friend, and she is a wise woman in most things, but she thinks she doesn't eat very much, and she speaks of other people who are 20 per cent or so overweight as being twice as big as she is, and yet if she isn't 100 per cent overweight I'll eat my new hat—and it's very becoming and I'm not quite closely enough related to the donkey to relish straw. But I'm not brave enough to send her your diet articles, and for goodness sake, if you should happen to print this, don't use my initials, or she might recognize me. Keep on with your prevention articles.—Mrs."

We hope she will see this and recognize herself.

Have you heard this story? A man died and as he came to St. Peter, St. Peter looked up his record and said: "You are recorded as a very good man, but you have told 10,000 lies. I cannot reconcile those two statements. Will you explain?"

The good man responded: "Well, you see, St. Peter, it was like this. My wife was a stout woman and every time we passed another stout woman on the street she always said, 'I am not as stout as she is, am I, dear?'"

St. Peter bade him enter with the remark that if he kept out all of the men who had transgressed in this manner, there would be very few men in heaven.

Lillian—There is nothing I know of that will make straight hair curly except the permanent wave process. If that is done by reliable concerns there is apparently no harm done to the hair. It lasts about until the hair grows out. I have had mine done five times since the process was invented and am just on the verge of another.

Lillian's Mother—Superfluous hairs are removed permanently only by electrolysis in the hands of an expert. They may be temporarily removed by pulling them out or shaving or by the use of depilatories.

I could give you the prescription of one, but it is rather dangerous to give prescriptions in this manner for fear of typographical errors. I believe most of the standard depilatories on the markets are good, but if you will send a stamped addressed envelope, repeating your request, you may have the prescription. Peroxide of hydrogen will bleach the dark hairs and make them less conspicuous. I know that if I had a beard or a moustach I should either have the hairs out by electrolysis or a depilatory or pull them out one by one, a certain number every day, or shave. Well-groomed men shave every day, sometimes oftener. I have seen some women who ought to do the same. Why not? Of course, you would have to keep it up. But you have to keep up washing your neck, too.

Your other questions have been answered recently in the column. Why don't you let Lillian bob her hair which you say is an ugly length? She wants to. It's a beautiful and sanitary style for a young girl.

Fashions and Flowers Will be Shown Here

A special invitation has been accepted by the N. B. Blackstone Company to conduct a fashion show in conjunction with the Pasadena Horticultural Society's annual flower show at the Raymond, October 26, 27 and 28. The exhibition will be similar to the recent Blackstone Style Show, depicting the latest modes in gowns, wraps, furs, street-wear and millinery.

More than $5000 is to be awarded in prizes at the flower show, according to officials of the Pasadena Horticultural Society. The list of entries includes specimens from all sections of the State, and from as far north as Portland and as far east as Denver. The show this year, it is said, will surpass all previous exhibitions.

INCLINE RAILWAY TO LOSE FRANCHISE

As a result of the failure of the owners of the Mt. Washington incline railway to operate the road for the last several years, and for failing to remove the tracks and cars as a dangerous nuisance when ordered to do so by the Board of Public Utilities, the City Council yesterday adopted the board's recommendation that the road's franchise be revoked. The City Attorney was instructed to prepare and present the necessary ordinance canceling the franchise.

Fashion's Forecast

By Annabel Worthington

A SIMPLE-TO-MAKE FROCK

While you have probably heard, read and seen that the long sleeve is going to be very popular, much to the distress of the woman who makes her own clothes for they do involve a little more time and patience to fit than the abbreviated ones that have been so popular for so long, the Parisienne is said to be still defying Fashion predictions and retaining her loyalty to the much beloved short sleeve. This dress illustrated could be made of linene trimmed with paisley or cretonne for summer wear and of serge, crepe de Chine or velvet for your early fall frock to wear walking without a coat. You could make this dress in about two days and if you decided that you still needed a linene frock the cost would be about $1.65 figuring linene @ 50c per yard with cretonne @ 30c per yard.

The pattern No. 1488 cuts in sizes 16 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards 36 inch material with ½ yard 36-inch contrasting. Price 15c, stamps or coin (coin preferred).

When you order your pattern, we think it would pay you to inclose 10 cents extra to receive a copy of our SUMMER FASHION MAGAZINE which shows about 400 styles, including several pages of embroidery designs, and contains a seven-lesson course in dressmaking.

All orders will be handled by the branch office in Chicago and in order to eliminate the delay in forwarding we have arranged to have order sent direct to the Chicago office. Unless otherwise specified all patterns are 15 cents each. No patterns are kept in the Los Angeles office of The Times. [EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

STOCK EXPERT ARRIVES HERE

More Pay for Animal Bureau Heads Urged

Dr. S. E. Bennett, for twenty years in the government service and the past seven years employed by the Chicago Union Stockyards in charge of sanitation and pathological research, has just arrived from Chicago for the opening of the Los Angeles Union Stockyards next week. He is endeavoring to interest the stockmen of America in the question of more adequate recognition of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Bennett, who is registered at the Rosslyn, is a great admirer of Dr. J. H. Mohler, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, who was formerly associated with him. There is no greater live-stock authority in the world that Dr. Mohler, he says, and declares it is absurd for the government to pay a man in Dr. Mohler's position, directing 4200 employees and protecting the health of the people and the live-stock industry of the nation, such a small salary at $5000 a year.

PAY INCREASE URGED

Congressman Martin Madden of Chicago has been interested in the matter and is expected to bring up a bill at the coming short session of Congress on behalf of Dr. Mohler, who is receiving at this time a salary $1500 a year smaller than one of his former stenographers and two other former assistants who are now administrating the Stockyards and Packinghouse Act of 1920.

"I know from experience the importance of his work. He is working night and day to guard against further outbreaks of the dreaded foot and mouth disease. Foot and mouth disease is prevalent in Jamaica today and may come upon us any time out of a clear sky. England is now struggling with the worst attack of foot and mouth disease in her history. It can only be controlled by eradication, which means killing infected animals and burying them eight feet deep.

"While mortality in this disease is not over 4 per cent, its highly contageous nature and the condition in which it leaves affected animals makes slaughter and burial the only safe policy. The vigilance of Dr. Mohler is also responsible for keeping out of this country many other diseases, such as rinderpest, or septicemia, and surra, the disease of horses in the Philippines, which is to horses what sleeping sickness is to men," said Dr. Bennett.

Dr. Bennett is an Ohio State University graduate, studied two years in Germany, and was for five years connected with the University of Kentucky before going into the government service.

In regard to the new Los Angeles Union Stockyards, he said they are splendidly equipped and so well arranged that they will be easy to keep clean and sanitary.

PAY RISE AMENDMENT INDORSED

County Counsel Advocates Increased Salary for City Attorney

County Counsel Hill in a letter received yesterday by Paul A. Crippen, chairman of the citizens' charter amendment committee, urged the voters at the November election to support city amendment No. 5-A, which would increase the salary of the City Attorney from $4000 a year to $7000 a year. County Counsel Hill, in his letter, said:

"Knowing the important duties and the heavy responsibilities which rest upon the City Attorney, I feel I would be remiss in my duty did I not urge every elector to cast his vote for charter amendment No. 5-A, fixing the salary of the City Attorney.

"The services of an attorney are much like those of a doctor—when they are needed, none is too good. Institutions like the Southern California Edison Company, Title Insurance and Trust Company, First National Bank and Southern Pacific hire the best attorneys available and pay accordingly, and it is not philanthropy that prompts such action, but simply good business.

"Stop to consider for a minute. The City Attorney of Los Angeles, with ten times the responsibilities and volume of business of the city of San Diego, receives $4000 per year, while the City Attorney of San Diego receives $6000 a year. The City Attorney of Pasadena receives $6000 a year. Last week a hod carrier on a construction job received $103 for his week's work, while the City Attorney of Los Angeles received $75 for his week's work; yet the taxpayers of Los Angeles expect the City Attorney to protect and insure the legal expenditure of $25,000,000 annually.

"Good business economy and the self-interest of every taxpayer of Los Angeles demand the adoption of this amendment.

"Yours very truly,
"A. J. HILL,
"County Counsel, Los Angeles County."

GET AN AUTO, TOO, JUDGE

Country Jurist Admits Incapability to Dodge Broadway's Machines; Pleads With Drivers for Life

Judge Stanley Murray, who can walk through a forest in Madera county at night and never blunder into a tree, admits he cannot dodge the automobiles in Los Angeles. Judge Murray is sitting in Judge Valentine's former court.

"Yes, sir," he declared yesterday to several city-bred lawyers, "a countryman has no business in this city. I feel like the fellow in Tennyson's poem of the 'charge of the six hundred.'

ON ALL SIDES

"Instead of guns, there are automobiles to the right of you, automobiles to the left of you, automobiles behind and in front of you.

"A fellow tried to learn to ride a bicycle in a hall that had pillars supporting the roof. And he hit every one of them. Yes, sir, the pillars got in front of him every time.

"Los Angeles autos are uncanny. You can't dodge them. You see them and you don't see them. I never yet crossed a street in this city in a direct line. No, sir; if my steps left marks, you would find I weaved like a drunken man.

"I was bumped by an auto driven by a pretty girl, and I apologized to her. When a country jurist gets in that frame of mind where he apologizes for being run down, it's my opinion that a big city like Los Angeles is no place for him. He ought to be shooting quail in the mountains.

"The people down here get so used to making close shaves, that they have developed a sixth sense. I saw a man watching a machine coming from the right dodge one coming up on the left. I bet he never saw the second machine, but his auto sense warned him. I cannot do it.

"I stopped in the middle of Broadway yesterday and heard myself plead with a driver coming head-on at me: 'Please, mister, if you have brakes, use them. I am from the country and cannot see six ways at once.'

"Yes, sir. And I want to say that I don't believe any machine that is driven through the downtown streets of Los Angeles has brakes."

DOUBLE DEFENSE IN LIFE FIGHT

Mrs. Daisie Hamilton, 148 North Avenue 21.

W. D. Dunham, automobile dealer, 1150 West Seventh street.

Mrs. Effie Finley, 1301 West Forty-second street.

A. M. Seeley, orange grower, Covina.

J. McSwain, real estate dealer, Compton.

Mrs. Harvey D. Cheny, 1913 Ocean View avenue.

Mrs. Barney O. Favorite, 806 West Forty-first street.

Of these jurors passed for cause, Mr. McWilliams, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Finley, Mr. Seeley, Mr. McSwain and Mrs. Favorite survived yesterday's session. They had been in the jury box since last Friday. The others were accepted yesterday, after six of the defense's peremptory challenges were used to make room for them in the jury box.

MONOTONY BROKEN

The drab monotony of the trial thus far—the routine procedure of selecting the jury and the drone of lawyers' voices molding hypothetical questions—was disturbed during the afternoon by the sudden attempt of Clara's attorney to cause the dismissal of the entire second panel of talesmen.

In a plea to the court Attorney Herrington challenged the entire jury panel from Department Nineteen drawn to try Mrs. Phillips. Herrington challenged on the grounds that the panel had been irregularly summoned; that an official court order to transfer the panel from another court had not been ordered, and that the prospective jurors' names had not been placed together in the jury wheel.

Deliberation of the problem necessitated a recess. After a conference with other judges, Superior Judge Houser denied Attorney Herrington's challenge and the talesmen which Clara's lawyer did not desire were permitted to remain for service in the case.

WOMAN QUESTIONED

Mary E. Randall, sister of Dep. Dist.-Atty. Glover was called. Earlier in the day the foundation for the insanity defense was laid. With questions asked of Mrs. Randall, Herrington added strength to it. He asked if she was aware that lunatics and insane persons could not be convicted; if "the mental condition of a party was in such a condition that the party could not distinguish right from wrong," would she vote for the death penalty.

INSANITY DEFENSE

The insanity defense for Clara Phillips was ushered into the trial while A. J. Hammel, a manufacturer, was being questioned by Clara's attorney. A score of prospective jurors were examined last Friday, but not a hint of the insanity defense was contained in the questions fired at them. They were questions pointing to the "unwritten law" defense.

The reason for Attorney Herrington's sudden change of tactics was unfathomable last night, though it was thought to have resulted from a long conference between Clara and her attorney last Saturday afternoon.

Throughout the examination of Mr. Hammel such phrases as "mental responsibility," "diseased mind," "idiots and lunatics" arose from a desert of words.

"Do you understand that the question of mental responsibility may arise in any case?"

The prospective juror was slightly deaf, but he understood.

"Do you appreciate—that a person at that time—rational or irrational—to distinguish between right and wrong?"

"—Whether or not that the party's mind was so diseased—"

The juror cupped his ear toward Attorney Herrington and nodded his head.

"Do you appreciate the fact that no man insane can be convicted of crime?"

OBJECTIONS MADE

A storm of objections resounded from the prosecution attorneys. The court ruled in favor of the defense and Attorney Herrington continued:

"If the court says that neither idiots nor insane persons can be convicted, you will believe in those instructions?"

Mr. Hammel said he would.

"Have you any bias or prejudice against that law?"

Mr. Hammel had not, and Attorney Herrington said he was satisfied with the juror.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Fricke then examined Mr. Mammel. He learned that Mr. Hammel did not believe the death penalty should be permitted as a law, though the juror said it would be his duty to vote for the death penalty if the court so instructed.

Referring to the slaying of Mrs. Meadows, Dep. Dist.-Atty. Fricke called a cold-blooded, brutal murder.

Mr. Hammel was accepted for cause. The defense then used its seventh peremptory challenge to remove Sivert Nordskog.

CONTEMPT FOR PRESS

E. N. Brown, a Long Beach paperhanger, took his place. It was while examining Mr. Brown that Attorney Herrington, the former District Attorney with the foghorn voice from San Jose, vented his contempt for the newspapers. Of Mr. Brown he asked the same question he had asked of other prospective jurors, but there was an added tone of sarcasm in his voice yesterday morning. Waving his hand toward the newspaper men he asked:

"You don't believe the accounts these young reporters write for the newspapers, do you?"

Mr. Brown stammered, said he didn't, and Mr. Herrington smiled triumphantly. But Mr. Brown had a fixed opinion, based on the newspaper accounts of the murder, which could not be removed. Since the opinion could not be removed, Mr. Brown was excused from the jury box.

Mary E. Randall of Azusa and sister of Dep. Dist.-Atty. Glover, took Mr. Brown's place in the jury box. She was being questioned when the noonday recess was called. Then did Superior Judge Houser add an amendment of his admonishment to the jurors. He warned them not to listen in on the radio programs broadcast in the city. He told them that news of the Phillips trial was being sent out by radio broadcasters.

"And I admonish you to immediately cut loose from your radio set as soon as such communications reach your ears."

INSANITY ANALYZED

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Fricke, the District Attorney's expert on insanity defenses, plunged into the fray. He had been waiting several days for the insanity plea to bob its head up from the ranks of Clara's defense. When it did appear, he pounced on it.

For the prospective jurors he analyzed the various kinds of insanity. He drew a line between insanity and the subnormal mind. He also kept close to the defense's probable "unwritten law" issue. He intimated that the testimony of Armour L. Phillips may be exaggerated.

Mrs. Randall was passed for cause. Attorney Herrington then returned to R. C. Andrus, a newspaper man who had been firmly intrenched in the jury box since last Friday. The defense's seventh challenge was used to excuse Mr. Andrus.

Another talesman took his place, but he announced his refusal to vote for a death penalty and was excused.

The death penalty—Clara Phillips heard the ill-omened phrase uttered repeatedly throughout the day. But she never moved during the long hours in her chair beside her lawyer. Her back was always turned toward the rear of the courtroom, toward her husband and her younger sister. Yet she sat like a woman carved from stone, her arms folded and her gaze riveted to the glistening counsel-table top.

William John Blackburn was called. To him were expounded questions hinting that the defense would show signs of intermittent insanity. He was passed for cause.

Attorney Herrington next removed Mrs. Eva Siemrs from the jury box with its eighth peremptory challenge. Mrs. Harvey D. Cheny was called. She was told the evidence would be horrible—repulsive. She shuddered, but was passed for cause.

Clara M. Tunison was next challenged by the defense and excused. A. J. Mead took her place. From Deputy Dist.-Atty. Burke he heard the prosecution's theory of Clara's probable defense:

"She did not know what she was doing—or, if she did, she did not know the difference between right and wrong."

Mr. Mead was passed for cause. Mrs. Randall was next challenged by the defense and excused. W. D. Dunham was called. Deputy District Attorney Burke informed him that mental deficiency was not insanity, that insanity requires a greater weight of evidence than sanity, that a person confronted with a strong proof of crime is frequently tempted to depend upon the plea of insanity.

Mr. Dunham was passed for cause and A. J. Hammel was excused by the defense's tenth challenge.

ONE CHAIR VACANT

William Ferry, a rancher, had a fixed opinion and was excused, leaving one chair vacant. The night recess was then taken.

A report that Clara Phillips had broken down and cried: "Will they hang me?" after she had been returned to the County Jail from her first day in court, was emphatically denied yesterday by Matron Fisher, who was on duty at the time the asserted hysterical collapse came.

GIVES HUSBAND GOOD-BY PUNCH

Wife, Winner of Alimony, Tells Lesser Half What is What

Minnie Goodin, who has just won alimony of $13 a week from Nathan Goodin in Judge Summerfield's court, broke a precedent yesterday. Instead of sailing by her husband in assumed ignorance that he was present, she marched up to him in the corridor and told him bluntly that she would throw the children at him, according to his attorney, W. P. Redman, an eyewitness. When he replied, she gave him a short-arm jab with her open hand in the face, sending him staggering back.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEWS

BY BIRD

Morbid mongers of crime surge into Judge Houser's court to glimpse the first setting of the Horror Play. I sit with them, keenly thrilled; watching, wondering what will be the end when the final curtain is rolled down upon this drama of life. Here an Edgar Allen Poe might be a critic of crime.

Any moment now the big doors will swing open and Clara Phillips, under the escort of law, will be brought in. Then the questioning—droll legal phrasing involving death and life, will be resumed.

Armour L. Phillips, husband of Clara, discusses with me this proposition of Californian colds. We both are sufferers. Many trivial things enter our conversation. We even talk of friends we both knew back in Houston. I believe it helps him forget. Etta Mae Weaver, pretty and younger sister of Clara, sits with us. She has the appearance of a schoolgirl, stunned; suddenly thrown into a tragic jam with her big sister, the central figure, facing a death penalty.

A craning of necks—muffled whispers—

Clara is here! Her "property" smile plays across her lips for a moment. They close rigidly, taut. The smile has been used.

This questioning of prospective jurors to ascertain whether or not they possess any conscientious scruples which would forbid them inflicting the death penalty, seems only upon the human passions of spectators, Clara's sister, and husband.

Having watched Clara since the judge read the charge: ". . . charged with the murder of one human being . . ." I believe she has become steeled to whatever fate lies ahead. The stoic gaze, immobile expression on the face of the girl called "The Tiger Woman," accused of hammering to death a woman, does not change save for the moistening of the lips or a parched swallow now and then.

There surely must be emotion within her! She is young and pretty. Has good taste. She wears a neat gabardine coat suit, a reminder of her flight to return from Tucson, Ariz. She has a new hat. I overheard some one say her older sister, Ola, had made it for her. There is a fur neckpiece flung in youthful fashion about her neck, and she wears newly shined shoes and black silk hose.

The "unwritten law" defense is to be abandoned it seems from the hypothetical questioning of Attorney Herrington. Friday Herrington told me he would acquit his client in three weeks on this defense. Over a week-end he changes to a defense of insanity. However, it is worth being branded insane in order to live. Since such a defense has been adopted, it seems, Clara's lawyer will have to prove that she was insane during the moment in which she is charged with having swung the hammer that killed. Charles Fricke, leading in prosecution, tells me he can easily prove that Clara was sane at that time. Herrington says he will acquit his client. Fricke and Burke expect the supreme penalty. A toss-up between legal talent.

Herrington dismisses R. C. Andrus, Scotchman and former newspaper writer. "I would not have brought in a verdict of death, I am sure," Andrus told me, as he walked from the jury box. On Friday last, defense counsel dismissed a bent old man of many years who had been accepted by the State's counsel. Strange, this process of legal training. Human nature would dictate to have kept him. Death is too poignant at his threshold of years to return a capital penalty to youth.

A prospective juror, an old, gray-haired man, says he will inflict the death penalty if the case merits. He has a grown daughter, he says. Wonder how this will affect him? Will his sympathy go to the girl whose grewsome vision haunts the lonely Montecito Drive, or will he feel for the one whose life is asked in payment?

Frank Dewar, deputy sheriff and handler of many big criminal cases, who escorts Clara back and forth from her cell in the County Jail to the courtroom, says, "Clara Phillips has more brains than Madalynne Obenchain. She has a cool personality which is interesting."

Only a few interested ones left in the courtroom now. The query relative to death is getting to be a bore, except to the row of sorrow at my left. A story gleaned from the recesses of tragedy. On this row there sits Fred A. Tremaine, father of the hammer victim; Genora, 16-year-old sister of the dead girl; Jewell W. Lucas, 20-year-old sweetheart, who told me shortly after the murder that "hanging is too good for the guilty one"; Armour L. Phillips, husband of the girl on trial, and Etta Mae Weaver, sister of Clara.

Within the hearts of these four what wishes and desires are cradled! Death has come into one home; it crouches before the door of another.

Recess. The flash of photographers' powder as they snap pictures of the leading players in this realistic drama in which a chorus girl, speaking her lines alone, is a headliner. Women spectators chewing gum and gabbing about "Clara" and "I thinks." Attorney Herrington whispering to his client. What a secret these two must know! Register one for a woman who kept a secret! When are we to hear it?

Trial over for today. A tear comes into Clara's eye which she quickly dries with a powder puff as her sister comes to kiss her. A touch of hidden human within her.

ORDINANCE BANNING PARADES UP TODAY

The ordinance prohibiting parades in the downtown section of Los Angeles to come before the City Council this morning and will be adopted, it was indicated yesterday. If approved by the Mayor, the ordinance will take effect in thirty days. The district inside of which parades are not permitted under the ordinance is bounded by Temple street, Central avenue, Pico street and Figueroa street.

DOG-MUZZLING LAW LIFTED IN PASADENA

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Oct. 23.—The dog-muzzling ordinance, which has been in effect since last May, was lifted today when Dr. F. W. Hodgdon, Jr., notified City Manager Koiner that the epidemic of rabies was over in this vicinity. The last rabid dog, he reported, was found September 15.

Dr. Hodgdon also announced a new ruling of the State Board of Health that dogs which have been immunized to rabies may have a special license tag permitting them to go without muzzles.

Mrs. Furbush Didn't Say "I Wish" She Said "I WILL"

Then in Four Short Years She Reached Prosperity!

READ THE STORY

Mrs. Ida Furbush—a widow with four small children—had to provide a living for herself and family. The future looked dark, but she had a will and determination to succeed.

Four years ago she heard about the splendid opportunities offered at Runnymede No. 1, near Palo Alto, Cal., where a colony of people—families of moderate means—had found health and happiness and were making a financial success through the medium of chickens, berries and an acre of ground. She decided that was the solution of her difficulties.

After investigation, she bought an acre that was already in operation as a poultry and berry farm. The price was $5000. This was more money than she had, so she made a substantial cash payment and assumed a mortgage for the balance.

In the last four years Mrs. Furbush has paid in full for her home and the acre of ground with its berry vines and 1000 chickens. Today she owns nothing and has a balance in the bank. A conservative estimate of increased valuation of her property is at least 20%, or $1000.

During this time she has raised four children—three of whom are shown in the accompanying illustration. She is cheerful, happy, healthy—and financially independent. So successfully and profitably has she marketed her products, through the help of the local Association, that she is now preparing to buy a second acre.

What this widow with four children has done YOU can do at

ENGINEER HAS STATION PLAN

Vacation of Streets Asked of Council

Hundred Million Dollars is Amount Mentioned

Committee Will Investigate Well Before Acting

The request of the to-be-organized Los Angeles Terminal Association laid before the City Council asking for the closing of a number of streets in the Plaza district has brought to light a plan promoted by A. P. Gillies, that involves the expenditure of $50,000,000 for a union depot and various terminal buildings covering an area of seventeen and one-half acres in the vicinity of First street and Central avenue.

The application asked for the closing a portion of Commercial street near its intersection with San Pedro street, of Los Angeles street near Arcadia street; Central avenue near Jackson street; Olivera street near Marchessault street, Banning street near Alameda street, Turner street near Alameda street and portions of Jackson, Market and Ducommun streets; Laborry Lane, Napier street and Marchessault and Aliso streets, the property to be so abandoned to be used for the construction of the railroad terminal and related buildings.

PARTICULARS PRESENTED

Mr. Gillies stated in his application that he is an industrial engineer, and has been in Los Angeles for several months interviewing bankers and business men in connection with his proposal to build the terminal. Under the plan, the project is to be financed by the sale of $50,000,000 common stock, and bonds, to this amount, he stated in his letter to the Council, "are to be underwritten by some of the large financial institutions."

The name of Maj.-Gen. Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal, and now in private engineering practice in New York, has been mentioned as a possible chief engineer of the project, but whether or not he has signed a contract with the syndicate could not be learned yesterday. Gen. Goethals is coming West soon.

The application was accompanied by a blue print showing the proposed layout of buildings in the north end site, including, besides the main depot, a subway for street-railway cars, a hotel, theaters and banking buildings, and a roof garden. The cost of purchasing the land for the terminal, the promoter estimated, will be $4,110,000.

SENT TO COMMITTEE

The petition was referred by the Council to its Public Utilities Committee, which is expected to make a thorough inquiry as to the financial ability of Mr. Gillies and his associates to carry out their program before taking any action on the application for the closing of streets.

The city defrayed a portion of the cost of the joint engineering survey by the State and city on terminal facilities, which resulted in an order by the commission to the railroads to build and use a joint terminal station at the Plaza in accordance with the detailed engineering plans of the joint engineers.

The railroads have contested this order and have been beaten in every court. Finally they appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States. A decision favorable to the city and State is expected soon. When handed down, the railroads will have not other recourse except to carry out the commission's order.

As these proceedings have occupied several years and as the Gillies plan is a new, and in a sense counter-proposal for a joint union depot, Councilmen, at least until Mr. Gillies and his associates have made a showing of good faith and financial ability to build their depot and subway, have expressed themselves as inclined to go very slowly in granting the application for the wholesale closing of streets, as such action would have the effect of injuring the joint city-State proceedings and plans, which have been fought along practically to the point of victory in the United States Supreme Court.

Baby, Deserted, Has Offers of Homes Galore

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 23.—Last Friday night a curly haired, blue-eyed baby girl, scarce three weeks old, was abandoned in Babyland, a nursery maintained on the Pickering Pier at Ocean Park for the convenience of mothers desiring unrestricted entertainment at local amusements, by a young man presumably her father. Today this same blue-eyed girl is the center of anxiety among seventeen differ-persons who wish to adopt it.

Yesterday six applicants appeared before Police Capt. Clarence Webb asking for custody of the child. This morning five women, one the mother of five children, pleaded with Mayor S. L. Berkley for its adoption. Six other women have attempted to persuade Miss Mary I. Martin, head of Martin's Hospital where the child was taken following its desertion, to let them have the child.

But the waif was removed this afternoon to the Children's Home Society, 919 East Twenty-fifth street, in Los Angeles, by authorities. As no identification clews were with the baby, under the laws, she may be adopted legally within six months. During that period she may be given to a reputable family for probational care.

THREE STRIKERS HELD

Men Face Contempt Charges for Attacking Workers

In U. S. Dist. Judge Bledsoe's court yesterday, Joseph Chevron, Stephen Caregina and Joseph McMillin, striking employees of the Santa Fe Railway at Bakersfield, were held in contempt charges, for an asserted attack on men who had taken their places. Bonds were fixed at $2500 each.

Gifted Artists to Aid Hungry Russian Waifs

Scourged under the heel of continuous war and driven from their pillaged homes, thousands of Russian children are wandering over the steppes in the wake of retreating armies, dropping exhausted by the wayside to meet the approaching arms of death.

As many as can be cared for with present funds are being salvaged from the muck of war by relief associations, but, owing to lack of funds, thousands still remain homeless.

For the benefit of these Russian refugees, an entertainment will be given next Saturday evening at the Disabled Veterans' Hall, Third and Hill streets, the proceeds to be distributed by the Hoover Relief Administration in Russia.

The program, which has been arranged by the Russian Club, under the auspices of the International Institute, a branch of the Y.W.C.A., will include a playlet presented by Mme. Seda Boudagian and N. S. Karr, A Russian dance, in which Mme. Anna Karenina, noted Russian dancerina, will appear supported by Anton Yarotzki and his ballet, also will be a feature. Piano, violin and 'cello solos and a dance in which the public will be asked to participate are scheduled. Tickets are now obtainable at Barker Brothers and the Birkel company.

Judge to Decide Fine Question in Mayo's Divorce

Briefs will be filed by the attorneys in the Frank Mayo case in which a fine legal question will be outlined before Judge Toland next week as to whether Mrs. Joyce Eleanor Mayo, now a chorus girl in Paris, who was served by publication, may ask to have the default set aside.

Mrs. Mayo was divorced September 26, last. Mrs. Mayo was in Paris at the time. The papers in the case were first mailed to England, where she had been living, and forwarded to her address in Paris. Later Attorney Neil McCarty, who did not represent her at that time, notified her that an interlocutory decree had been granted, also that in a property settlement she was to receive $150 a month.

Mrs. Mayo replied that she was in poor circumstances. She wanted a better property settlement. Mr. McCarty asserts that Mr. Mayo, a film director and actor, has not paid the alimony. He also asks that the default judgment be set aside. He asserts that Mrs. Mayo is not barred from coming into the case under the circumstances in which she was served.

Attorney W. I. Gilbert declares that she was properly served with the summons and complaint and he is opposing a reopening of the case as well as a further property settlement.

Jeweler Freed of Complicity in Gem Theft

R. E. Lomax, local jeweler accused of receiving twenty-two small diamonds said to have been stolen from Mrs. Mary L. Rowan, with the knowledge that they were stolen, was exonerated yesterday, and the case against him dismissed by Justice Forbes. The dismissal of the case followed several weeks of continuances. Lomax was accused following an asserted confession by Elmer G. Bauman, who with William Allen was accused of robbing Mrs. Rowan and her maid of $25,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry.

Bauman was placed on the stand early in the case by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Moroney, but yesterday he refused to answer certain questions on the ground that his answer might tend to incriminate. Bauman had previously charged that he sold the diamonds to Lomax, but yesterday he declined to repeat his charge.

Lomax was out on bail, which was exonerated.

TRADE HEARING HELD

Right of Biscuit Company to Discriminate Questioned

An important trade hearing concerning the National Biscuit Company and the right of that corporation to discriminate in sales between individual grocers who pool their orders and chain grocers, was held on the fifth floor of the Federal Building yesterday.

Some time ago a case was filed before the Federal Trade Commission, asserting that the National Biscuit Company had violated the Clayton antitrust law, which prohibits discrimination in selling except so far as the amount of the purchase is concerned. Hearings have been held all over the United States, in the various trade centers.

The representatives of the Federal Trade Commission here, yesterday, were Judge Warren B. Choate, an examiner of the body, and I. E. Lambert of Washington, D.C., its attorney. Frederick W. Bode and Charles A. Vilas, both of New York, appeared in behalf of the National Biscuit Company.

AUTOMOBILES NEEDED FOR ORPHANS' PARTY

Plans for the party which Loew's State Theater will give to all the orphans in Los Angeles next Saturday are practically completed. The Pivotal Point

"Centrally located"—the most valuable feature of any piece of property.

To be within easy reach of the shopping center, the industrial district, the beaches and points of interest, means that this particular bit of land is worth far more than another similar site that is less convenient—even though it has the identical physical advantages.

Western Avenue Park and Belle Mead form the Pivotal Point of Los Angeles. This property is virtually equidistant from the Los Angeles Business Center, Hollywood, the Beaches, the Great Factory District and Points of Scenic Interest.

This feature, combined with the superior advantages of high land, proximity to fine schools, boulevards and being in the direct path of the city's expansion, makes this property the most valuable as a homesite or for investment in all Los Angeles.

Prices are advancing steadily and rapidly—buy now and enjoy the benefits of the rise in values.

Etiwanda Vineyards

"Pleased!" Why Not? 30% Profit

The rancher or plain business man who does not see opportunities in Etiwanda Vineyards is not awake to facts.

Muscat Grapes bring today as high as $120 per ton, on board cars, Etiwanda. And our seven-year-old vineyards are yielding, conservatively, 2½ to 3½ tons per acre. Production increases with age. It is everywhere conceded that the demand for wine, table and raisin grapes will strengthen and that prices will hold or advance.

Non-irrigated grapes, on the Eastern market, secure a preferential price, frequently more than $1.00 per box higher than the irrigated varieties, due to superior flavor, sugar content and condition when received.

Etiwanda Vineyards are in the motherland of non-irrigated grape culture. More than two sections of these choice lands are offered for sale, in various stages of development, at prices within the reach of every ambitious man.

Soil, climate, rainfall, transportation (by two railroads on property,) sales arrangements—all make for perfect working conditions.

INVESTIGATE NOW! These tracts are going fast.

October 18, 1922.

Etiwanda Vineyards Co.

Gentlemen: I bought 40 acres of your vineyard last July, and in August my brother and I bought 66 acres more.

Our crop this year will net about 30%, and we are more than pleased with our investment.

The convenient shipping facilities (P. E., S. P. and Santa Fe sidetracks on the land) have helped us to get our grapes to the Eastern market in record time and in good condition, thus insuring us the top prices for our product.

I have no hesitancy in recommending the Etiwanda Vineyards to my friends and the general public. It's a good buy.

DEATH RISKED TO SAVE SHIP

Submarine Officers Show Great Heroism

Three May Die as Result of Deadly Fumes

Underwater Craft Rescued from Destruction

Having risked death and broken an ironclad regulation of the Navy in a heroic attempt to save their ship, three officers of the submarine U.S.S. R-4, late last night were hovering between life and death at the Los Angeles Submarine Base Hospital, their lungs seared with the deadly fumes from sulphuric acid gas and burning bitumastic.

The storage batteries and bitumastic packing in the battery room of the giant submarine caught fire while the craft was moored at her berth early yesterday.

DEFIED FIGHTERS

The blaze defied all efforts of the base fire-fighters and was finally smothered by bulkheading the flaming compartment.

Shortly after noon yesterday, Lieut. P. R. Glutting, commander of the R-4; Lieut. L. F. Small, executive officer of the submarine, and Chief Electrician William B. Craig broke open the sealed compartment and dashed into the suffocating hold with fire extinguishers. They were accompanied by Electricians' Mates Benjamin E. White and Glenford C. Mills.

Five minutes later the three officers were hauled out of the compartment by Mills and White, unconscious. They were rushed to the Naval Base Hospital and given immediate medical attention.

THREE UNCONSCIOUS

All three men had regained consciousness last night. Navy surgeons saying they have an even chance for recovery unless pneumonia develops from weakened lung conditions. Mills and White were also severely burned rescuing the officers.

Early reports set the damage to the R-4 at $70,000 but officials at the base said last night that it would not total more than $1000, due to prompt work in sealing the compartment. A short circuit in a ground wire is said to have started the fire.

The R-4 is a sister ship of the submarine R-6, which sank at her berth in the Outer Harbor a year ago, two members of her crew drowning in the disaster.

GRAND JURY DISPOSES OF BANK CASE

Ex-Cashier Indicted on Thirty-three Counts by Government

After considering the case of Oliver Bowers, recently cashier of the People's National Bank of National City, San Diego county, for some weeks, the Federal grand jury yesterday returned a report to U. S. District Judge Bledsoe, covering the indictment of Bowers, and a review of his asserted peculation of the bank's resources.

At the time that the bank closed on Oct. 26, 1921, with its funds depleted, the president, E. M. Fly, and the cashier, Oliver Bowers were taken into custody. Both men gave bond for their appearance to answer the charges of embezzling the funds and credits of the bank, Bowers in the sum of $25,000. Later on, Fly died, leaving Bowers to bear the burden of government prosecution.

There are thirty-three counts in the indictment, and the total shortage as set out in the various counts, amounts to $126,085.45.

It is charged in the indictment that Bowers knowingly, willfully, falsely and fraudulently" appropriated funds and assets of the bank to his own use—notes, Liberty Bonds and individual ledger accounts giving evidence of his embezzlement.

An effort was made by U. S. Atty. Burke to prepare the indictment against Morris Orsatti and J. R. Johnson, a former operative of the Burns Detective Agency, charged with the bribery of a Federal official charged with the enforcement of the national prohibition law, but the instrument could not be completed in time. It will be reported next Friday.

WAR OPENED UPON SURF POLLUTIONS

Long Beach to Join Other Seaside Resorts in Fight on Oil Scum and Refuse

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 23.—That Long Beach will join with Atlantic City and seaside resorts of Florida and other States in fighting to put down the pollution of bathing beaches and streams in this country was indicated here today.

Lynn W. Ballard, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, got into communication with Atlantic City officials with a view to learning what is being done there through the National Anti-Pollution League to prevent the spreading of oil and other refuse by oil-burning steamers.

Long Beach bathers have suffered considerably during the past summer from the effects of oil scum in the surf here, said to have been caused by the negligence of ship captains, who violate the Federal law by permitting oil to run from the bilges of their ships. Yacht owners and others suffered considerable financial loss here this year through the necessity of repainting their craft and a concerted effort is to be launched to put a stop to pollution of local waters, it was pointed out.

Bootleggers in Long Beach Get Court's Notice

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 23.—Present a problem to Justice Hawkins and he attempts to solve it with logic as well as law.

There has been an increase in the number of arrests for intoxication in Long Beach. The justice decided that to eliminate intoxication, he must first eliminate the bootleggers. To eliminate the bootleggers it is necessary to send them to jail, since fines permit them to continue operations.

Therefore, the edict delivered yesterday: "Straight jail sentences for bootleggers. No fines."

C. P. Packer was the first person to come under the new policy. He was found guilty of purveying strong drink and given 100 days.

SCIENCE BRINGS GOD'S MESSAGE

Deity Intended Man Should be Well, Says Speaker

Lecturer Tells of Wonderful Growth of Church

Efficacy Proved by Founder, She Declares

Miss Lucia C. Coulson, C. S., member of the board of lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, delivered the last of a series of lectures on Christian Science Monday evening at Ninth Church of Christ, Scientist, Los Angeles.

The lecturer spoke in part as follows:

"Christian Science has come to bring a message of good-will to men. It has come to show us that God's will is good, that His will for all mankind is always health, and always happiness. Christ Jesus, of whom it was said, 'Lo, I come . . . to do Thy will, O God,' proceedeth to do that will by healing the sick and the sinner, feeding the multitudes, and even raising the dead. It may be said of Christian Science also that it is showing forth this good-will of God in the same manner. It has come to say to a world that is torn with strike, bowed down with cares, sick at heart with loss and poverty: 'These things are not the will of God;' God's will for man is 'dominion . . . over all the earth.' This dominion was God's gift to the man He created. Christian Science has come to teach us how to realise it, and Christian Scientists are beginning to learn how to exercise it.

DID WILL OF GOD

"Christ Jesus came to do the will of God, who said of himself, 'He that hath seen me hath seen the Father,' overcame calamity of every description and went about doing good.

"Thus, evidently, the Master knew it was God's will that men should be well and happy, that they should have enough, and to spare, that conditions should be harmonious, that destructive storms should cease, and finally that men should live.

"To illustrate, we shall all agree that the multiplication table is an omnipresent idea. If you found yourself on a desert island, the multiplication table would be there. You carry it with you wherever you go, it is comprised in your consciousness, and so you know you can never lose it or be separated from it. But to the savage or the uneducated, the multiplication table would not be present or available. Their ignorance of it would make it seem absent and useless to them. Now what is the result of ignorance of the multiplication table? Confusion, stagnation. Civilization could not exist without it. The savage cannot compete with the white man, on account of his ignorance of it. Then, if such a condition of ignorance afflicts and penalizes us to such an extent, what, we may well ask, is the result of ignorance of God Himself? We stand on our islands of limitation and disease, and say: Good is absent and helpless to relieve us; love is nowhere to be seen and we do not know how to apply it. What then do we need? Simply knowledge, education, and, above all, the discovery of those laws that govern health and harmony. This discovery has been made.

SAVED BY BIBLE

"Just over fifty years ago a New England woman on what was supposed to be her deathbed asked for her Bible, read in it, and as she did so saw what no one else had seen since the days of the Master, and was raised instantly from death to life. Many would have remained satisfied with the joy of that experience. Not so the discoverer of Christian Science. It was not enough for her to be healed herself, she must learn the law that governed such an experience, in order that she might share its blessings with others. Impelled by this intense and selfless desire, she searched the scriptures until, as she writes in Science and Health: 'In the year 1866, I discovered the Christ Science or divine laws of life, truth and love and named my discovery Christian Science.'

"She went out seeking people to heal. She healed the sick and the suffering on every side. She gathered together a handful of followers whom she taught to demonstrate for themselves this principle of healing; with no one to help her, no influential friends to support her, with the jeers of an incredulous world to greet her, running contrary to the whole current of human belief and established convictions, this one lone woman, undaunted and undismayed, founded a movement which numbers its followers by millions, a church with adherents all over the world, a religion that has increased more rapidly than any other in history, and all this within the space of less than half a century. There is just one explanation: 'One with God is a majority.'"

Desert Bandit Stages Daylight Office Robbery

A bandit entered the office of the Pacific Steel Products Company at 211 West Sixteenth street shortly after noon yesterday, and held up and robbed K. D. Church, manager, of $11.

Police believe that the bandit had information that a large amount of money would be in the office at that time. He apparently arrived earlier in the morning, from a desert town, according to detectives, as he was described as wearing dust-covered blue trousers, black slouch hat, was six feet tall, and had about a week-old beard.

Mr. Church was alone in the office at the time of the robbery. His back was turned toward the door, according to the police report, when the bandit walked in, leaned over a low counter and, pointing an automatic pistol at him, ordered him to "hand over the money."

There was but $11 in the cash drawer. Pocketing this, the bandit backed slowly through the street door, then turned quickly and ran west on Sixteenth street.
